9. In December 2008 (well over 30 days), Newsome first verbally notified W&L through its representative Andrea Griffith ("Griffith"), Human Resource Manager/Representative, of her request for leave to have a medical procedure performed. Newsome advised Griffith of this to determine how W&L handles such medical requests and was advised that she would be okay under the FMLA. Moreover, that W&L would provide a percentage of her salary during the time taken. Newsome advised Griffith of the approximate date (January 29, 2009) on which she was to begin the procedure. Griffith advised Newsome she could use either her sick time, vacation time and/or both, but would wait to see how much time would be required. Thus supporting W&L's knowledge of Newsome being availed FMLA protection.

> When requesting unpaid leave, employee need not mention Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) and can be completely ignorant of benefits conferred by Act, and notice is sufficient if employee provides employer with enough information to put employer on notice that FMLA-qualifying leave is needed. Stoops v. One Call Communications, Inc., 141 F.3d 309 (7th Cir.).

10. On January 8, 2009, Newsome submitted her Request for Medical Leave on January 29, 2009. (See attached hereto as EXHIBIT "A" and incorporated herein by reference as if set forth in full). Newsome's Request for this leave was approved by the attorneys (Sharon S. Parsley and Thomas J. Breed) she assisted and then submitted to Griffith for handling. Newsome following the procedures of W&L to obtain this leave.

11. On January 9, 2009, Newsome was taken by surprise when Griffith approached her and asked see her. Newsome followed Griffith to her office where C. J. Schmidt was awaiting their arrival. During this meeting Newsome was advised that her employment with W&L is being terminated in that her position was being eliminated. Newsome was advised that she would be compensated for that week and given two additional weeks of pay. Newsome was advised that her medical insurance would lapse at the end of January 2009 (approximately two days after beginning of the medical process Newsome advised Griffith of in December 2008) and that any additional medical coverage could be maintained through COBRA if she desired. Thus supporting W&L's termination of Newsome was illegally motivated and to deprive her protection under the FMLA; moreover to deprive her benefits afforded to other employees similarly situated.

> Employer may not use reduction-in-force (RIF), reorganization, or improved-efficiency rationale as pretext to mask actual discrimination or *retaliation for employee's exercise of FMLA rights; the mere incantation of the mantra of "efficiency" is not a talisman insulating an employer from liability for invidious discrimination. Hodgens v. General Dynamics Corp., 144 F.3d 151 (1998). Moreover, Hodgens goes on to find "an employer may not use its RIF/reorganization/improved-efficiency rationale as a pretext to mask actual discrimination or retaliation; the mere incantation of the mantra of "efficiency" is not a talisman insulating an employer from liability for invidious discrimination. See McDonnell Douglas, 411 U.S. at 804, 93 S.Ct. 1817 (employer may not use an ostensibly legitimate reason for an adverse action as a pretext for discrimination that is prohibited by statute); 29 U.S.C. § 2615(a); 29 C.F.R. § 825.220; cf. INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 944, 103 S.Ct. 2764, 77 L.Ed.2d 317 (1983): "Convenience and efficiency are not the primary objectives-or the hallmarks-of democratic government." Nor are they the objectives of public policy underlying statutes like the FMLA or the ADA."

Ohio law is clear that an employer may not retaliate against an employee who exercises rights under the FMLA:

> Campbell v. Washington County Public Library, 241 Fed.Appx. 271 (C.A.6.Ohio,2007) - County public library employee established prima facie case that her discharge was discriminatory in violation of FMLA; employee faced adverse employment action shortly after taking FMLA leave and filing a complaint to Department of Labor, and there was evidence that library director was upset about employee's complaint. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 2 et seq., 29 U.S.C.A. § 2601 et seq.
> Nocella v. Basement Experts of America, 499 F.Supp.2d 935 (N.D.Ohio.W.Div.,2007) - There was sufficient evidence to establish a prima facie case of retaliation under the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) in connection with the termination of an employee approximately one week after she returned from her leave; the time lapse from the beginning of her leave until the elimination of her position was nine weeks at most, only about five weeks elapsed between the elimination of her position and her permanent firing, and there were attempts to keep her from returning to work. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 105(a)(2), (b), 29 U.S.C.A. § 2615(a)(2), (b).
> Chester v. Quadco Rehabilitation Center, 484 F.Supp.2d 735 (N.D.Ohio.W.Div.,2007) - There was sufficient temporal > proximity between employee's FMLA leave request and his termination to establish the causal connection needed for prima facie case of retaliation under FMLA, where employee was terminated less than one month after he made his FMLA request. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 105(a)(2), 29 U.S.C.A. § 2615(a)(2).

12. W&L, through its duly authorized agents and employees, who acted on behalf of W&L within the scope of their employment, intentionally discriminated against Newsome based on her request for medical leave and may also be based on her race; and/or for her insistence on the exercise of rights secured/protected under the FMLA and/or her engagement in other protected rights made known to W&L during the course of Newsome's employment.

13. As a direct and proximate result of the intentional discriminatory acts and practices of W&L, its agents and employees, including the taking away of Newsome's duties as Estate Planning Coordinator to give to other employees (white) to provide them with job security,[2] and terminating Newsome's employment AFTER she requested medical leave, she has suffered and continues to suffer injury, including past and future loss of income and other employment benefits, severe emotional pain and suffering, mental anguish, humiliation, loss of enjoyment of life, costs associated with obtaining reemployment, embarrassment, damage to her reputation, and other past and future pecuniary losses.

14. W&L acts described above and/or in this instant Complaint were intentional, willful, and performed with malice or reckless indifference to Newsome's federally protected rights, within the meaning of the FMLA (29 USC § 2654, 29 CFR 825.401) and/or the applicable statutes/laws governing such matters.

15. The termination of Newsome's employment by W&L constituted a wrongful discharge and violated public policy of the State of Ohio, as articulated in the Ohio Human Rights Act.

16. As a direct and proximate result of the acts and practices of W&L, its agents and employees, in the wrongful discharge of Newsome from employment, Newsome has suffered and continues to suffer injury/harm, including loss of employment, past and future loss of income and other employment benefits, severe emotional pain and suffering, mental anguish, humiliation, loss of enjoyment of life, costs associated with obtaining reemployment, embarrassment, damage to her reputation and other past and future pecuniary losses.

[2] See EXHIBIT "B" Wood & Lamping, LLP The Employer's Guide to Employment Law in Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana at p. 25 – Reduction in Force: Sometimes it becomes necessary for a company to reduce its work force to cope with economic conditions. Care should be taken to be sure that the determination of which employees are to be laid off is done in a nondiscriminatory way. Appropriate factors to consider include the need for a particular job function, seniority, and objectively determined by job performance. . . . Final Paycheck and Paperwork: Pay, including any benefits and unused vacation, should be delivered at the termination meeting. This is not only good policy, frequently it's the law. . . . In addition, the employee should be given the termination paperwork while still on the premises, and sign a receipt form. If the employee refuses to sign, the fact should be noted on the paperwork in the employee's presence.

17. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE that W&L specializes in employment law; therefore, it knew and/or should have known that its acts rendered Newsome was discriminatory and unlawful/illegal. In fact, in its Wood & Lamping, LLP The Employer's Guide to Employment Law in Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana at p. 24 – Informing the Employee, it states: Obtain Legal Advice. Every situation is different; therefore employers should consult with their attorney before disciplining or discharging an employee. Wood & Lamping regularly consults with clients regarding problems with employees and/or the discharge of employees, advising them as to the best way to handle a particular situation in order to avoid potential litigation. (See EXHIBIT "B" attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as if set forth in full). Moreover, a reasonable mind may conclude W&L and/or its representative's taking of Newsome's Employee Handbook was clear and convincing knowledge they were aware civil wrongs were being committed. Furthermore, that such acts were done to shield/mask an illegal animus.

ADDITIONAL FACTS PERTINENT TO THIS COMPLAINT:

18. On January 9, 2009, W&L waited until the end of the day and had Griffith approach Newsome, taking Newsome by surprise,[3] and asked Newsome to come to her office where C.J. Schmidt (attorney and Managing Partner of W&L) was waiting both of them to return. It was at this time, that Newsome was advised that her employment with W&L was being terminated due to the need to eliminate her position. Newsome was taken by surprise with this news in that she was not aware or given notice of W&L's intent to do so. Newsome was advised that she would be receiving pay for that week as well as two weeks pay and that she would have medical coverage through the end of the month (January 2009); however, any other medical coverage she desired, would have to be obtained through COBRA which would kick in immediately and would have to be paid by her.

Newsome believe the actions by W&L and/or its representatives were willful, malicious and wanton and done to deprive Newsome rights secured/guaranteed under the FMLA, and/or the applicable statutes/laws governing said matters. Newsome believe such acts by W&L and/or its representatives are discriminatory and may be based on race as well as retaliatory for her complaining of violations and discriminatory treatment during her employment. In support thereof, Newsome states:

a) During Newsome's employment white employees and/or those similarly situated provided notice of medical procedures that they would have done and were allowed to proceed with such medical procedures without losing their jobs; moreover, some had to obtain

[3] See Wood & Lamping, LLP The Employer's Guide to Employment Law in Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana at p. 22 – Employee Termination: "A termination conversation should not occur suddenly or as a surprise." . . . Always treat employees equally and consistently under similar circumstances. You may create the appearance of unlawful discrimination if you allow some employees to engage in prohibited conduct and then claim good cause for firing others for the same reason. See EXHIBIT "B" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

medical procedures on a last-minute basis which did not afford them the opportunity to notify W&L prior to seeking such attention, however, they were not terminated and they were allowed to return to their employment with W&L. When such employees did not have time for sick leave and/or medical leave W&L took extra steps to accommodate them with the time and allowed them to return to employment. Therefore, Newsome believe her termination with W&L may have been a direct and proximate result to deprive Newsome rights secured/guaranteed under the FMLA. Furthermore, in retaliation of Newsome's participation in protected activities known to W&L and/or its representatives.

> Employer may not defend its interference with FMLA's substantive rights on the ground that it treats all employees equally poorly without discriminating; employer's subjective intent is not relevant, and the issue is simply whether the employer provided its employee the entitlements set forth in FMLA. Hodgens v. General Dynamics Corp., 144 F.3d 151 (1st Cir. 1998).

b) Newsome was officially, hired on with W&L on September 11, 2006, after working briefly as a contract worker. It was made known by certain attorneys at W&L that they were pleased with Newsome's work and wanted to hire her on for a position with them. Newsome was contacted by a representative at an employment agency and advised of W&L's request for the employment of her services which Newsome accepted. Newsome was hired on as an Estate Planning Coordinator. During the course of her employment and at the termination of her employment the duties of an Estate Planning Coordinator was needed. To assure that other white employees had a job and/or employment W&L took the bulk of the duties of the Estate Planning Coordinator from Newsome and gave them to white employees to perform. Newsome shared her disappointment with Griffith about this change and/or decision of W&L in that she enjoyed what she was doing and the people she worked with. Nevertheless, W&L and/or its representatives had made a decision that Newsome would lose these duties and they would be given to someone else. While Newsome lost the bulk of these duties upon which she was hired to white employee(s), she continued to work during her course of employment with at least one attorney at all times in the Estate Planning group – at the beginning and during her employment she was assigned Jan M. Frankel (Partner) and during her employment W&L removed Frankel and provided her with Thomas J. Breed (Partner and Department Head of the Estate Planning Group). Newsome was working with Breed at the time of her termination. His job requests requiring the duties Newsome performed as the Estate Planning Coordinator that were taken away from Newsome.

It is important to note whenever such changes were made, Newsome was advised it was because of her work ethics, ability to perform the duties being assigned and W&L needing to keep attorneys assigned to her happy, etc – thus, providing the confidence W&L and/or its representatives had in Newsome's ability to perform her duties and the tasks assigned her.

c) IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that upon Newsome's hiring it was brought to her attention that a Paralegal (contractor and white) was upset at Newsome being hired in that the Paralegal had been there before Newsome and wanted to be hired on as well. It was also brought to Newsome's attention that this Paralegal (married) was having a sexual relationship and/or affair with one of the attorneys (Brian P. Gillan – of counsel and white) which may have been exposed by the Paralegal's husband. The Paralegal was let go and of course Gillan denied having any such relationship with the Paralegal although there was evidence on the W&L's computer to this relationship, in that both spent time using W&L's e-mail to correspond with each other. Gillan specializes in employment law; therefore, he knew and/or should have known of the liability such acts would cost W&L. Nevertheless, he was allowed to remain in the employment of W&L with W&L knowledge of such conduct.

d) IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that during Newsome's employment, one of the first attorneys, Elizabeth Horwitz ("Horwitz"), assigned to Newsome was allowed by W&L to assist Newsome on a Landlord and Tenant matter she was involved in. From the feedback provided from Horwitz and information she would relate back to Newsome, Newsome had concerns that Horwitz in corresponding with the Landlord's attorney was attempting to get Newsome to give up her apartment in which Newsome wanted to keep and advised of her entitlement to live where she desired under the Fair Housing Act. Disappointed that Newsome would not give up her apartment and/or agree to leave – waive rights afforded her under the Fair Housing Act, Horwitz did not want to work with Newsome anymore and made it known to W&L. While Horwitz advised Newsome she had nothing to do with the change that had occurred, Horwitz indeed did. W&L e-mails will evidence such. Moreover, notes surrounding Horwitz request may be found in Griffith's notes used in preparation of performance reviews.

e) IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that upon Horwitz being removed from Newsome's desk, W&L decided to assign Newsome to Brian P.

Gillan ("Gillan"). Gillan being with W&L for only a few months however, having been assigned approximately two or three Secretaries/Legal Assistants prior to Newsome (with Newsome being the third or fourth) because of his inability to work with them. While Gillan complimented Newsome on her work (evidenced in e-mail) for some reason, he decided to begin to subject her to harassment, hostile treatment and discriminatory practices to which she objected. Gillan doing so via e-mail as well as verbal confrontations, over Newsome's objection. Although Gillan was advised by Griffith to cease such behavior and correspondence via e-mail; Gillan continued to do so. Such unlawful/illegal actions by Gillan had become more hostile, brutal, unrelenting and unbearing that Newsome became emotionally affected by such and was witnessed by Griffith who called Newsome into her office to discuss the matter. In that Newsome had put in for Vacation Leave, Griffith advised Newsome to take her vacation and W&L would handle it in her absence and let her know when she returned. When Newsome returned from vacation, W&L had not done anything and advised Newsome that Gillan wanted to continue to work with her. Newsome voiced her objections and advised that she could not understand in that Gillan made it clear it was not working out (evidenced in e-mail). Nevertheless, W&L required Newsome to continue to work with Gillan; however, did not require white employees assigned him prior to Newsome's employment to continue under such conditions. Newsome again complained and advised that she would take the matter to the appropriate authorities as well as advise William Ellis (attorney/Partner at W&L) of what was going on. Ellis being a litigation attorney and advising Newsome during her employment that if there were any problems that she could come talk to him. Only after notifying of doing this, was Gillan pulled. Leaving Newsome to believe that W&L's refusal to remove Gillan, left the appearance and/or impression that certain ones at W&L may have agreed with Gillan and was behind his acts in that they knew how it was affecting Newsome (emotionally and physically). Moreover, that certain ones at W&L allowed Gillan to proceed in such a manner they knew were clearly in violation of Title VII; however, allowed him to proceed. An attorney who was known to be engaging in such acts that may present a liability to W&L; however, was allowed to continue in such a manner. Again, an attorney who specializes in employment law; therefore, a reasonable mind may conclude he was aware of his conduct and the liability thereof. Moreover, W&L knew as well and supported such behavior and conduct of Gillan – as evidenced in its retaining his employment.

f) IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that certain Senior Partners made it known as to their concerns regarding Brian Gillan; however, Gillan was allowed to remain on with W&L. Gillan being employed at the time of Newsome's termination. Concerns being made known of Gillan's employment in that he does not bring in a great deal of business to the practice; moreover, during the time Newsome worked with him, the majority of his time was being billed to W&L. Not only that, during his employment, he received increases in the hourly rate he was charging for his services. No it appears objections over Gillan's behavior and employment came into question; however, as with Newsome's concerns, must have been ignored. Resulting in attorneys with a great amount of longevity and seniority leaving W&L. Some of these attorneys who questioned the employment and actions of Gillan.

A reasonable mind may conclude given the facts and evidence any argument that W&L may attempt to assert for the elimination of Newsome's position is pretext to shield/mask an illegal animus. Moreover, that the keeping of an attorney who an investigation may yield repeatedly violated the laws under Title VII, is W&L condoning of such unlawful/illegal discriminatory practices. Therefore, any assertion that reduction in eliminating Newsome's position is merely pretext and an investigation into this matter may yield evidence to support that W&L provided Gillan as well as other employees with additional salary increases and promotions. Thus, supporting that any proffered reason by W&L is pretext to mask/shield an illegal animus – Newsome's complaining of employment violations and W&L's knowledge of Newsome's participation in protected activities.

g) IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that during Newsome's employment W&L terminated another attorney (Peter K. Newman). From Newsome's understanding, Newman was painted as an attorney with behavior that was hostile, aggressive, harassing, etc.; however, W&L terminated his employment. Moreover, after the incident gave his assistant, Kathy Ritchie ("Ritchie") some time off after the ordeal. Nevertheless, W&L allowed Gillan to continue on knowing his history and reputation; moreover, liability to W&L.

h) IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that should W&L assert any such claim as to the need for Newsome's termination may have been for financial purposes, she believes a reasonable mind may conclude that she was making way less in salary than Gillan. Moreover, over the advice of seasoned lawyers, W&L elected to keep on Gillan who hardly brought in any business and paid him a substantial salary compared to that of Newsome. Moreover, during his employment provided him with rapid increase(s) in hourly rates with knowledge that a great deal of his hours were being billed to W&L. W&L made a willful, deliberate and conscious decision to keep Gillan employed and to pay him an extremely high salary at the expense of Newsome and others who objected to his work ethics as well as employment violations.

i) IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that during Newsome's employment she was required to perform duties of that of paralegals; however, did not obtain the title or pay associated with it. However, whites similarly situated that were performing such duties were either promoted to such a title and obtained additional pay to compensate them for the additional duties obtained while Newsome (African-American) just obtained additional duties and was required to remain at her annual salary and only obtained the annual salary increase.

j) IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, on October 9, 2008, Newsome was unlawfully/illegally evicted from my apartment (due to the ongoing landlord matter Horwitz was assigned to assist with). Such actions coming although there was a binding Injunction and Restraining Order issued by the Court and Newsome was required to pay rent into escrow which was current at the time of such actions. As a direct and proximate result, Newsome filed a Complaint of criminal charges with the Federal Bureau of Investigations ("FBI") – a matter that Newsome believes is still pending at the time of the filing of this instant charge. It is important to note that W&L was made aware of this situation as well as the fact that Newsome had filed a formal charge with the FBI. Said notification was made verbally and via e-mail. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that while W&L states in its Employee Handbook, that it will not discriminate against employees who engage in protected activities (lawsuits), that Newsome's termination of January 9, 2009, may have been illegally motivated as well for her exercise of such rights secured to her under the Civil Rights Act, United States Constitution and/or the applicable statutes/laws governing said matters. Moreover, W&L's representative's taking of Newsome's Employee Handbook prior to her termination may leave a reasonable mind to conclude the January 9, 2009 reasons provided for her termination was pretext to mask/shield an illegal animus. Moreover, to shield/mask the fact that their Employee Handbook clearly states it will not discriminate against employee who engages in protected activities (i.e filed lawsuit).

While discussing the October 9, 2009 incident with Thomas Breed (attorney Newsome worked with), he asked whether or not she needed representation. Newsome advised Breed that she had sought W&L's assistant and was assigned Elizabeth Horwitz; however, Horwitz developed an attitude because Newsome did not accept her advice and refused to waive rights secured under the Fair Housing Act. Newsome advised she was in no hurry and that she had filed a complaint with the appropriate agency to investigate the matter.

k) IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, Newsome kept a copy of the Employee Handbook in her desk. However, upon cleaning out her desk, Newsome noticed her Employee Handbook had been removed by a representative of W&L. Newsome believes the removal of the Employee Handbook was done with willful and malicious intent by W&L and/or its representatives to cover-up their employment violations. Moreover, supports W&L and/or its representatives having knowledge that they were acting in violation of FMLA, Title VII and/or any other applicable laws governing said matters. Furthermore, such acts may support ill motive and the actual/underlying reasons for Newsome's termination. W&L specializes in employment laws, so it knew and/or should have known that its actions were unlawful and/or illegal. Moreover, a reasonable mind may conclude that the taking Newsome's Employee Handbook from her desk may have been acts done by W&L to shield the fact they knew the Employee Handbook contained information pertaining to the handling of FMLA requests, termination, etc. that they knew and/or should have known they were violating on January 9, 2009, and they did not want Newsome to be able to use this information in any legal action she may bring. However, to their disappointment, Newsome had obtained a copy of the Employee Handbook in that it was brought to her attention that W&L's representatives were known to practice in such a manner. Thus making it difficult for the employee to bring legal action against them. A reasonable mind may conclude this is why W&L uses the surprise approach that they advise against in their Employer's Guide in their termination of employees.

19. The FMLA entitles the employee to take reasonable leave for medical reasons – 29 U.S.C. § 2601(b)(1) - and contains two distinct provisions and entitlements in its anti-discrimination clause – 29 U.S.C. § 2612, 2615 (Hodgens v. General Dynamics Corp., 144 F.3d 151, 159 (1st Cir. 1998)

20. The FMLA allows for Intermittent leave to: (a) attend appointments with a healthcare provider for necessary treatment of a serious health condition (29 USC § 2612(6), a claim can be asserted (1) the employer interfered with, restrained, or denied the exercise of or the attempt to exercise, any right provided under the FMLA, or (2) that the employer discharged or discriminated against the former employee for utilizing or availing himself/herself to the rights under FMLA. (Williams v. Rubicon, Inc., 754 So. 2d 1081)

Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) contemplates intermittent leave. Williams v. Shenango, Inc., 986 F.Supp. 309.

Newsome believes the evidence contained in this instant Complaint as well as an investigation into the said claims will support: (a) W&L and/or its representatives interfered with Newsome's exercising rights secured/guaranteed under the FMLA; and (b) her employment was terminated as a direct and proximate result of exercising said right and/or its knowledge of Newsome's participation in protected activities secured to her under the Civil Rights Act, United States Constitution and/or applicable statutes/laws governing such matters in which she engaged.

21. Newsome believes an investigation into the claims of this instant Complaing will yield PRIMA FACIE CASE under FMLA: (a) he/she availed himself of a protective right under the FMLA; (b) he/she was adversely affected by an employment decision; and (c) a causal connection existed between the employees protected activity and the employer's adverse employment action. (Hodgens, 144 F3d at 160, 161; Randlett v. Shalala, 118 F.3d 857, 862 (1st Cir.); Morgan, 108 F.3d at 1324; Hypes, 134 F.3d 726). Retaliation – Sherrod, 132 F.3d 1122(A); Long, 88 F.3d at 3057. Adverse Affect – Chafflin, 179 F3d at 319; King, 166 F3d at 891; Bocalbos, 162 F3d at 383; Hodgens, 144 F3d at 161. The FMLA clearly prohibits retaliation against an employee who exercises rights under the Act.

Newsome believes that in investigation into the handling of this instant Charge will support: (a) she availed herself of a protective right under the FMLA. Moreover, rights secured under the United States Constitution, Civil Rights Act and any/all applicable statutes/laws governing said matters. (b) she was adversely affected by an employment decision by W&L and/or its representatives in terminating her employment as a direct and proximate result of engaging in protected activities; and (c) a causal connection exist between the Newsome's protected rights and W&L's and/or its representatives adverse employment action – moreover, W&L attempted to cover up such actions by taking information/documentation (i.e. Employee Manual) they felt Newsome may be able to use and/or would reveal their procedures and the violations rendered Newsome in their handling of termination as well as matters which occurred during her employment.

22. There are three (3) factors to determine causal link in prima facie case: (a) Plaintiff's past disciplinary record; (b) whether the employer followed its typical policy procedures in terminating the employee; and (c) temporal relationship between the employee's conduct and discharge. (Nowlin v. RTC, 33 F3d 498, 507-08 (5th Cir. 1994); Jenkins v. Orkin Exterminating Company, 646 F.Supp. 1274, 1277). The timing of the adverse employment action can be significant, although not a necessarily determinate factor. (Mayberry v. Vought Aircraft Company, 55 F3d at 1086, 1092 (5th Cir. 1995); Hodgens, 144 F3d 168, 170; Grizzle, 14 F.3d at 268).

Newsome believes that an investigation may yield there was a causal link with her engagement in protected activities and her termination; moreover, (a) Newsome had no past disciplinary record with W&L.

That Newsome complained of concerns of employment violations to W&L, and that Plaintiff would talk with Griffith regarding concerns and/or issues that arose that affected her and/or her ability to perform her duties; (b) that W&L did not follow its typical policy procedures and prior to terminating Newsome, knew that it was not in compliance with its policies and procedures and was in violation of the laws; therefore, in an effort to shield/mask such unlawful/illegal acts it removed the Employee Handbook Newsome kept at her desk in efforts of making it difficult to show such violations; and (c) that there is a connection with Newsome's engagement in protected activities and her termination – i.e. Newsome followed company policy and provided notification of the medical procedure and leave which was authorized by her attorneys (a method used for prior leave requests) and as direct result of such request, Newsome's employment was terminated. Moreover, an investigation may yield W&L's knowledge of Newsome's participation in protected activities in which it states in its Employee Handbook they would not discriminate based upon such information.

The Seventh Circuit Court of appeals finding in King v. Preferred Technical Group, 166 F.3d 887 (C.A.7.Ind.,1999) - Causal link between employee's protected activity and employer's adverse employment action, required for prima facie case of retaliatory discharge under FMLA, may be established by reference to temporal proximity between employee's taking of protected leave and employee's termination. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 105(a)(1, 2), 29 U.S.C.A. § 2615(a)(1, 2).

23. Newsome believes that in an investigation into this Complaint will yield she has proven PRIMA FACIE CASE under the FMLA: (a) that she/he is an eligible employee under the FMLA; (b) that Defendant is an employer as defined in FMLA; (c) that he/she was entitled to leave under the FMLA; (d) that he/she gave notice to the Defendant of her intention to take leave; and (e) he/she was denied benefits to which he/she was entitled under FMLA. (Santos v. Knitgoods Workers' Union, Local 155 (No. 99 Civ. 1499, 1999 WL 397500 at *3); Mayo v. Columbia University (no. 01 Civ. 2002, 2003 WL 1824628, *8); Parker v. Hanhemann University Hospital, 234 F.Supp.2d 478, 489)). Negative factor – Darby v. Bratch, 287 F3d 673, 679 (8th Cir. 2002)

Newsome was an eligible employee under the FMLA. W&L is an employer as defined in FMLA and governed by the provisions of same. Newsome was entitled to leave under the FMLA and that W&L had afforded other employees similarly situated protection under the FMLA. Newsome provided W&L more than 30 days (December 2008) notice as well as later followed up with the written Medial Leave request required by W&L on January 8, 2009 for her leave on January 29, 2009 – said notice was in compliance with W&L's policies and procedures. However, W&L and/or its representatives denied Newsome benefits to which she was entitled to under the FMLA and such benefits which it afforded to others similarly situated and/or are white.

24. Newsome believes that an investigation into the claims of this Complaint will support W&L and/or its representatives retaliated against her. In support thereof RETALIATION PRIMA FACIE: (a) Employee was protected under the FMLA; (b) Employee suffered an adverse employment decision; and (3a) he/she was treated less favorably than an employee who had not requested leave under the FMLA; or (3b) the adverse decision was made because of the employee's request for leave. (Bocalbos v. Nat'l Western Life Insurance Company, 162 F3d 379, 383 (5th Cir. 1998).

Newsome was protected under the FMLA. Newsome suffered an adverse employment decision wherein her employment with W&L was terminated. Newsome was treated less favorably than an employee who had not requested leave under the FMLA – moreover, was denied FMLA protection as that afforded to whites and/or those similarly situated that W&L granted to others and has allowed special provisions to aid whites and/or those similarly situated to seek medical attention requested; however, when Newsome approached them, her employment was terminated and she was advised that if she wanted to continue to have medical coverage, she would be required to carry her own under COBRA. Newsome believes the adverse decision by W&L to terminate her was due to her request for medical leave as well as its knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities secured to her under the Civil Rights Act, United States Constitution and/or applicable statutes/laws.

IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE approximately a week prior to Newsome submitting her medical leave request, another white employee (Brian Knaur) had a medical emergency arise regarding his spouse in which it required Knaur to be absent from W&L – such request may have come with Knaur providing short notice due to an emergency that may have occurred; however, Newsome is not aware of this employee being terminated and at the time of her termination, and believe this employee was still employed. Furthermore, such short notices are also covered under the FMLA; however, Newsome was not afforded this right as that extended to white employees and/or those similarly situated.

Employee's telephone call to employer informing employer that she had been hospitalized and that she would be unable to return to work for some time due to her medical condition was sufficient notice under FMLA caselaw and regulations that employee was in the "serious health condition" category of employees eligible for FMLA leave. Viereck v. City of Gloucester City, 961 F.Supp. 703 (1997).

ADDITIONAL STATUTES/LAWS GOVERNING SAID MATTERS:

CODE OF FEDERAL REGULATIONS[4]
(See EXHIBIT "C" attached hereto and incorporated by reference)

Code: 29 CFR Title / Description Excerpts

Part 825.200: Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.200 How much leave may an employee take?

(a) An eligible employee's FMLA leave entitlement is limited to a total of 12 workweeks of leave during any 12-month period for any one, or more, of the following reasons: . . .

(4) Because of a serious health condition that makes the employee unable to perform one or more of the essential functions of his or her job.

Part 825.203: Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.203 Does FMLA leave have to be taken all at once, or can it be taken in parts?

(a) FMLA leave may be taken ``intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule'' under certain circumstances. Intermittent leave is FMLA leave taken in separate blocks of time due to a single qualifying reason.. . .

(c) Leave may be taken intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule when medically necessary for planned and/or unanticipated medical treatment of a related serious health condition by or under the supervision of a health care provider, or for recovery from treatment or recovery from a serious health condition. . . .

(1) Intermittent leave may be taken for a serious health condition which requires treatment by a health care provider periodically, rather than for one continuous period of time, and may include leave of periods from an hour or more to several weeks. Examples of intermittent leave would include leave taken on an occasional basis for medical appointments, or leave taken several days at a time spread over a period of six months,. . .An example of an employee taking leave on a reduced leave schedule is an employee who is recovering from a serious health condition and is not strong enough to work a full-time schedule...

(d) There is no limit on the size of an increment of leave when an employee takes intermittent leave or leave on a reduced leave schedule. . . .For example, an employee might take two hours off for a medical appointment, or might work a reduced day of four hours over a period of several weeks while recuperating from an illness. An employee may not be required to take more FMLA leave than necessary to address the circumstance that precipitated the need for the leave,. . .

Part 825.207: Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.207 Is FMLA leave paid or unpaid?

(a) Generally, FMLA leave is unpaid. However, under the circumstances described in this section, FMLA permits an eligible employee to choose to substitute paid leave for FMLA leave. If an employee does not choose to substitute accrued paid leave, the employer may require the employee to substitute accrued paid leave for FMLA leave.. . .

(c) Substitution of paid accrued vacation, personal, or medical/sick leave may be made for any (otherwise) unpaid FMLA leave needed to care for . . . the employee's own serious health condition.

(e) Paid vacation or personal leave, including leave earned or accrued under plans allowing ``paid time off,'' may be substituted, at either the employee's or the employer's option, for any qualified FMLA leave.. . . An employee using accrued paid leave, especially vacation or personal leave, may in some cases not spontaneously explain the reasons or their plans for using their accrued leave.

Part 825.208: Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.208 Under what circumstances may an employer designate leave, paid or unpaid, as FMLA leave and, as a result, count it against the employee's total FMLA leave entitlement?

(a) In all circumstances, it is the employer's responsibility to designate leave, paid or unpaid, as FMLA-qualifying, and to give notice of the designation to the employee as provided in this section.. . .

(1) An employee giving notice of the need for unpaid FMLA leave must explain the reasons for the needed leave so as to allow the employer to determine that the leave qualifies under the Act...

(2) As noted in Sec. 825.302(c), an employee giving notice of the need for unpaid FMLA leave does not need to expressly assert rights under the Act or even mention the FMLA to meet his or her obligation to provide notice, though the employee would need to state a qualifying reason for the needed leave. An employee requesting or notifying the employer of an intent to use accrued paid leave, even if for a purpose covered by FMLA, would not need to assert such right either. However, if an employee requesting to use paid leave for an FMLA-qualifying purpose does not explain the reason for the leave--consistent with the employer's established policy or practice--and the employer denies the employee's request, the employee will need to provide sufficient information to establish an FMLA-qualifying reason for the needed leave so that the employer is aware of the employee's entitlement (i.e., that the leave may not be denied) and, then, may designate that the paid leave be appropriately counted against (substituted for) the employee's 12-week entitlement. Similarly, an employee using accrued paid vacation leave who seeks an extension of unpaid leave for an FMLA-qualifying purpose will need to state the reason. If this is due to an event which occurred during the period of paid leave, the employer may count the leave used after the FMLA-qualifying event against the employee's 12-week entitlement.

(b)(1) Once the employer has acquired knowledge that the leave is being taken for an FMLA required reason, the employer must promptly (within two business days absent extenuating circumstances) notify the employee that the paid leave is designated and will be counted as FMLA leave. . .

(2) The employer's notice to the employee that the leave has been designated as FMLA leave may be orally or in writing. If the notice is oral, it shall be confirmed in writing, no later than the following payday (unless the payday is less than one week after the oral notice, in which case the notice must be no later than the subsequent payday). The written notice may be in any form, including a notation on the employee's pay stub.

Part 825.209: Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.209 Is an employee entitled to benefits while using FMLA leave?

(a) During any FMLA leave, an employer must maintain the employee's coverage under any group health plan (as defined in the Internal Revenue > Code of 1986 at 26 U.S.C. 5000(b)(1)) on the same conditions as coverage would have been provided if the employee had been continuously employed during the entire leave period.. . .

> (f) Except as required by the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986 (COBRA) and for ``key'' employees (as discussed below), an employer's obligation to maintain health benefits during leave (and to restore the employee to the same or equivalent employment) under FMLA ceases if and when the employment relationship would have terminated if the employee had not taken FMLA leave (e.g., if the employee's position is eliminated as part of a nondiscriminatory reduction in force and the employee would not have been transferred to another position)

IMPORTANT TO NOTE: During Newsome's meeting where she was advised of termination, Griffith advised that Newsome would have medical insurance coverage through the end of January (2009). Newsome's request for medical leave was for January 29, 2009. Griffith advised Newsome that if she was interested in continuing medical insurance coverage, she could do so under COBRA. Newsome is not aware of any other employee being terminated prior to the medical attention they advised Wood & Lamping they would be having and that such other employee was required to cover their medical expenses under COBRA. In Newsome's case, Wood & Lamping LLP terminated her employment and is terminating my medical insurance effective January 31, 2009, and thereafter, Newsome would be required to pay for any other medical expenses for the medical services she advised Griffith of in December 2008 directly out of pocket – extremely high premium under the COBRA option (Newsome would be requested to pay 100% of the premium cost) – to secure the medical attention Newsome sought and advised Wood & Lamping/Griffith of. Pursuant to the Wood & Lamping LLP Employer's Guide, it states:

> COBRA gives an employee covered by an employer's group health plan the right to stay covered when coverage is lost due to certain qualifying events, and the employee pays for 100% of the premium cost. COBRA coverage must be elected within 60 days after coverage would otherwise end or from the date the election form was sent, whichever is later. The employer is required to continue the same coverage available to similarly situated employees. The cost can be up to the entire cost of coverage, plus a small (2%) additional charge for administration , as decided by the employer. Employers must maintain records pertaining to compliance with COBRA.

(See EXHIBIT "B" at p. 26 of Wood & Lamping LLP's Employer's Guide attached hereto and incorporated by reference). Given such facts, Newsome believes a reasonable mind may conclude that Wood & Lamping LLP and/or its representatives are in violation of COBRA. Moreover, acts may be willful, malicious and wanton. Acts knowingly and deliberately done to deprive me of medical services under the FMLA. Moreover, that the taking of Newsome's Employee Handbook were acts by W&L to shield an illegal animus. However, to their disappointment, Newsome had obtained a copy of the binders handed out at the seminar hosted by an attorney (Julie R. Pugh) she assisted and Heather Walsh. Newsome being advised during her employment of the corrupt practices of W&L also proceeded to make a copy of the Employee Handbook that W&L's representatives removed from her desk.

Part 825.220: Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.220 How are employees protected who request leave or otherwise assert FMLA rights?

(a) The FMLA prohibits interference with an employee's rights under the law, and with legal proceedings or inquiries relating to an employee's rights. More specifically, the law contains the following employee protections:

(1) An employer is prohibited from interfering with, restraining, or denying the exercise of (or attempts to exercise) any rights provided by the Act.

(2) An employer is prohibited from discharging or in any other way discriminating against any person (whether or not an employee) for opposing or complaining about any unlawful practice under the Act.

(3) All persons (whether or not employers) are prohibited from discharging or in any other way discriminating against any person (whether or not an employee) because that person has—

> (i) Filed any charge, or has instituted (or caused to be instituted) any proceeding under or related to this Act;
> (ii) Given, or is about to give, any information in connection with an inquiry or proceeding relating to a right under this Act;
> (iii) Testified, or is about to testify, in any inquiry or proceeding relating to a right under this Act.. . .

(b) Any violations of the Act or of these regulations constitute interfering with, restraining, or denying the exercise of rights provided by the Act. ``Interfering with'' the exercise of an employee's rights would include, for example, not only refusing to authorize FMLA leave, but discouraging an employee from using such leave.. . .

(c) An employer is prohibited from discriminating against employees or prospective employees who have used FMLA leave. For example, if an employee on leave without pay would otherwise be entitled to full benefits (other than health benefits), the same benefits would be required to be provided to an employee on unpaid FMLA leave. By the same token, employers cannot use the taking of FMLA leave as a negative factor in employment actions, such as hiring, promotions or disciplinary actions; nor can FMLA leave be counted under ``no fault'' attendance policies.. . .

(e) Individuals, and not merely employees, are protected from retaliation for opposing (e.g., file a complaint about) any practice which is unlawful under the Act. They are similarly protected if they oppose any practice which they reasonably believe to be a violation of the Act or regulations.

Part 825.300: Subpart C_How do Employees Learn of Their FMLA Rights and Obligations, and What Can an Employer Require of an Employee?

Sec. 825.300 What posting requirements does the Act place on employers?

(a) Every employer covered by the FMLA is required to post and keep posted on its premises, in conspicuous places where employees are employed, whether or not it has any ``eligible'' employees, a notice explaining the Act's provisions and providing information concerning the procedures for filing complaints of violations of the Act with the Wage and Hour Division. The notice must be posted prominently where it can be readily seen by employees and applicants for employment. Employers may duplicate the text of the notice contained in Appendix C of this part, or copies of the required notice may be obtained from local offices of the Wage and Hour Division. The poster and the text must be large enough to be easily read and contain fully legible text.

(b) An employer that willfully violates the posting requirement may be assessed a civil money penalty by the Wage and Hour Division not to exceed $100 for each separate offense. Furthermore, an employer that fails to post the required notice cannot take any adverse action against an employee, including denying FMLA leave, for failing to furnish the employer with advance notice of a need to take FMLA leave.

Part 825.301: Subpart C_How do Employees Learn of Their FMLA Rights and Obligations, and What Can an Employer Require of an Employee?

Sec. 825.301 What other notices to employees are required of employers under the FMLA?

(a)(1) If an FMLA-covered employer has any eligible employees and has any written guidance to employees concerning employee benefits or leave rights, such as in an employee handbook, information concerning FMLA entitlements and employee obligations under the FMLA must be included in the handbook or other document. For example, if an employer provides an employee handbook to all employees that describes the employer's policies regarding leave, wages, attendance, and similar matters, the handbook must incorporate information on FMLA rights and responsibilities and the employer's policies regarding the FMLA. Informational publications describing the Act's provisions are available from local offices of the Wage and Hour Division and may be incorporated in such employer handbooks or written policies.. . .

(b)(1) The employer shall also provide the employee with written notice detailing the specific expectations and obligations of the employee and explaining any consequences of a failure to meet these obligations. The written notice must be provided to the employee in a language in which the employee is literate (see Sec. 825.300(c)). Such specific notice must include, as appropriate:

> (i) that the leave will be counted against the employee's annual FMLA leave entitlement (see Sec. 825.208);
> (ii) any requirements for the employee to furnish medical certification of a serious health condition and the consequences of failing to do so (see Sec. 825.305);
> (iii) the employee's right to substitute paid leave and whether the employer will require the substitution of paid leave, and the conditions related to any substitution;. . .

(d) Employers are also expected to responsively answer questions from employees concerning their rights and responsibilities under the FMLA.. . .

(f) If an employer fails to provide notice in accordance with the provisions of this section, the employer may not take action against an employee for failure to comply with any provision required to be set forth in the notice.

Part 825.302: Subpart C_How do Employees Learn of Their FMLA Rights and Obligations, and What Can an Employer Require of an Employee?

Sec. 825.302 What notice does an employee have to give an employer when the need for FMLA leave is foreseeable?

(a) An employee must provide the employer at least 30 days advance notice before FMLA leave is to begin if the need for the leave is foreseeable based . . . or planned medical treatment for a serious health condition of the employee. . . If 30 days notice is not practicable, such as because of a lack of knowledge of approximately when leave will be required to begin, a change in circumstances, or a medical emergency, notice must be given as soon as practicable.. .

(b) ``As soon as practicable'' means as soon as both possible and practical, taking into account all of the facts and circumstances in theindividual case. For foreseeable leave where it is not possible to give as much as 30 days notice, ``as soon as practicable'' ordinarily would mean at least verbal notification to the employer within one or two business days of when the need for leave becomes known to the employee.

(c) An employee shall provide at least verbal notice sufficient to make the employer aware that the employee needs FMLA-qualifying leave, and the anticipated timing and duration of the leave. The employee need not expressly assert rights under the FMLA or even mention the FMLA, but may only state that leave is needed . . .

(d) An employer may also require an employee to comply with the employer's usual and customary notice and procedural requirements for requesting leave. For example, an employer may require that written notice set forth the reasons for the requested leave, the anticipated duration of the leave, and the anticipated start of the leave. However, failure to follow such internal employer procedures will not permit an employer to disallow or delay an employee's taking FMLA leave if the employee gives timely verbal or other notice.

(e) When planning medical treatment, the employee must consult with the employer and make a reasonable effort to schedule the leave so as not to disrupt unduly the employer's operations, subject to the approval of the health care provider. Employees are ordinarily expected to consult with their employers prior to the scheduling of treatment in order to work out a treatment schedule which best suits the needs of both the employer and the employee.. .

(f) In the case of intermittent leave or leave on a reduced leave schedule which is medically necessary, an employee shall advise the employer, upon request, > of the reasons why the intermittent/reduced leave schedule is necessary and of the schedule for treatment, if applicable. The employee and employer shall attempt to work out a schedule which meets the employee's needs without unduly disrupting the employer's operations, subject to the approval of the health care provider.. .

IMPORANT TO NOTE: Newsome believes Wood & Lamping LLP and/or its representative was timely, properly and adequately placed on notice of my intent to have a medical procedure done which would require absence from employment. Looking in the Wood & Lamping LLP "The Employer's Guide to Employment Law in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana" that I obtained from the seminar that Julie Pugh and Heather Walsh conducted it states (boldface, underline, italics added for emphasis):

> If the condition for which leave is granted is foreseeable, employees must provide the employer with 30 days notice to be entitled to the protection of the FMLA.
> Upon return from leave granted under the FMLA, employees are entitled to reinstatement to the position of employment previously held, or to an equivalent position with equivalent benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment . . . Employer's may not interfere with any employee's attempt to exercise his/her rights under the FMLA. It is also illegal for employers to discriminate against or discharge an employee because he/she has attempted to exercise his/her rights. . .granted by the FMLA.

See EXHIBIT "B" at p. 32 of Wood & Lamping's Employer's Guide attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. Therefore a reasonable mind may conclude that W&L's and/or its representative's removal of Newsome's Employee Handbook was a willful and malicious act and pretext to shield its knowledge that it was about to commit legal wrongs against Newsome.

Part 825.400: Subpart D_What Enforcement Mechanisms Does FMLA Provide?

Sec. 825.400 What can employees do who believe that their rights under FMLA have been violated?

(a) The employee has the choice of:

(1) Filing, or having another person file on his or her behalf, complaint with the Secretary of Labor, or

(2) Filing a private lawsuit pursuant to section 107 of FMLA.

(b) If the employee files a private lawsuit, it must be filed within two years after the last action which the employee contends was in violation of the Act, or three years if the violation was willful.

(c) If an employer has violated one or more provisions of FMLA, and if justified by the facts of a particular case, an employee may receive one or more of the following: wages, employment benefits, or other compensation denied or lost to such employee by reason of the violation; or, where no such tangible loss has occurred, such as when FMLA leave was unlawfully denied, any actual monetary loss sustained by the employee as a direct result of the violation, such as the cost of providing care, up to a sum equal to 12 weeks of wages for the employee. In addition, the employee may be entitled to interest on such sum, calculated at the prevailing rate. An amount equalling the preceding sums may also be awarded as liquidated damages unless such amount is reduced by the court because the violation was in good faith and the employer had reasonable grounds for believing the employer had not violated the Act. When appropriate, the employee may also obtain appropriate equitable relief, such as employment, reinstatement and promotion. When the employer is found in violation, the employee may recover a reasonable attorney's fee, reasonable expert witness fees, and other costs of the action from the employer in addition to any judgment awarded by the court.

Part 825.401: Subpart D_What Enforcement Mechanisms Does FMLA Provide?

Sec. 825.401 Where may an employee file a complaint of FMLA violations with the Federal government?

(a) A complaint may be filed in person, by mail or by telephone, with the Wage and Hour Division, Employment Standards Administration, U.S. Department of Labor. A complaint may be filed at any local office of the Wage and Hour Division; the address and telephone number of local offices may be found in telephone directories.

(b) A complaint filed with the Secretary of Labor should be filed within a reasonable time of when the employee discovers that his or her FMLA rights have been violated. In no event may a complaint be filed more than two years after the action which is alleged to be a violation of FMLA occurred, or three years in the case of a willful violation.

(c) No particular form of complaint is required, except that a complaint must be reduced to writing and should include a full statement of the acts and/or omissions, with pertinent dates, which are believed to constitute the violation.

RELIEF SOUGHT

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED Newsome request the following relief:

a) Investigation into the allegations/claims addressed in this instant Complaint, the Secretary of Labor's findings, evidence and legal conclusions it relied upon to render its findings and/or conclusion;

b) That if violations are found, that the Secretary of Labor, bring the applicable actions of and against Wood & Lamping, LLP, its representatives and employees that engaged in such unlawful/illegal acts complained of herein;

c) Award Newsome damages against W&L in an amount equal to any wages, salary, employment benefits, and other compensation denied or lost to Newsome by reason of the violation of the statute;

d) Award Newsome interest in the amount of any wages, salary, employment benefits and other compensation denied or lost to Newsome by reason of the violation of the statute;

e) Award Newsome an additional amount as liquidated damages equal to the sum of the amount of any wages, salary, employment benefits, and other compensation denied or lost to Newsome and the interest on that amount;

f) Newsome believes her termination would evidence that Wood & Lamping, LLP does not want her in its employment. Moreover, that during her employment she was subjected to discriminatory and retaliatory treatment for exercising rights secured/guaranteed to her under the applicable statutes/laws of the State of Ohio and/or United States. Newsome does not believe given the facts evidence and legal conclusions set forth herein and that to be determined through an investigation, that a reasonable mind may conclude that it would be in her best interest (mentally or physically) to return to the employment of Wood & Lamping, LLP. Therefore, Newsome is to be awarded such equitable relief as may be appropriate; including salary of approximately three (3) years – in that Newsome believes an investigation into this matter will yield the acts of W&L and/or its representatives and employees was done with malicious intent; moreover, was done in that it knew and/or should have known the difficulty Newsome would face based upon information they have obtained on Newsome; moreover, its acts being to interfere with Newsome's exercise of protected rights guaranteed and/or secured under the United States Constitution, Civil Rights Act and/or any and all applicable statutes laws governing the protected activities in which Newsome has engaged and/or participated in. Newsome request that W&L be required to provide her with the appropriate benefits (insurance coverage) afforded to her during her employment and/or other employees for a period of three (3) years. Moreover, be required maintain any COBRA benefits for a period of three (3) years if it does not want to cover the Plaintiff under its group health coverage and paying any and all over insurance premium coverage to which Newsome became accustomed during her employment with W&L;

g) As a direct and proximate result of Wood & Lamping, LLP's unlawful/illegal actions rendered Newsome she has suffered and continues to suffer injury, including past and future loss of income and other employment benefits, severe emotional pain and suffering, mental anguish, humiliation, loss of enjoyment of life, costs associated with obtaining reemployment, embarrassment, damage to her reputation, and other past and future pecuniary losses. Therefore, Newsome seeks the appropriate relief afforded by laws for such injury/harm and to deter Wood & Lamping, LLP from continuing to practice in such violation of laws.

h) Award Newsome reasonable costs associated with the bringing of this Complaint;

i) Grant Newsome such other and further relief – injunction, etc. – which the Secretary of Labor may deem appropriate to correct the injury/harm sustained by Newsome.

Respectfully Submitted this 16th day of January, 2009.

EMPLOYEE TERMINATION

Ideally, the employee in question has had some feedback on job performance and disciplinary steps have been taken prior to the termination. A termination conversation should not occur suddenly or as a surprise.

In an at-will employment circumstance, all reasons for terminating an employee are lawful subject to certain exceptions. These exceptions are statutorily defined, and include (but are not limited to):

- Discrimination
- Retaliation
- Public Policy
- Employment Contracts
- Disability
- Pregnancy

However, well-documented and supportable reasons for termination will reduce the likelihood of litigation. These reasons may include:

- poor performance
- refusal to follow instructions
- excessive absenteeism, abuse of sick leave, habitual tardiness (caution: FMLA may apply)
- violation of company policies
- endangering health and safety of self or others
- dishonesty
- engaging in criminal activity
- possessing a weapon at work
- behaving violently at work
- drug or alcohol use at work
- gambling at work
- disclosing confidential information to others
- poor relationships with co-workers

Always treat employees equally and consistently under similar circumstances.

Always treat employees equally and consistently under similar circumstances. You may create the appearance of unlawful discrimination if you allow some employees to engage in prohibited conduct and then claim good cause for firing others for the same reason.

INFORMING THE EMPLOYEE

Informing the Employee of the Termination

Never say, "I know what you're going through," even if you do.

- Reserve a private neutral meeting room where the conversation will not be overseen or overheard by other employees;
- Have a manager or other authority figure handle the discharge in person with a witness present, preferably a human resources representative;
- Take notes;
- Go into the meeting understanding that the conversation will not be comfortable,
- Watch your tone of voice. Choose your words carefully, but make sure you convey a tone of cordiality and sympathy. Be compassionate but firm, honest but guarded. Never say, "I know what you're going through," even if you do.
- State the actual reason for termination;
- Treat the employee with respect;
- Seek the employee's feedback. Although it's important to keep the meeting short, encourage the employee to voice his feelings after the news has been delivered. If he doesn't answer immediately, count to 20 before moving on. The last thing you want is a reputation for being heartless. If recriminations result, however, take charge and cut him off; remember that you're terminating his employment, not engaging in a dialogue.
- Collect keys, files and any company property;
- Arrange for the employee to remove personal property;
- Take no unnecessary action to draw attention to the discharge proceedings; and,
- Always end the meeting on a positive note. Offer words of encouragement and confidence in the employee's future career. Stand and extend your hand to indicate the meeting has ended. And of course, thank the employee for his service. But don't be surprised or hurt if the employee declines to thank you for firing him.

Obtain Legal Advice

Every situation is different; therefore, employers should consult with their attorney before disciplining or discharging an employee. Wood & Lamping regularly consults with clients regarding problems with employees and/or the discharge of employees, advising them as to the best way to handle a particular situation in order to avoid potential future litigation.

REDUCTIONS IN FORCE

Sometimes it becomes necessary for a company to reduce its work force to cope with economic conditions. Care should be taken to be sure that the determination of which employees are to be laid off is done in a nondiscriminatory way. Appropriate factors to consider include the need for a particular job function, seniority, and objectively determined job performance. Once layoff candidates are identified, it is a good idea to review the list with counsel in order to spot any potential problems. Severance pay is not required, but if given, should be awarded on an equitable basis.

The ADEA has specific requirements in a Reduction in Force scenario to prevent disabled individuals from being adversely impacted by a Reduction in Force ("RIF"). Your legal counsel should be contacted to ensure adequate compliance with federal statutes.

If an entire facility or a substantial portion of the company's operations are being shut down, the federal Plant Closing Act (the "WARN" Act) may apply, which requires that employees and the public be given 60 days advance notice of the shutdown.

Final Paycheck and Paperwork

Pay, including any benefits and unused vacation, should be delivered at the termination meeting. This is not only good policy, frequently it's the law.

- Ohio – no special statute
- Indiana - Whenever any employer separates any employee from the payroll, the unpaid wages or compensation of such employee shall become due and payable at regular pay day for pay period in which separation occurred. IC 22-2-9-2.
- Kentucky - Employees who have been discharged shall not be paid any more than 14 days after termination, or any later than the next pay period, whichever event takes place last. KRS 337.055.

In addition, the employee should be given the termination paperwork while still on the premises, and sign a receipt form. If the employee refuses to sign, the fact should be noted on the paperwork in the employee's presence.

COBRA AND HIPAA

Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act ("COBRA")
COBRA gives an employee covered by an employer's group health plan the right to stay covered when coverage is lost due to certain qualifying events. This continuation of coverage lasts between 18 and 36 months, depending on the events, and the employee pays for 100% of the premium cost. COBRA coverage must be elected within 60 days after coverage would otherwise end or from the date the election form was sent, whichever is later. The employer is required to continue the same coverage available to similarly situated employees. The cost can be up to the entire cost of coverage, plus a small (2%) additional charge for administration, as decided by the employer. Employers must maintain records pertaining to compliance with COBRA. COBRA applies to most employer group health plans but not to all of them. For example, it does not apply to plans of employers with fewer than 20 employees or to church plans. Many plans of small employers, however, are subject to State laws similar to COBRA.

More information about COBRA can be obtained through the Department of Labor on the Internet at www.dol.gov/dol/topic/health-plans/cobra.htm.

State Codes with "mini COBRA" laws similar to the federal requirements:

- Ohio: The Ohio statute governing continued health insurance coverage requires that employees must be terminated from employment involuntarily, have had three months of prior continuous coverage, and be eligible for Unemployment Compensation. R.C § 3923.38,
- Indiana: If you were denied coverage, the law provides "Comprehensive Health Insurance" for State residents. IC 27-8-10.
- Kentucky: A participant in a plan with 2-19 employees can qualify for 18 months of state continuation coverage. KRS 304.17A-005.

The Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 ("HIPAA")
HIPAA is a federal law that regulates employers of two or more individuals, and health insurance companies. HIPAA was enacted to provide for, among other things, improved portability and continuity of health insurance coverage in the group and individual insurance markets, and group health plan coverage provided in connection with employment. Employers must maintain records pertaining to compliance with HIPAA.

Some of the most significant of HIPAA's provisions include those that:

- limit exclusions for preexisting medical conditions;
- prohibit discrimination in enrollment and premiums against employees and their dependents based on health status; and,
- guarantee availability of health insurance coverage for small employers and renewability of health insurance coverage in both the small and large group markets.

For more information about HIPAA refer to the Internet address at www.hhs.gov/ocr/hipaa.

FMLA

If the condition for which leave is granted is foreseeable, employees must provide the employer with 30 days notice to be entitled to the protections of the FMLA. Employers can require that any request for leave is supported by a certification from a health care provider. In addition, where the requested leave is for the care of a child, parent or spouse with a serious health condition and is foreseeable, the employee must make a reasonable effort to schedule treatment so as not to disrupt the employer's business.

The FMLA only requires employers to grant unpaid leave. However, during any period in which an eligible employee takes leave, employers must maintain coverage under any group health plan for the duration of the leave, and may not change the coverage or conditions thereof. In limited circumstances, the employer may be able to recover any premiums it paid under a group health plan if the employee does not return to work.

Upon return from leave granted under the FMLA, employees are entitled to reinstatement to the position of employment previously held, or to an equivalent position with equivalent benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment. However, the Act does provide an exception for certain highly compensated employees. Employers should seek the advice of counsel as to whether the exception applies in a particular situation.

Employees are entitled to any benefits which had accrued prior to the date upon which leave commenced, but are not entitled to the accrual of seniority or any other employment benefits during any period of leave.

Employers may not interfere with any employee's attempt to exercise his/her rights under the FMLA. It is also illegal for employers to discriminate against or discharge an employee because he/she has attempted to exercise his/her rights, or has filed or testified in any cause of action related to the rights granted by the FMLA.

Obtain Legal Advice

There are many aspects of the FMLA that could not be covered here. Employers should consult with their attorney regarding the specifics of any situation involving the FMLA. TITLE 29--LABOR

CHAPTER V--WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

PART 825_THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1993--Table of Contents

Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.200 How much leave may an employee take?

(a) An eligible employee's FMLA leave entitlement is limited to a total of 12 workweeks of leave during any 12-month period for any one, or more, of the following reasons:

(1) The birth of the employee's son or daughter, and to care for the newborn child;

(2) The placement with the employee of a son or daughter for adoption or foster care, and to care for the newly placed child;

(3) To care for the employee's spouse, son, daughter, or parent with a serious health condition; and,

(4) Because of a serious health condition that makes the employee unable to perform one or more of the essential functions of his or her job.

(b) An employer is permitted to choose any one of the following methods for determining the ``12-month period'' in which the 12 weeks of leave entitlement occurs:

(1) The calendar year;

(2) Any fixed 12-month ``leave year,'' such as a fiscal year, a year required by State law, or a year starting on an employee's ``anniversary'' date;

(3) The 12-month period measured forward from the date any employee's first FMLA leave begins; or,

(4) A ``rolling'' 12-month period measured backward from the date an employee uses any FMLA leave (except that such measure may not extend back before August 5, 1993).

(c) Under methods in paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(2) of this section an employee would be entitled to up to 12 weeks of FMLA leave at any time in the fixed 12-month period selected. An employee could, therefore, take 12 weeks of leave at the end of the year and 12 weeks at the beginning of the following year. Under the method in paragraph (b)(3) of this section, an employee would be entitled to 12 weeks of leave during the year beginning on the first date FMLA leave is taken; the next 12-month period would begin the first time FMLA leave is taken after completion of any previous 12-month period. Under the method in paragraph (b)(4) of this section, the ``rolling'' 12-month period, each time an employee takes FMLA leave the remaining leave entitlement would be any balance of the 12 weeks which has not been used during the immediately preceding 12 months. For example, if an employee has taken eight weeks of leave during the past 12 months, an additional four weeks of leave could be taken. If an employee used four weeks beginning February 1, 1994, four weeks beginning June 1, 1994, and four weeks beginning December 1, 1994, the employee would not be entitled to any additional leave until February 1, 1995. However, beginning on February 1, 1995, the employee would be entitled to four weeks of leave, on June 1 the employee would be entitled to an additional four weeks, etc.

(d)(1) Employers will be allowed to choose any one of the alternatives in paragraph (b) of this section provided the alternative chosen is applied consistently and uniformly to all employees. An employer wishing to change to another alternative is required to give at least 60 days notice to all employees, and the transition must take place in such a way that the employees retain the full benefit of 12 weeks of leave under whichever method affords the greatest benefit to the employee. Under no circumstances may a new method be implemented in order to avoid the Act's leave requirements.

(2) An exception to this required uniformity would apply in the case of a multi-State employer who has eligible employees in a State which has a family and medical leave statute. The State may require a single method of determining the period during which use of the leave entitlement is measured. This method may conflict with the method chosen by the employer to determine ``any 12 months'' for purposes of the Federal statute. The employer may comply with the State provision for all employees employed within that State, and uniformly use another method provided by this regulation for all other employees.

(e) If an employer fails to select one of the options in paragraph (b) of this section for measuring the 12-month period, the option that provides the most beneficial outcome for the employee will be used. The employer may subsequently select an option only by providing the 60-day notice to all employees of the option the employer intends to implement. During the running of the 60-day period any other employee who needs FMLA leave may use the option providing the most beneficial outcome to that employee. At the conclusion of the 60-day period the employer may implement the selected option.

(f) For purposes of determining the amount of leave used by an employee, the fact that a holiday may occur within the week taken as FMLA leave has no effect; the week is counted as a week of FMLA leave. However, if for some reason the employer's business activity has temporarily ceased and employees generally are not expected to report for work for one or more weeks (e.g., a school closing two weeks for the Christmas/New Year holiday or the summer vacation or an employer closing the plant for retooling or repairs), the days the employer's activities have ceased do not count against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement. Methods for determining an employee's 12-week leave entitlement are also described in Sec. 825.205.

CHAPTER V--WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

PART 825_THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1993--Table of Contents

Subpart C_How do Employees Learn of Their FMLA Rights and Obligations, and What Can an Employer Require of an Employee?

Sec. 825.300 What posting requirements does the Act place on employers?

(a) Every employer covered by the FMLA is required to post and keep posted on its premises, in conspicuous places where employees are employed, whether or not it has any ``eligible'' employees, a notice explaining the Act's provisions and providing information concerning the procedures for filing complaints of violations of the Act with the Wage and Hour Division. The notice must be posted prominently where it can be readily seen by employees and applicants for employment. Employers may duplicate the text of the notice contained in Appendix C of this part, or copies of the required notice may be obtained from local offices of the Wage and Hour Division. The poster and the text must be large enough to be easily read and contain fully legible text.

(b) An employer that willfully violates the posting requirement may be assessed a civil money penalty by the Wage and Hour Division not to exceed $100 for each separate offense. Furthermore, an employer that fails to post the required notice cannot take any adverse action against an employee, including denying FMLA leave, for failing to furnish the employer with advance notice of a need to take FMLA leave.

(c) Where an employer's workforce is comprised of a significant portion of workers who are not literate in English, the employer shall be responsible for providing the notice in a language in which the employees are literate.

TITLE 29--LABOR

CHAPTER V--WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

PART 825_THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1993--Table of Contents

Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.203 Does FMLA leave have to be taken all at once, or can it be taken in parts?

(a) FMLA leave may be taken ``intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule'' under certain circumstances. Intermittent leave is FMLA leave taken in separate blocks of time due to a single qualifying reason. A reduced leave schedule is a leave schedule that reduces an employee's usual number of working hours per workweek, or hours per workday. A reduced leave schedule is a change in the employee's schedule for a period of time, normally from full-time to part-time.

(b) When leave is taken after the birth or placement of a child for adoption or foster care, an employee may take leave intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule only if the employer agrees. Such a schedule reduction might occur, for example, where an employee, with the employer's agreement, works part-time after the birth of a child, or takes leave in several segments. The employer's agreement is not required, however, for leave during which the mother has a serious health condition in connection with the birth of her child or if the newborn child has a serious health condition.

(c) Leave may be taken intermittently or on a reduced leave schedule when medically necessary for planned and/or unanticipated medical treatment of a related serious health condition by or under the supervision of a health care provider, or for recovery from treatment or recovery from a serious health condition. It may also be taken to provide care or psychological comfort to an immediate family member with a serious health condition.

(1) Intermittent leave may be taken for a serious health condition which requires treatment by a health care provider periodically, rather than for one continuous period of time, and may include leave of periods from an hour or more to several weeks. Examples of intermittent leave would include leave taken on an occasional basis for medical appointments, or leave taken several days at a time spread over a period of six months, such as for chemotherapy. A pregnant employee may take leave intermittently for prenatal examinations or for her own condition, such as for periods of severe morning sickness. An example of an employee taking leave on a reduced leave schedule is an employee who is recovering from a serious health condition and is not strong enough to work a full-time schedule.

(2) Intermittent or reduced schedule leave may be taken for absences where the employee or family member is incapacitated or unable to perform the essential functions of the position because of a chronic serious health condition even if he or she does not receive treatment by a health care provider.

(d) There is no limit on the size of an increment of leave when an employee takes intermittent leave or leave on a reduced leave schedule. However, an employer may limit leave increments to the shortest period of time that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of leave, provided it is one hour or less. For example, an employee might take two hours off for a medical appointment, or might work a reduced day of four hours over a period of several weeks while recuperating from an illness. An employee may not be required to take more FMLA leave than necessary to address the circumstance that precipitated the need for the leave, except as provided in Sec. Sec. 825.601 and 825.602.

TITLE 29--LABOR

CHAPTER V--WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

PART 825_THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1993--Table of Contents

Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.207 Is FMLA leave paid or unpaid?

(a) Generally, FMLA leave is unpaid. However, under the circumstances described in this section, FMLA permits an eligible employee to choose to substitute paid leave for FMLA leave. If an employee does not choose to substitute accrued paid leave, the employer may require the employee to substitute accrued paid leave for FMLA leave.

(b) Where an employee has earned or accrued paid vacation, personal or family leave, that paid leave may be substituted for all or part of any (otherwise) unpaid FMLA leave relating to birth, placement of a child for adoption or foster care, or care for a spouse, child or parent who has a serious health condition. The term ``family leave'' as used in FMLA refers to paid leave provided by the employer covering the particular circumstances for which the employee seeks leave for either the birth of a child and to care for such child, placement of a child for adoption or foster care, or care for a spouse, child or parent with a serious health condition. For example, if the employer's leave plan allows use of family leave to care for a child but not for a parent, the employer is not required to allow accrued family leave to be substituted for FMLA leave used to care for a parent.

(c) Substitution of paid accrued vacation, personal, or medical/sick leave may be made for any (otherwise) unpaid FMLA leave needed to care for a family member or the employee's own serious health condition. Substitution of paid sick/medical leave may be elected to the extent the circumstances meet the employer's usual requirements for the use of sick/medical leave. An employer is not required to allow substitution of paid sick or medical leave for unpaid FMLA leave ``in any situation'' where the employer's uniform policy would not normally allow such paid leave. An employee, therefore, has a right to substitute paid medical/sick leave to care for a seriously ill family member only if the employer's leave plan allows paid leave to be used for that purpose. Similarly, an employee does not have a right to substitute paid medical/sick leave for a serious health condition which is not covered by the employer's leave plan.

(d)(1) Disability leave for the birth of a child would be considered FMLA leave for a serious health condition and counted in the 12 weeks of leave permitted under FMLA. Because the leave pursuant to a temporary disability benefit plan is not unpaid, the provision for substitution of paid leave is inapplicable. However, the employer may designate the leave as FMLA leave and count the leave as running concurrently for purposes of both the benefit plan and the FMLA leave entitlement. If the requirements to qualify for payments pursuant to the employer's temporary disability plan are more stringent than those of FMLA, the employee must meet the more stringent requirements of the plan, or may choose not to meet the requirements of the plan and instead receive no payments from the plan and use unpaid FMLA leave or substitute available accrued paid leave.

(2) The Act provides that a serious health condition may result from injury to the employee ``on or off'' the job. If the employer designates the leave as FMLA leave in accordance with Sec. 825.208, the employee's FMLA 12-week leave entitlement may run concurrently with a workers' compensation absence when the injury is one that meets the criteria for a serious health condition. As the workers' compensation absence is not unpaid leave, the provision for substitution of the employee's accrued paid leave is not applicable. However, if the health care provider treating the employee for the workers' compensation injury certifies the employee is able to return to a ``light duty job'' but is unable to return to the same or equivalent job, the employee may decline the employer's offer of a ``light duty job''. As a result the employee may lose workers' compensation payments, but is entitled to remain on unpaid FMLA leave until the 12-week entitlement is exhausted. As of the date workers' compensation benefits cease, the substitution provision becomes applicable and either the employee may elect or the employer may require the use of accrued paid leave. See also Sec. Sec. 825.210(f), 825.216(d), 825.220(d), 825.307(a)(1) and 825.702(d) (1) and (2) regarding the relationship between workers' compensation absences and FMLA leave.

(e) Paid vacation or personal leave, including leave earned or accrued under plans allowing ``paid time off,'' may be substituted, at either the employee's or the employer's option, for any qualified FMLA leave. No limitations may be placed by the employer on substitution of paid vacation or personal leave for these purposes.

(f) If neither the employee nor the employer elects to substitute paid leave for unpaid FMLA leave under the above conditions and circumstances, the employee will remain entitled to all the paid leave which is earned or accrued under the terms of the employer's plan.

(g) If an employee uses paid leave under circumstances which do not qualify as FMLA leave, the leave will not count against the 12 weeks of FMLA leave to which the employee is entitled. For example, paid sick leave used for a medical condition which is not a serious health condition does not count against the 12 weeks of FMLA leave entitlement.

(h) When an employee or employer elects to substitute paid leave (of any type) for unpaid FMLA leave under circumstances permitted by these regulations, and the employer's procedural requirements for taking that kind of leave are less stringent than the requirements of FMLA (e.g., notice or certification requirements), only the less stringent requirements may be imposed. An employee who complies with an employer's less stringent leave plan requirements in such cases may not have leave for an FMLA purpose delayed or denied on the grounds that the employee has not complied with stricter requirements of FMLA. However, where accrued paid vacation or personal leave is substituted for unpaid FMLA leave for a serious health condition, an employee may be required to comply with any less stringent medical certification requirements of the employer's sick leave program. See Sec. Sec. 825.302(g), 825.305(e) and 825.306(c).

(i) Section 7(o) of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) permits public employers under prescribed circumstances to substitute compensatory time off accrued at one and one-half hours for each overtime hour worked in lieu of paying cash to an employee when the employee works overtime hours as prescribed by the Act. There are limits to the amounts of hours of compensatory time an employee may accumulate depending upon whether the employee works in fire protection or law enforcement (480 hours) or elsewhere for a public agency (240 hours). Compensatory time off is not a form of accrued paid leave that an employer may require the employee to substitute for unpaid FMLA leave. The employee may request to use his/her balance of compensatory time for an FMLA reason. If the employer permits the accrual to be used in compliance with regulations, 29 CFR 553.25, the absence which is paid from the employee's accrued compensatory time ``account'' may not be counted against the employee's FMLA leave entitlement.

TITLE 29--LABOR

CHAPTER V--WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

PART 825_THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1993--Table of Contents

Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.208 Under what circumstances may an employer designate leave, paid or unpaid, as FMLA leave and, as a result, count it against the employee's total FMLA leave entitlement?

(a) In all circumstances, it is the employer's responsibility to designate leave, paid or unpaid, as FMLA-qualifying, and to give notice of the designation to the employee as provided in this section. In the case of intermittent leave or leave on a reduced schedule, only one such notice is required unless the circumstances regarding the leave have changed. The employer's designation decision must be based only on information received from the employee or the employee's spokesperson (e.g., if the employee is incapacitated, the employee's spouse, adult child, parent, doctor, etc., may provide notice to the employer of the need to take FMLA leave). In any circumstance where the employer does not have sufficient information about the reason for an employee's use of paid leave, the employer should inquire further of the employee or the spokesperson to ascertain whether the paid leave is potentially FMLA-qualifying.

(1) An employee giving notice of the need for unpaid FMLA leave must explain the reasons for the needed leave so as to allow the employer to determine that the leave qualifies under the Act. If the employee fails to explain the reasons, leave may be denied. In many cases, in explaining the reasons for a request to use paid leave, especially when the need for the leave was unexpected or unforeseen, an employee will provide sufficient information for the employer to designate the paid leave as FMLA leave. An employee using accrued paid leave, especially vacation or personal leave, may in some cases not spontaneously explain the reasons or their plans for using their accrued leave.

(2) As noted in Sec. 825.302(c), an employee giving notice of the need for unpaid FMLA leave does not need to expressly assert rights under the Act or even mention the FMLA to meet his or her obligation to provide notice, though the employee would need to state a qualifying reason for the needed leave. An employee requesting or notifying the employer of an intent to use accrued paid leave, even if for a purpose covered by FMLA, would not need to assert such right either. However, if an employee requesting to use paid leave for an FMLA-qualifying purpose does not explain the reason for the leave--consistent with the employer's established policy or practice--and the employer denies the employee's request, the employee will need to provide sufficient information to establish an FMLA-qualifying reason for the needed leave so that the employer is aware of the employee's entitlement (i.e., that the leave may not be denied) and, then, may designate that the paid leave be appropriately counted against (substituted for) the employee's 12-week entitlement. Similarly, an employee using accrued paid vacation leave who seeks an extension of unpaid leave for an FMLA-qualifying purpose will need to state the reason. If this is due to an event which occurred during the period of paid leave, the employer may count the leave used after the FMLA-qualifying event against the employee's 12-week entitlement.

(b)(1) Once the employer has acquired knowledge that the leave is being taken for an FMLA required reason, the employer must promptly (within two business days absent extenuating circumstances) notify the employee that the paid leave is designated and will be counted as FMLA leave. If there is a dispute between an employer and an employee as to whether paid leave qualifies as FMLA leave, it should be resolved through discussions between the employee and the employer. Such discussions and the decision must be documented.

(2) The employer's notice to the employee that the leave has been designated as FMLA leave may be orally or in writing. If the notice is oral, it shall be confirmed in writing, no later than the following payday (unless the payday is less than one week after the oral notice, in which case the notice must be no later than the subsequent payday). The written notice may be in any form, including a notation on the employee's pay stub.

(c) If the employer requires paid leave to be substituted for unpaid leave, or that paid leave taken under an existing leave plan be counted as FMLA leave, this decision must be made by the employer within two business days of the time the employee gives notice of the need for leave, or, where the employer does not initially have sufficient information to make a determination, when the employer determines that the leave qualifies as FMLA leave if this happens later. The employer's designation must be made before the leave starts, unless the employer does not have sufficient information as to the employee's reason for taking the leave until after the leave commenced. If the employer has the requisite knowledge to make a determination that the paid leave is for an FMLA reason at the time the employee either gives notice of the need for leave or commences leave and fails to designate the leave as FMLA leave (and so notify the employee in accordance with paragraph (b)), the employer may not designate leave as FMLA leave retroactively, and may designate only prospectively as of the date of notification to the employee of the designation. In such circumstances, the employee is subject to the full protections of the Act, but none of the absence preceding the notice to the employee of the designation may be counted against the employee's 12-week FMLA leave entitlement.

(d) If the employer learns that leave is for an FMLA purpose after leave has begun, such as when an employee gives notice of the need for an extension of the paid leave with unpaid FMLA leave, the entire or some portion of the paid leave period may be retroactively counted as FMLA leave, to the extent that the leave period qualified as FMLA leave. For example, an employee is granted two weeks paid vacation leave for a skiing trip. In mid-week of the second week, the employee contacts the employer for an extension of leave as unpaid leave and advises that at the beginning of the second week of paid vacation leave the employee suffered a severe accident requiring hospitalization. The employer may notify the employee that both the extension and the second week of paid vacation leave (from the date of the injury) is designated as FMLA leave. On the other hand, when the employee takes sick leave that turns into a serious health condition (e.g., bronchitis that turns into bronchial pneumonia) and the employee gives notice of the need for an extension of leave, the entire period of the serious health condition may be counted as FMLA leave.

(e) Employers may not designate leave as FMLA leave after the employee has returned to work with two exceptions:

(1) If the employee was absent for an FMLA reason and the employer did not learn the reason for the absence until the employee's return (e.g., where the employee was absent for only a brief period), the employer may, upon the employee's return to work, promptly (within two business days of the employee's return to work) designate the leave retroactively with appropriate notice to the employee. If leave is taken for an FMLA reason but the employer was not aware of the reason, and the employee desires that the leave be counted as FMLA leave, the employee must notify the employer within two business days of returning to work of the reason for the leave. In the absence of such timely notification by the employee, the employee may not subsequently assert FMLA protections for the absence.

(2) If the employer knows the reason for the leave but has not been able to confirm that the leave qualifies under FMLA, or where the employer has requested medical certification which has not yet been received or the parties are in the process of obtaining a second or third medical opinion, the employer should make a preliminary designation, and so notify the employee, at the time leave begins, or as soon as the reason for the leave becomes known. Upon receipt of the requisite information from the employee or of the medical certification which confirms the leave is for an FMLA reason, the preliminary designation becomes final. If the medical certifications fail to confirm that the reason for the absence was an FMLA reason, the employer must withdraw the designation (with written notice to the employee).

CHAPTER V--WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

PART 825_THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1993--Table of Contents

Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.209 Is an employee entitled to benefits while using FMLA leave?

(a) During any FMLA leave, an employer must maintain the employee's coverage under any group health plan (as defined in the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 at 26 U.S.C. 5000(b)(1)) on the same conditions as coverage would have been provided if the employee had been continuously employed during the entire leave period. All employers covered by FMLA, including public agencies, are subject to the Act's requirements to maintain health coverage. The definition of ``group health plan'' is set forth in Sec. 825.800. For purposes of FMLA, the term ``group health plan'' shall not include an insurance program providing health coverage under which employees purchase individual policies from insurers provided that:

(1) no contributions are made by the employer;

(2) participation in the program is completely voluntary for employees;

(3) the sole functions of the employer with respect to the program are, without endorsing the program, to permit the insurer to publicize the program to employees, to collect premiums through payroll deductions and to remit them to the insurer;

(4) the employer receives no consideration in the form of cash or otherwise in connection with the program, other than reasonable compensation, excluding any profit, for administrative services actually rendered in connection with payroll deduction; and,

(5) the premium charged with respect to such coverage does not increase in the event the employment relationship terminates.

(b) The same group health plan benefits provided to an employee prior to taking FMLA leave must be maintained during the FMLA leave. For example, if family member coverage is provided to an employee, family member coverage must be maintained during the FMLA leave. Similarly, benefit coverage during FMLA leave for medical care, surgical care, hospital care, dental care, eye care, mental health counseling, substance abuse treatment, etc., must be maintained during leave if provided in an employer's group health plan, including a supplement to a group health plan, whether or not provided through a flexible spending account or other component of a cafeteria plan.

(c) If an employer provides a new health plan or benefits or changes health benefits or plans while an employee is on FMLA leave, the employee is entitled to the new or changed plan/benefits to the same extent as if the employee were not on leave. For example, if an employer changes a group health plan so that dental care becomes covered under the plan, an employee on FMLA leave must be given the same opportunity as other employees to receive (or obtain) the dental care coverage. Any other plan changes (e.g., in coverage, premiums, deductibles, etc.) which apply to all employees of the workforce would also apply to an employee on FMLA leave.

(d) Notice of any opportunity to change plans or benefits must also be given to an employee on FMLA leave. If the group health plan permits an employee to change from single to family coverage upon the birth of a child or otherwise add new family members, such a change in benefits must be made available while an employee is on FMLA leave. If the employee requests the changed coverage it must be provided by the employer.

(e) An employee may choose not to retain group health plan coverage during FMLA leave. However, when an employee returns from leave, the employee is entitled to be reinstated on the same terms as prior to taking the leave, including family or dependent coverages, without any qualifying period, physical examination, exclusion of pre- existing conditions, etc. See Sec. 825.212(c).

(f) Except as required by the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986 (COBRA) and for ``key'' employees (as discussed below), an employer's obligation to maintain health benefits during leave (and to restore the employee to the same or equivalent employment) under FMLA ceases if and when the employment relationship would have terminated if the employee had not taken FMLA leave (e.g., if the employee's position is eliminated as part of a nondiscriminatory reduction in force and the employee would not have been transferred to another position); an employee informs the employer of his or her intent not to return from leave (including before starting the leave if the employer is so informed before the leave starts); or the employee fails to return from leave or continues on leave after exhausting his or her FMLA leave entitlement in the 12-month period.

(g) If a ``key employee'' (see Sec. 825.218) does not return from leave when notified by the employer that substantial or grievous economic injury will result from his or her reinstatement, the employee's entitlement to group health plan benefits continues unless and until the employee advises the employer that the employee does not desire restoration to employment at the end of the leave period, or FMLA leave entitlement is exhausted, or reinstatement is actually denied.

(h) An employee's entitlement to benefits other than group health benefits during a period of FMLA leave (e.g., holiday pay) is to be determined by the employer's established policy for providing such benefits when the employee is on other forms of leave (paid or unpaid, as appropriate).

TITLE 29--LABOR

CHAPTER V--WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

PART 825_THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1993--Table of Contents

Subpart B_What Leave Is an Employee Entitled To Take Under the Family and Medical Leave Act?

Sec. 825.220 How are employees protected who request leave or otherwise assert FMLA rights?

(a) The FMLA prohibits interference with an employee's rights under the law, and with legal proceedings or inquiries relating to an employee's rights. More specifically, the law contains the following employee protections:

(1) An employer is prohibited from interfering with, restraining, or denying the exercise of (or attempts to exercise) any rights provided by the Act.

(2) An employer is prohibited from discharging or in any other way discriminating against any person (whether or not an employee) for opposing or complaining about any unlawful practice under the Act.

(3) All persons (whether or not employers) are prohibited from discharging or in any other way discriminating against any person (whether or not an employee) because that person has--

(i) Filed any charge, or has instituted (or caused to be instituted) any proceeding under or related to this Act;

(ii) Given, or is about to give, any information in connection with an inquiry or proceeding relating to a right under this Act;

(iii) Testified, or is about to testify, in any inquiry or proceeding relating to a right under this Act.

(b) Any violations of the Act or of these regulations constitute interfering with, restraining, or denying the exercise of rights provided by the Act. ``Interfering with'' the exercise of an employee's rights would include, for example, not only refusing to authorize FMLA leave, but discouraging an employee from using such leave. It would also include manipulation by a covered employer to avoid responsibilities under FMLA, for example:

(1) transferring employees from one worksite to another for the purpose of reducing worksites, or to keep worksites, below the 50-employee threshold for employee eligibility under the Act;

(2) changing the essential functions of the job in order to preclude the taking of leave;

(3) reducing hours available to work in order to avoid employee eligibility.

(c) An employer is prohibited from discriminating against employees or prospective employees who have used FMLA leave. For example, if an employee on leave without pay would otherwise be entitled to full benefits (other than health benefits), the same benefits would be required to be provided to an employee on unpaid FMLA leave. By the same token, employers cannot use the taking of FMLA leave as a negative factor in employment actions, such as hiring, promotions or disciplinary actions; nor can FMLA leave be counted under ``no fault'' attendance policies.

(d) Employees cannot waive, nor may employers induce employees to waive, their rights under FMLA. For example, employees (or their collective bargaining representatives) cannot ``trade off'' the right to take FMLA leave against some other benefit offered by the employer. This does not prevent an employee's voluntary and uncoerced acceptance (not as a condition of employment) of a ``light duty'' assignment while recovering from a serious health condition (see Sec. 825.702(d)). In such a circumstance the employee's right to restoration to the same or an equivalent position is available until 12 weeks have passed within the 12-month period, including all FMLA leave taken and the period of ``light duty.''

(e) Individuals, and not merely employees, are protected from retaliation for opposing (e.g., file a complaint about) any practice which is unlawful under the Act. They are similarly protected if they oppose any practice which they reasonably believe to be a violation of the Act or regulations.

CHAPTER V--WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

PART 825_THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1993--Table of Contents

Subpart C_How do Employees Learn of Their FMLA Rights and Obligations, and What Can an Employer Require of an Employee?

Sec. 825.301 What other notices to employees are required of employers under the FMLA?

(a)(1) If an FMLA-covered employer has any eligible employees and has any written guidance to employees concerning employee benefits or leave rights, such as in an employee handbook, information concerning FMLA entitlements and employee obligations under the FMLA must be included in the handbook or other document. For example, if an employer provides an employee handbook to all employees that describes the employer's policies regarding leave, wages, attendance, and similar matters, the handbook must incorporate information on FMLA rights and responsibilities and the employer's policies regarding the FMLA. Informational publications describing the Act's provisions are available from local offices of the Wage and Hour Division and may be incorporated in such employer handbooks or written policies.

(2) If such an employer does not have written policies, manuals, or handbooks describing employee benefits and leave provisions, the employer shall provide written guidance to an employee concerning all the employee's rights and obligations under the FMLA. This notice shall be provided to employees each time notice is given pursuant to paragraph (b), and in accordance with the provisions of that paragraph. Employers may duplicate and provide the employee a copy of the FMLA Fact Sheet available from the nearest office of the Wage and Hour Division to provide such guidance.

(b)(1) The employer shall also provide the employee with written notice detailing the specific expectations and obligations of the employee and explaining any consequences of a failure to meet these obligations. The written notice must be provided to the employee in a language in which the employee is literate (see Sec. 825.300(c)). Such specific notice must include, as appropriate:

(i) that the leave will be counted against the employee's annual FMLA leave entitlement (see Sec. 825.208);

(ii) any requirements for the employee to furnish medical certification of a serious health condition and the consequences of failing to do so (see Sec. 825.305);

(iii) the employee's right to substitute paid leave and whether the employer will require the substitution of paid leave, and the conditions related to any substitution;

(iv) any requirement for the employee to make any premium payments to maintain health benefits and the arrangements for making such payments (see Sec. 825.210), and the possible consequences of failure to make such payments on a timely basis (i.e., the circumstances under which coverage may lapse);

(v) any requirement for the employee to present a fitness-for-duty certificate to be restored to employment (see Sec. 825.310);

(vi) the employee's status as a ``key employee'' and the potential consequence that restoration may be denied following FMLA leave, explaining the conditions required for such denial (see Sec. 825.218);

(vii) the employee's right to restoration to the same or an equivalent job upon return from leave (see Sec. Sec. 825.214 and 825.604); and,

(viii) the employee's potential liability for payment of health insurance premiums paid by the employer during the employee's unpaid FMLA leave if the employee fails to return to work after taking FMLA leave (see Sec. 825.213).

(2) The specific notice may include other information--e.g., whether the employer will require periodic reports of the employee's status and intent to return to work, but is not required to do so. A prototype notice is contained in Appendix D of this part, or may be obtained from local offices of the Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division, which employers may adapt for their use to meet these specific notice requirements.

(c) Except as provided in this subparagraph, the written notice required by paragraph (b) (and by subparagraph (a)(2) where applicable) must be provided to the employee no less often than the first time in each six-month period that an employee gives notice of the need for FMLA leave (if FMLA leave is taken during the six-month period). The notice shall be given within a reasonable time after notice of the need for leave is given by the employee--within one or two business days if feasible. If leave has already begun, the notice should be mailed to the employee's address of record.

(1) If the specific information provided by the notice changes with respect to a subsequent period of FMLA leave during the six-month period, the employer shall, within one or two business days of receipt of the employee's notice of need for leave, provide written notice referencing the prior notice and setting forth any of the information in subparagraph (b) which has changed. For example, if the initial leave period were paid leave and the subsequent leave period would be unpaid leave, the employer may need to give notice of the arrangements for making premium payments.

(2)(i) Except as provided in subparagraph (ii), if the employer is requiring medical certification or a ``fitness-for-duty'' report, written notice of the requirement shall be given with respect to each employee notice of a need for leave.

(ii) Subsequent written notification shall not be required if the initial notice in the six-months period and the employer handbook or other written documents (if any) describing the employer's leave policies, clearly provided that certification or a ``fitness-for-duty'' report would be required (e.g., by stating that certification would be required in all cases, by stating that certification would be required in all cases in which leave of more than a specified number of days is taken, or by stating that a ``fitness-for-duty'' report would be required in all cases for back injuries for employees in a certain occupation). Where subsequent written notice is not required, at least oral notice shall be provided. (See Sec. 825.305(a).)

(d) Employers are also expected to responsively answer questions from employees concerning their rights and responsibilities under the FMLA.

(e) Employers furnishing FMLA-required notices to sensory impaired individuals must also comply with all applicable requirements under Federal or State law.

(f) If an employer fails to provide notice in accordance with the provisions of this section, the employer may not take action against an employee for failure to comply with any provision required to be set forth in the notice.

CHAPTER V--WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

PART 825_THE FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT OF 1993--Table of Contents

Subpart C_How do Employees Learn of Their FMLA Rights and Obligations, and What Can an Employer Require of an Employee?

Sec. 825.302 What notice does an employee have to give an employer when the need for FMLA leave is foreseeable?

(a) An employee must provide the employer at least 30 days advance notice before FMLA leave is to begin if the need for the leave is foreseeable based on an expected birth, placement for adoption or foster care, or planned medical treatment for a serious health condition of the employee or of a family member. If 30 days notice is not practicable, such as because of a lack of knowledge of approximately when leave will be required to begin, a change in circumstances, or a medical emergency, notice must be given as soon as practicable. For example, an employee's health condition may require leave to commence earlier than anticipated before the birth of a child. Similarly, little opportunity for notice may be given before placement for adoption. Whether the leave is to be continuous or is to be taken intermittently or on a reduced schedule basis, notice need only be given one time, but the employee shall advise the employer as soon as practicable if dates of scheduled leave change or are extended, or were initially unknown.

(b) ``As soon as practicable'' means as soon as both possible and practical, taking into account all of the facts and circumstances in the individual case. For foreseeable leave where it is not possible to give as much as 30 days notice, ``as soon as practicable'' ordinarily would mean at least verbal notification to the employer within one or two business days of when the need for leave becomes known to the employee.

(c) An employee shall provide at least verbal notice sufficient to make the employer aware that the employee needs FMLA-qualifying leave, and the anticipated timing and duration of the leave. The employee need not expressly assert rights under the FMLA or even mention the FMLA, but may only state that leave is needed for an expected birth or adoption, for example. The employer should inquire further of the employee if it is necessary to have more information about whether FMLA leave is being sought by the employee, and obtain the necessary details of the leave to be taken. In the case of medical conditions, the employer may find it necessary to inquire further to determine if the leave is because of a serious health condition and may request medical certification to support the need for such leave (see Sec. 825.305).

(d) An employer may also require an employee to comply with the employer's usual and customary notice and procedural requirements for requesting leave. For example, an employer may require that written notice set forth the reasons for the requested leave, the anticipated duration of the leave, and the anticipated start of the leave. However, failure to follow such internal employer procedures will not permit an employer to disallow or delay an employee's taking FMLA leave if the employee gives timely verbal or other notice.

(e) When planning medical treatment, the employee must consult with the employer and make a reasonable effort to schedule the leave so as not to disrupt unduly the employer's operations, subject to the approval of the health care provider. Employees are ordinarily expected to consult with their employers prior to the scheduling of treatment in order to work out a treatment schedule which best suits the needs of both the employer and the employee. If an employee who provides notice of the need to take FMLA leave on an intermittent basis for planned medical treatment neglects to consult with the employer to make a reasonable attempt to arrange the schedule of treatments so as not to unduly disrupt the employer's operations, the employer may initiate discussions with the employee and require the employee to attempt to make such arrangements, subject to the approval of the health care provider.

(f) In the case of intermittent leave or leave on a reduced leave schedule which is medically necessary, an employee shall advise the employer, upon request, of the reasons why the intermittent/reduced leave schedule is necessary and of the schedule for treatment, if applicable. The employee and employer shall attempt to work out a schedule which meets the employee's needs without unduly disrupting the employer's operations, subject to the approval of the health care provider.

(g) An employer may waive employees' FMLA notice requirements. In addition, an employer may not require compliance with stricter FMLA notice requirements where the provisions of a collective bargaining agreement, State law, or applicable leave plan allow less advance notice to the employer. For example, if an employee (or employer) elects to substitute paid vacation leave for unpaid FMLA leave (see Sec. 825.207), and the employer's paid vacation leave plan imposes no prior notification requirements for taking such vacation leave, no advance notice may be required for the FMLA leave taken in these circumstances. On the other hand, FMLA notice requirements would apply to a period of unpaid FMLA leave, unless the employer imposes lesser notice requirements on employees taking leave without pay.

Subpart D_What Enforcement Mechanisms Does FMLA Provide?

Sec. 825.400 What can employees do who believe that their rights under FMLA have been violated?

(a) The employee has the choice of:

(1) Filing, or having another person file on his or her behalf, a complaint with the Secretary of Labor, or

(2) Filing a private lawsuit pursuant to section 107 of FMLA.

(b) If the employee files a private lawsuit, it must be filed within two years after the last action which the employee contends was in violation of the Act, or three years if the violation was willful.

(c) If an employer has violated one or more provisions of FMLA, and if justified by the facts of a particular case, an employee may receive one or more of the following: wages, employment benefits, or other compensation denied or lost to such employee by reason of the violation; or, where no such tangible loss has occurred, such as when FMLA leave was unlawfully denied, any actual monetary loss sustained by the employee as a direct result of the violation, such as the cost of providing care, up to a sum equal to 12 weeks of wages for the employee. In addition, the employee may be entitled to interest on such sum, calculated at the prevailing rate. An amount equalling the preceding sums may also be awarded as liquidated damages unless such amount is reduced by the court because the violation was in good faith and the employer had reasonable grounds for believing the employer had not violated the Act. When appropriate, the employee may also obtain appropriate equitable relief, such as employment, reinstatement and promotion. When the employer is found in violation, the employee may recover a reasonable attorney's fee, reasonable expert witness fees, and other costs of the action from the employer in addition to any judgment awarded by the court.

Sec. 825.401 Where may an employee file a complaint of FMLA violations with the Federal government?

(a) A complaint may be filed in person, by mail or by telephone, with the Wage and Hour Division, Employment Standards Administration, U.S. Department of Labor. A complaint may be filed at any local office of the Wage and Hour Division; the address and telephone number of local offices may be found in telephone directories.

(b) A complaint filed with the Secretary of Labor should be filed within a reasonable time of when the employee discovers that his or her FMLA rights have been violated. In no event may a complaint be filed more than two years after the action which is alleged to be a violation of FMLA occurred, or three years in the case of a willful violation.

(c) No particular form of complaint is required, except that a complaint must be reduced to writing and should include a full statement of the acts and/or omissions, with pertinent dates, which are believed to constitute the violation.

COMES NOW Denise Newsom e ("Newsome"), an African-Am erican fe male, and files this her Of ficial United Sta tes Eq ual E mployment Opportunity Co mmission (hereinafter " EEOC") Complaint with the United States Secretary of Lab or in care of and through the EEOC 's Cincinnati Area Office of and again st Wood & Lamping, LLP ("W&L")[2] and/or its representatives under Title VII of the C ivil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U. S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.], 29 C.F. R. § 1601 .7, and an y/all applicable statutes/laws under which the jurisdiction of the EEOC is applicable.

This instant Charge is al so being filed with the Ohio Civil Rights Commission wit h the Cincinnati Regional Dire ctor in care of and throu gh its Cincinnati Regional Office of and against Wood & Lam ping, LLP ("W&L") a nd/or its representatives under 4112 and any /all applicable statutes/laws under whic h the jurisdiction of the Ohio Civil Rights Comm ission is applicable. Newsome's job performance was subjected to heightened scrutiny IMMEDIATEL Y AFTER she filed a lawsuit and Wood & Lam ping's knowledge of her engagem ent in protected activities. The temporal pr oximity between Ne wsome's filing of lawsuit notice of filing of charges and th e heightened scrutiny is en ough to esta blish the causal connect ion for pu rposes of prov ing a prima facie case of discriminatory and retaliatory practices. This instant Charge will provide circumstantial evidence which will include the proximity between the protected activities and changes in Wood & Lamping's relationship with Newsome and the terms of her employment. An investigation will yield how Wood & Lamping began to closely m onitor Newsom e and create conditions (i.e. taking awa y job duties to give to white e mployees, harassm ent and creatio n of hostile environm ent to interfere with perform ance of job duties, and m easures ta ken to f orce her to quit) which led to her unlawful/illegal discharge and/or term ination. Newsome believes said interference in which an investigation m ay y ield a causal connection between her filing of lawsuit s, EEOC Ch arge and/or engagement in protected activities – supporting prima facie criteria.

In support of this Complaint Newsome states the following:

[2] Wood & Lam ping LLP in this Complaint will refer to it, its employees (not including Newsome in that she is identified) and/or representatives.

JURISDICTION

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY COMMISSION:

The jurisdiction of the United States Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ("EEOC") is invoked under the Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C. A. § 2000e et seq.], 29 C.F.R. § 16 01.7 and the applicable statutes/laws granting said agency jurisdiction. Newsome, through this instant Charge, is requesting the administration and enforcement of Title VII. The enforcement of Title VII rights begins with the filing of a charge of unlawful employment discrimination; moreover, to determine whether Title VII will need to be enforced. Therefore, Newsome through this instant documentation is filing a Charge of unlawful employment discrimination. The filing of this instant Charge of Discrimination is being submitted to the EEOC to provide it with an opportunity to investigate and attempt a resolution of the controversy. Moreover, is also provided to determine whether or not Newsome is a victim of individual and/or systematic discrimination pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 1601.6.

OHIO CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION:

The jurisdiction of the Ohio Civil Rights Commission ("OCRC") is invoked under the provisions of Section 4112 of the Ohio Revised Code and the applicable statutes/laws granting said agency jurisdiction regarding unlawful discriminatory practices. Newsome through this instant Charge is requesting the administration and enforcement of the applicable laws under Section 4112. The filing of this instant Charge is to initiate a preliminary investigation to determine whether it is probable that an unlawful discriminatory practice has been and/or is being engaged in. The filing of this instant Charge is being submitted to the OCRC to determine if unlawful discriminatory practices occurred. Then if so, Newsome is requesting the OCRC "to initiate a complaint and refer it to the Attorney General with a recommendation to seek a temporary or permanent injunction or a temporary restraining order. If this action is taken, the Attorney General shall apply, as expeditiously as possible after receipt of the complaint, to the court of common pleas of the county in which the unlawful discriminatory practice allegedly occurred for the appropriate injunction or order, and the court shall hear and determine the application as expeditiously as possible" pursuant to Section 4112.05(3)(a)(iii).

Pursuant to Ohio Revised Code ("ORC") Section 4112.02(A)(I):

> It shall be an unlawful discriminatory practice:
> (A) For an em ployer, because of the rac e, color, reli gion, sex, military status, national origin, disability , age, or ancestry of any person, to discharge without just cause, to refuse to hire, or otherwi se to discrim inate against that person with respec t to hire, t enure, term s, conditions, or pri vileges of employment, or an y m atter directly or indirectly related to employment.

Supervisor Harassment:

23. An employer is vicariously liable for a hostile work environment created by a supervisor with immediate or higher authority over the employee. Faragher, supra at 2275 (1998). If not tangible employment action is taken against the employee, then the employer may raise an affirmative defense to liability or damages.[4] Ellerth, supra at 2270; Faragher, at 2293.

Retaliation:

32. In order to establish a prima facie case of retaliation under R.C. 4112.02(I), the Commission must prove the following elements:

a. Complainant engaged in protected activity;
b. Respondent knew of Complainant's participation in the protected activity;
c. Respondent engaged in retaliatory conduct; and
d. a causal link exists between the protected activity and the adverse action.

36. Kelly Services, Inc.,* (1996), 75 Ohio St.3d 578, 1996 Ohio 265, 664 N.E. 2d 1272.

37. Whether the discriminatory conduct unreasonably interfered with Complainant's work performance is one factor to be considered. The Commission, however, is not required to show the Complainant's "tangible productivity . . . declined as a result of harassment." Harris, 63 FEP Cases at 229 (Justice Ginsburg's concurrence) quoting Davis v. Monsanto Chemical Co., 47 FEP Cases 1825, 1828 (6th Cir. 1988). Instead the Commission must demonstrate that a reasonable person subjected to the discriminatory conduct would find that the harassment so altered working conditions as to "ma[k]e it more difficult to do the job." Id.

38. To support a retaliation claim, the Commission must show that the change in Complainant's employment conditions was more disruptive than a mere inconvenience or an alteration of job responsibilities. Bowers v. Hamilton City Sch. Dist. Bd. Of Educ.,

[4] In Ellerth, the Supreme Court described a tangible employment action as:

> . . . a significant change in employment status, such as hiring, firing, failing to promote, reassignment with significantly different responsibilities, or a decision causing a significant change in benefits. Id. at 2268.

FACTS OF THIS COMPLAINT

Newsome believe it is important to note that the Title VII/Civil Rights/Employment violations, etc. addressed in this instant Charge may be as a direct and proximate result of the EEOC's failure in the past to perform ministerial duties mandated by statutes/laws. Moreover, as a direct and proximate result of said failure that she has repeatedly been subjected to such unlawful employment discrimination/practices, systematic discriminatory practices and criminal acts by Wood & Lamping, LLP ("W&L") its representatives and others. An investigation will yield that the very policies and practices that the EEOC acknowledges as discriminatory – i.e. contacting employers and notifying of employee's past participation and/or filing of EEOC Charge is the very practice that has been repeatedly allowed to be used and transferred from one employer to another regarding Newsome. Moreover, the posting of such protected activity on the INTERNET was deliberately done for purposes of depriving Newsome equal employment opportunities, equal protection of the laws, due process of laws, life, liberties and the pursuit of happiness, etc. All because Newsome exposed what is known for a long time to be systematic discrimination leveled against African-Americans and/or people of color who challenge employers for discriminatory practices and the government's handling of such claims . An investigation into this instant Charge will support systematic discrimination and violation under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act and other governing statutes/laws have been implemented to prevent and/or preclude Newsome from obtaining gainful employment – i.e. equal employment opportunities.

I. VIOLATION OF STATUTE:

1. Wood & Lamping, LLP ("W&L"), Newsome's former employer, is a private sector employer who employs approximately 15 or more employees for at least 20 work weeks in the current or preceding calendar year and is engaged in an activity affecting commerce.

2. Andrea Griffith (Human Resources Manager/Representative) and C. J. Schmidt (Attorney and Managing Partner) at Wood & Lamping, LLP are people who act, directly, in the interest of their employer (Wood & Lamping, LLP) to the employees of said employer.

3. Newsome worked for a covered employer – Wood & Lamping, LLP. Newsome's hire date being effective September 11, 2006. Newsome was employed as Estate Planning Coordinator. At the time of Newsome's termination on January 9, 2009, W&L still had a need for the job duties performed by Newsome as Estate Planning Coordinator.

4. During Newsome's employment at W&L she was subjected to systematic discriminatory practices based on W&L's knowledge of her participation and engagement in protected activities.

5. During Newsome's employment at W&L, she was subjected to discriminatory treatment based on her race and sex. Newsome is an African-American. Newsome is a female. Therefore, a member of the protected group.

6. During Newsome's employment at W&L, she was subjected to unlawful discriminatory practices based on her race and sex. Newsome is an African-American. Newsome is a female. Therefore, a member of the protected group.

7. During Newsome's employment at W&L, she was subjected to retaliatory treatment for reporting unlawful employment practices and/or for participating/engaging in protected activities.

8. During Newsome's employment at W&L, she was subjected to disparate treatment because of her race.

9. W&L changed Newsome's terms and conditions of employment, and terminated her, in retaliation for having engaged in activity protected by R.C. 4112.

10. Newsome believes she was discriminated in employment on the basis of race, sex, retaliation, her participation in protected activities and disparate treatment. Said discrimination is in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 29 CFR 1601 (.7, .6), fair employment practices, and/or the applicable statutes/laws governing said matters.

II. PURPOSE OF TITLE VII:

11. Newsome believes an investigation into this instant Charge will support the facts, evidence and legal conclusions set forth herein as well as that obtained through an investigation. Federal case law generally applies to alleged violations of R.C. 4112. Columbus Civ. Serv. Comm. v. McGlone (1998), 82 Ohio St.3d 569. Therefore, reliable, probative, and substantive evidence means evidence sufficient to support a finding of unlawful retaliation under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. - OCRC Complaint No. 9496 (Glaser v. HLS Bonding matter)

12. This instant Charge has been filed seeking the EEOC's/OCRC's intervention; moreover: (a) for the prohibition of employment discrimination;

> Czupih v. Card Pak Inc., 916 F.Supp. 687 (N.D.Ohio.E.Div.,1996) - > Purpose of Title VII is to prohibit employer discrimination. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., as amended, 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

(b) deter and protect Newsome from prejudicial and systematic discriminatory treatment rendered her while employed at W&L; (c) achieve employment equality by preventing discrimination and to make Newsome whole due to the unlawful employment practices/unlawful discriminatory practices as well as restoring her to the position she would have been entitled absent the unlawful discrimination; and (d) achieve equality and remove the long-standing racial barriers that in the past have been known to favor whites over African-Americans and/or people of color.

Johnson v. University Surgical Group Associates of Cincinnati, 871 F.Supp. 979 (S.D.Ohio. W.Div., 1994) - Purpose of Title VII is to protect workers from certain kinds of prejudicial treatment on the job and not to federalize common-law torts. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

Adler v. John Carroll University, 549 F.Supp. 652 (N.D.Ohio.E.Div., 1982) - Twin statutory purposes of Title VII of Civil Rights Act of 1964 are to achieve employment equality by preventing discrimination and to make persons whole for injuries suffered due to unlawful employment discrimination; scope of relief is intended to restore victim of unlawful employment practices to position he would have been in were it not for unlawful discrimination. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq. as amended 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

Asad v. Continental Airlines, Inc., 328 F.Supp.2d 772 (N.D.Ohio.E.Div., 2004) -The purpose of Title VII, . . . is to achieve equality of employment opportunities and remove barriers that have operated in the past to favor an identifiable group of employees over other employees. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

13. Ohio's Anti-Discrimination law prohibits such conduct as that under Title VII and is constructed identically as Title VII; wherein Title VII is designed to address, expose and rid the world of such evil acts as discrimination because of a person's race, sex, etc. Therefore, this instant Charge targets the discriminatory practices of W&L and will demonstrate that its hostility and/or abuse towards Newsome was itself discriminatory and how W&L attempted to cover-up such discriminatory employment violations – i.e. by removing and destroying evidence for purposes of obstructing the administration of justice and pretext.

Shoemaker-Stephen v. Montgomery County Bd. of Comm'rs, 262 F.Supp.2d 866 (S.D.Ohio. W.Div., 2003) - Ohio anti-discrimination law prohibits same conduct as Title VII, and is generally construed in identical fashion to Title VII. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 703(a)(1), as amended, 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e-2(a)(1); Ohio R.C. § 4112.02(A).

Eperesi v. Envirotest Systems Corp., 999 F. Supp. 1026 (N.D.Ohio.E.Div., 1998) - The state statute prohibiting discrimination based on race is interpreted under the same standards applied to Title VII. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.; Ohio R.C. § 4112.02(A).

Neff v. Civ il Air Patrol, 916 F.Supp. 710 (S.D. Ohio.E.Div., 1996) - Title VII is designed to rid the world of work of the evil of discrimination because of individual's race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

Walk v. Rubbermaid Inc., 913 F.Supp. 1023 (N.D.Ohio.E.Div., 1994) - Purpose of Title VII is to create equality in workplace by targeting discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin, and thus employee must demonstrate that employer's hostility or abuse was itself discriminatory. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 703(a)(1), as amended, 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e-2(a)(1).

14. Through this instant Charge, Newsome seeks the EEOC's/OCRC's intervention and request that it report violations found to the proper authorities and file the applicable lawsuit(s) of and against Wood & Lamping seeking the applicable agency and/or courts to impose the proper statutes/laws prohibiting such acts and governing injunctive relief and/or applicable relief to correct the alleged unlawful employment practices addressed herein because of Newsome's race/sex, engagement in protected activities, etc. and provide a remedy for said violators and continuing efforts of the systematic discriminatory practices made known herein and past discrimination.

Watson v. Limbach Co., 333 F.Supp. 754 (S.D.Ohio.E.Div., 1971) - Civil Rights Act of 1964 gives courts jurisdiction to correct alleged unlawful employment practices because of race and color, and to provide a remedy for present and continuing efforts of past discrimination. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

III. PATTERN-OF-DISCRIMINATION:

15. The direct evidence contained in this instant Charge will support a conclusion that challenged employment actions of Wood & Lamping was motivated at least in part by prejudice and systematic discrimination against Newsome who is a member of the protected group. Moreover, that said prejudice and discrimination is based on W&L's personal knowledge or observation, that if true (when it is), reveals a fact without inference or presumption.

Kline v. Tennessee Valley Authority, 128 F.3d 337 (C.A.6., 1997) - Direct evidence and circumstantial evidence paths for proving employment discrimination are mutually exclusive, and employee need only prove one or the other, not both; if employee can produce direct evidence of discrimination McDonnell Douglas burden shifting paradigm is of no consequence, and if employee attempts to prove its case using that paradigm, employee is not required to introduce direct evidence of discrimination.

Johnson v. Kroger Co., 319 F.3d 858 (C.A.6.Ohio, 2003) - Direct evidence of discrimination does not require a factfinder in a Title VII action to draw any inferences in order to conclude that the challenged employment action was motivated at least in part by prejudice against members of the protected group. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

16. W&L consi dered impermissible factors when i t m ade the adverse e mployment decision to term inate Newsom e's employ ment. W&L knew and/or shoul d have known that it was providing Newsome with false inform ation for the reason resulting in her term ination of employment. In an effort to cover-up its employment violations, W&L went through Newsome's desk (Newsome k ept her desk locked), r emoved and destroyed documentati on that it felt would b e incriminating to it . (EMPHASIS A DDED) Such acts whic h were d one with malicious intent to cover-up and obstruct t he admini stration of just ice should Newsome file charges wi th the prope r authorities. W&L's assertion of the need for reduction-in-force ("RIF") for finan cial and/or economic reasons will also prove to be false because shortly AFTER Newsome's termin ation, W&L employed se veral white employees AFTER Newsome's termination in its efforts to create an ALL white work force. More over, W&L's removal an d destruction of evidence containing evidence o f violation of its own policies and p rocedures discredits any suc h proffered reasons W&L may offer. (EMPHASIS ADDED).

> Wexler v. White' s Fine Furniture, Inc., 317 F.3 d 564 (C.A. 6.Ohio, 2003) -Und er m ixed-motive analy sis for reviewing em ployment discrimination claim , the plaintiff m ust produce di rect evidence that the em ployer considered im permissible factors when it m ade the adverse em ployment decision at issue ; once the plaintiff has shown that the unfa vorable em ployment decision wa s m ade at least in part on a discrim inatory basis, the burden shifts to the employer to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that it would have taken the same adverse acti on even if i mpermissible factors had not entered into its decision.

17. The laws are clear that W&L cannot d iscriminate against Newsom e because she has engaged in protected activities and/or its knowledge of her int ent to engage in protected activities – therefore, term inating e mployment to interfere w ith protected rights. W&L discrim inated against Newsome b ased on its knowledge of her engagem ent in p rotected activities. Moreover, W&L terminated Newsome's employment for:

a) Knowledge of Newsom e's filing of p ast EEOC C harges and/or civil lawsuits brought b y Newsom e against other em ployers. Said knowle dge m otivated W&L to go into Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) to remove and destroy any evidence that would be incriminating in charges filed against it. (EMPHASIS ADDED) . W&L's criminal/civil acts wer e deliberatel y done for purposes of obstructing the administration of justice and impede any investigation that may be initiated as a direct result of the filing of a Charge against it. W&L repeatedly requesting that Newsome waive protected rights and not bring legal action against it in exchan ge for obtaining m edical benefits to which she is entitled an d it is both civil/crimin ally wrong t o attempt to bribe Newsom e to waive such rights in the providing of entitled benefits in exchange of n ot bringing l egal action with appro priate authorities. (EMPHASIS ADDED).

b) Knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities;

c) Knowledge of Newsome's filing and participation in an FBI investigation;

d) Efforts in ai ding Thom as J. Breed 's form er law firm (Schwartz, Manes & Ruby – a/k/a Schwartz Manes Ruby & Slovin) ("SMR&S") - See EXHIBIT

"2" – August 28, 1997 Letter on SM& R Letterhead Bearing Breed' Name attached hereto and incorporated by reference - in a lawsuit W&L obtained knowledge would be brought against Newsome. Therefore, W&L aware of the CONFLICT OF INTEREST[5] that would arise should Newsome remain in its employment terminated her employment to provide SM&S with an undue/unlawful/illegal advantage over her. Newsome addressing such concerns in her January 30, 2009 correspondence to Andrea M. Griffith (W&L's Human Resources Representative) and C. J. Schmidt (W&L's Managing Partner and an Attorney). See EXHIBIT "3" – January 30, 2009 Letter of Newsome to Griffith and Schmidt attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

Said employment violations which clearly violates information set forth in Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual (also referred to herein as "Employee Handbook"). We will endeavor to make reasonable accommodations for known physical or mental limitations of otherwise qualified employees and applicants with disabilities unless the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of or business. Our employment decisions, including, but not limited to, hiring, compensation, benefits, training, and promotions are based on the principles of equal employment opportunity. Discrimination by any member of the firm will not be tolerated. > (Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ p. 11) – EXHIBIT "4" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

18. Newsome believes that she was first subjected to discrimination and retaliation in November 2006 by W&L and/or its employees/representatives as a direct and proximate result of advising of exercising rights secured to her U.S. Constitution, Civil Rights Act, Fair Housing Act and/or the applicable laws governing a dispute she was having with her landlord. Thus, the beginning of the systematic discriminatory Newsome was subjected to during her employment with W&L. (EMPHASIS ADDED). Newsome brought the matter to W&L through an attorney, Elizabeth Horwitz ("Horwitz"), that she was assigned. Horwitz is a white female. Horwitz was authorized and/or given approval to work with Newsome in resolving this matter.

19. Horwitz engaged in conversations with Newsome's landlords' attorney, Gailen Bridges ("Bridges") – white male. From their conversation(s), Horwitz set out to attempt to get Newsome give up her apartment. Newsome aware of her rights under the Fair Housing Act refused to waive any such rights. Newsome's refusal to give up rights secured under the Fair Housing Act upset and frustrated Horwitz. In RETALIATION to Newsome's refusal to forego protected rights, Horwitz, without notice to Newsome, requested that she be assigned another Secretary/Legal Assistant. Newsome believes such act by Horwitz was in retaliation of Newsome's refusal to waive rights secured and/or guaranteed to her under the Fair Housing Act. (EMPHASIS ADDED). Moreover, W&L obliged Horwitz in such matters. Those making such decisions all being white. As a direct and proximate result of Newsome's refusal to waive protected rights, the relationship between Horwitz and Newsome changed; moreover, the relationship between Newsome and W&L changed. Horwitz stopped speaking to Newsome when seeing her. It being apparent that Horwitz retaliated against Newsome because she refused to give up her apartment and insisted on remaining where she lived – as allowed under the Fair Housing Act. Newsome believes Horwitz's conduct and/or attitude not only affected their working relationship, but influenced Newsome's working relationship with W&L and/or its representatives. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that some of the correspondence between Horwitz and Newsome is memorialized in W&L's e-mails between the two. Moreover, the removal of Horwitz (approximately December 2006) coming shortly after Newsome's refusal to waive rights under the Fair Housing Act and her inability to convince Newsome of doing so. During a conversation with Horwitz, she advised Newsome that she was not an attorney – such statement being made to Newsome with resentment and hostile intent because Newsome refused to waive protected rights. Newsome under the governing statutes/laws is entitled to live where she chose to live free of discrimination in housing based on race, sex, etc. Moreover, free of harassment, intimidation. . .

20. It was Horwitz' duty to convenience Newsome to forego rights secured to her under the Fair Housing Act and other statutes/laws governing said matters. Those engaging and requesting that Newsome forego and/or waive her rights were ALL white. (EMPHASIS ADDED).

21. W&L offer representation to its employees. However, its decision process to represent an employee, may be discriminatory as well – i.e as it was in its handling of Newsome's request for representation.

> REPRESENTATION OF EMPLOYEES
> Assistance, guidance, advice, or suggestions offered to employees by an attorney of Wood & Lamping shall be deemed informal personal assistance and not official fir m advise until such time that file is opened in the employee's name. . .

22. As a direct and proximate result of Horwitz' retaliation, protest, resentment, and anger because Newsome refused to waive protected rights, W&L obliged Horwitz and removed her from working with Newsome. Leaving Newsome to have to proceed on her own without legal representation. Newsome proceeded to handle the matter herself and proceeded to bring legal action against her landlords as well as file the applicable charge for continued violations under the Fair Housing Act – matters which Newsome has since elected to take to Washington D.C. (EMPHASIS ADDED). W&L was aware of the legal actions brought by Newsome. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that in W&L 's Employee Handbook provided employees, which it states that it will not discriminate against an employee who elects to engage in lawsuits and/or such protected activity.

23. To clarify how W&L employee(s) feel about filing complaints without fear of reprimand, discrimination or retaliation, Newsome recalls incident where a co-worker, Mary J. Lewis (white female) sent an e-mail out to the entire firm ("Everyone") advising of a complaint she was intending to bring. Such e-mail which stated:

> I recently had a very negative experience with our insurance coverage when attempting to refill a prescription ordered by my doctor. I was obliged to pay for the prescription myself, or go without for approximately 6 days while the pharmacist waited for approval of an insurance-generated change in the manner of dispensing the medication and contrary to my doctor's instructions.
> I have heard from a few people in the office who have had other delays with prescriptions.
> If you have had problems I would like to hear from you. I am *getting ready to voice a complaint with the Ohio Department of Insurance over this incident.

(See EXHIBIT "5" attached hereto and incorporated by reference). Newsome is not aware of Lewis being subjected to discrimination or retaliation in her pursuit and/or notification of bringing a complaint. However, as a direct and proximate result of Newsome's refusal to waive protected rights, she was subjected to discrimination and retaliation. Moreover, W&L's willful decision to engage in systematic discriminatory practices against Newsome.

24. After Horwitz' request for removal from working with Newsome, W&L elected to assign an attorney by the name of Brian P. Gillan ("Gillan"). Brian P. Gillan is a white male. Brian P. Gillan was "of counsel" for W&L. Which from Newsome's conversation with him was due to the fact that [while he is an attorney licensed to practice law] he had not been practicing law and/or had been absent from the practice of law and was returning. - - - Warranting an investigation into what the TRUE reasons may have been for Gillan's absence and not practicing law . (EMPHASIS ADDED).

25. When W&L assigned Gillan to Newsome, W&L failed to advise Newsome of the employment problems (pattern-of discriminatory practices) they were having with Gillan . (EMPHASIS ADDED). It was brought to Newsome's attention that Gillan had only been with W&L for a few months prior to her employment. That Newsome was approximately the third (3rd) Secretary/Legal Assistant Gillan had been assigned to in his short tenure. W&L 's assignment of Gillan to Newsome was with discriminatory intent and harassment purposes. W&L was timely, properly and adequately placed on notice of Gillan's hostile and harassing behavior; however, allowed Gillan to continue such unlawful/illegal acts with its approval. See EXHIBIT "6" – January 15, 2007 E-mail of Newsome to Griffith to Support Such Hostile/Harassing Practices and PRETEXT to cover-up/mask discriminatory practices attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein:

Excerpt of January 15, 2007 E-mail of Newsome to Andrea Griffith:

> Gillan: I will also ignore the fact that in nearly 25 years of working with secretaries and executive assistants, I have never had one send as insubordinate a communication as the one you sent below.

Newsome: I do not beli eve I wa s insubordinate in my e-mail. I sim ply shared my co ncerns. I believe it is wron g for Brian to rep eatedly attack m e and my performance and not expect a response. While he is m y subordinate, it does not give him the r ight to be rude, hostile, etc. towards m e. Nor create and/or generate e-mails such as this in an effort to destroy my character and/or re putation. From my understanding, he has been here about a y ear (or li ttle over) and I am his third (3rd) a ssistant/secretary. He appears to not be able to work with anyone. I have some concerns here.

Gillan: This e-mail will address some of my issues, and my expectations of your performance. Do not waste my time giving me anothe r long-winded explanation of how I am wrong, or how your way is the better way to do it , because I will not read it. I want your performance to m eet my reasonable expectations; I want your insubordinate and passive/aggressive behav ior to change; and I wa nt y ou to ad dress the issues And rea raises with you, or else your tenure here will be short-lived.

Newsome: Again, I simply share m y concern s with Brian. Something is definitely wrong when such concerns are twisted and/or manipulated in a way to try and m ake it look as though I was insubordinate. His use of "insubordinate," "passive/aggressive behavior" is apparent to m e he is fluffing the pa d to find reasons to have me terminated. Since such assertions are made by Brian, I need for him to provide and/or demonstrate when such "passi ve/aggressive behavior" has been d isplayed. Also, when I have been insubordinate – if re sponding to an e-mail sharing m y conc erns in his behavior, is insubordinate while he is allowed to vent his hostility towards m e, then I have some concerns. Why, because no such "insubordination," "passive/aggressive behavior" was ever brought to my attention by any of the other attorneys or people I have worked here with. So , I would que stion why would Brian be making such assertions if they were not ill motivated. . . .

Gillan: But your reaction Friday to my request to merely format a letter I had drafted on th e system – rather than dictating it to you, since that would have taken more of your time, and I was trying to make it easier for you – was rea lly beyond the pale. The issue with the client came up Thursday night, and the letter had to get to Washington asap Friday. You gave me another long-winded e-mail explanation why you could not give my work the priority it needed. If you had just formatted my letter, it would have taken less time than the e-mail you sent in its place. I had to go aks Juanita for help, which she gladly provided. It took her all of 5 minutes.

Newsome: Brian presented me with a task which was completed in the a.m. the day before. He failed to check his box. I placed it in his chair. When he sent me an e-mail regarding it, I advised him that the task was completed the day before in the a.m. and placed in his chair. Any delay in responding was not due to me. The task was completed and returned.

Gillan: And then I asked you to m erely print off some long e-mail attachments which Ray had sent me to g et up to speed on the new case I' ve been asked to take over – the largest case in the o ffice, and one that could be very lucrative for the firm. Instead of taking the few m inutes to hit "print" several tim es, you again sent me a long explanation of why my request was unreasonable and you could not get to it for a while. I wanted to read those attachments then, not later. When som e time had passed, and it was getting past 4:00, I decided to do it myself. That seemed to prompt you to finally get to it.

Newsome: I have the e-m ail and others. I m entioned to you, your job wa s next. You just didn't want to wait. In an eff ort to make m e look bad or to shape the "insub ordinate," "passive/aggressive behavior" opinion y ou created of m e, you proceeded to print the m yourself. My e-mail advised you that the last one was printing.

Gillan: Here is m y expectation: not all of my work is urgent, and that work which is not c an wait a reasonable amount of time to be done. But t he work that is truly urgent needs to be given imm ediate attention. If y ou have a project for another attorney that is also urgent, let me know and I will work it out with that attorney.

Newsome: I have som e concerns to this e-mail presented by Brian in that I believ e it is il l motivated. Why? Becaus e it has be en brought t o my attention that Bria n apparentl y had a relatio nship with a legal assistant (who is no longer) here at the fir m who was upset with t he fact I wa s hired and she wa s not. I have con cerns that Brian m ay be bitter towards me and such bitterness is displayed through his elaborately generated e-mails to m ake it appear that I am insubordinate and/or h ave exhibited passive/aggressive behavior towards him. This being false. While it is now apparent that Brian may have been trying to pull such behavior out of me through his attacks and criticism via e-mail, I was not going to stoop to such antics by him. I consider m yself professional and strive to carry myself in a re spectful and pro per m anner. Ho wever, when questioned, as here, I am going to respond.

In Brian's e-mail on Friday, he states, "The last few days have not worked for me." He has attacked my charact er when in previous e-mail comme nds me for doing a good job. So I question his motive behind his recent behavior. I find his recent behavior to unfair, unjust and ill motivated. Believing that he may blame me for the reason why the legal assistant he was such good friends with i s not here. Realizing that others appreciated my work and performance, I believe Brian may have set out to just try and find something in an effort to make me look bad. It is not clear to m e, why he would send such e-m ails and no t expect a re sponse and/or believe that I am not su pposed to respond but just take suc h without fe edback. I h ave som e se rious concerns and just wanted to share.

Thanks for your time.

A. Newsome sure hopes that through this instant Charge the EEOC/OCR C require W& L produce t he docum entation Gillan assert was sent by Newsome to support such attacks leveled against her as being "insubordinate," "passive /aggressive behavior." Moreover, inquire into Gillan's sexual relationship with contract e mployee (in that h e may have a history of such behavior). If so, W&L knew and/or should have known of the liabili ty that woul d be incurred in allowing Gillan engage in such unlawful/illegal practice s – i.e. practices that violates W&L' s own policies and procedures.

B. SW&L m aking good on Gillan' s threats that m y "tenure here will be short-lived."

26. IT IS IMPOR TANT TO NOTE that upon Newsome's hiring it was bro ught to her attention that a Paralegal (contractor and white) was upset at Newsom e being hired in that the Paralegal had been there before Newsome and wanted to be hi red on as well. It wa s also brought to Newsome's attention that this Paralegal (married) was having a sexual relationship and/or affair with one of the attorneys (Bria n P. Gillan – of counsel and white) which m ay have been exposed by the

Paralegal's husband.[6] From Newsome's understanding, the Paralegal was let go and of course Gillan denied having any such relationship with the Paralegal although there was evidence on W&L's computer to this relationship, in that both spent a great deal of time using W&L's e-mail to correspond with each other. Gillan specializes in employment law; therefore, he knew and/or should have known of the liability such acts would cost W&L. Nevertheless, he was allowed to remain in the employment of W&L with W&L knowledge of such conduct. Such acts which are characterized as "UNWISE."

The partner or manager will initiate an investigation of the matter….

(a) Harassm ent on the b asis of sex is a violation of section 703 of Title VII. [FN1] Un welcome sexual adv ances, reque sts for sexual favors, and other verbal or ph ysical conduct of a sexua l nature constitute sexual harassm ent when (1) subm ission to such conduct is made either explicitly or im plicitly a term or condition of an individual's em ployment, (2) su bmission to or rejection of suc h conduct b y an individ ual is u sed as the basis for em ployment decisions affecting such individual, or (3) such conduct h as the purpose or effect of unreasonabl y interfering with an individual 's work perform ance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment.

[8] See "DISCIPLINARY STEPS" - EXHIBIT "20" - W&L's Employer's Guide at page 21 attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein

(b) In determining whether alleged conduct constitutes sexual harassment, the Commission will look at the record as a whole and at the totality of the circum stances, such as the nature of the sexual advances an d the contex t in which t he alleged incidents occ urred. The determination of the legality of a particular a ction will be made from the facts, on a case by case basis…

(d) With re spect to conduct between fellow employees, an employer is responsible for acts of sexual harassment in the workplace where the employer (or its agent s or supe rvisory employees) knows or should have known of the conduct, unless it can show that it took immediate and appropriate corrective action…

(f) Prevention is the be st tool for the elimination of sexual harassment. An employe r should ta ke all steps necessary to prevent sexual harassment from occurring, such as affirmatively raising the subject, expressing strong disapp roval, developing appropriate sanctions, informing employees of their right to raise and how to raise the issue of harassment under Title VII, and developing methods to sensitize all concerned….

(g) Other related practices: Where employment opportunities or benefits a re granted because of a n individual's subm ission to the employer's sexual advances or requests for sexual favors, the employer may be held liable for u nlawful sex discrim ination against other person s who we re qualified for but denied that em ployment opportunity or benefit.

See "ANTI-HARASSMENT POLICIES" - EXHIBIT "20" - W&L's Employer's Guide at page 19 attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full h erein. Also "DISCRIMINATION""

"DISCRIMINATION:" . . . The best way to avoid creating a discriminatory inference is to m ake and docum ent em ployment decisions ba sed on con sistent company practices and obje ctive criteria. Employment decisions or practices based on protected status, . . .sex,. . . or involvement in a legal process are presumptively unlawful . . . Em ployment policies and practices having a "di sparate impact" on protected groups i n employment are presumptively unlawful even if the impact is unintended. . .

Sexual Hara ssment: Sexual harassm ent is a f orm of sex discrimination and is unlawful. Sexua l harassment may be found in implied and explicit verbal or phy sical conduct of a sexual nature if the purpose or effect of the conduct is one of the two type:

- Quid pro quo, or the conditioning of em ployment, job benefits, or opportunities upon se xual favors; or
- the creation of a hostile, intimi dating, or offensive work environment. . . .

Employers can and shoul d take proactive measures to avoid sexual harassment lawsuits. These include:

- Developing and implementing an anti-harassment policy;
- Having employees sign a statement that they have read and understand the policy;
- Identifying possible harassment situations;
- Investigating any harassment complaint;
- Interviewing the complainant, the alleged harasser and any witnesses;
- Assuring non-retaliation for complaints;
- Making decisions only after reviewing all reliable information;
- Issuing appropriate disciplinary action; and
- Communicating conclusions to the affected employees.

An employer can be liable for sexual harassment committed by its employees, even if such acts are against stated company policy. It is prudent for an employer to tactfully and immediately investigate all situations that may involve or lead to sexual harassment, including any apparent "romances" between an employee and his or her supervisor. Any such investigation must be conducted carefully to guard against claims of discrimination, wrongful termination, defamation, or invasion of privacy. Early consultation with counsel is strongly recommended.

28. Newsome timely, properly and adequately notified W&L of concerns that Gillan's retaliation and subjecting her to hostile, harassing and discriminatory practices may have been a direct result of W&L's ending the contract assignment of his lover and/or mistress. See EXHIBIT "6" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. (EMPHASIS ADDED).

29. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that upon Horwitz being removed from Newsome's desk, W&L decided to assign Newsome to Brian P. Gillan ("Gillan"). Gillan being with W&L for only a few months however, having been assigned approximately two or three Secretaries/Legal Assistants prior to Newsome (with Newsome being the third or fourth) because of his pattern-of-harassment of female employees. While Gillan complimented Newsome on her work (as evidenced in e-mail – i.e advising "advising "You're the best!")" see EXHIBIT "7" – December 21, 2006 E-mail From Gillan to Newsome attached hereto and incorporated by reference) for some reason, he decided to begin to subject her to harassment, hostile treatment threats, and discriminatory practices to which Newsome objected. Newsome being confident in her work abilities and capabilities to perform duties assigned her. Newsome working in a contract employee position prior to obtaining permanent employment with Wood & Lamping. (EMPHASIS ADDED). Wood & Lamping having sufficient time and opportunity to review and observe Newsome's work habits/work ethics and after doing so, offered her employment.

30. Newsome was qualified for the job she was hired for and the additional assignments given. Newsome possess sufficient computer skills and computer knowledge to perform the job duties assigned her. See EXHIBIT "8" – Test Results of Newsome's Computer Skills attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. Newsome's professional attitude and work ethics can be sustained as provided in Letters of References attached hereto at EXHIBIT "9" and incorporated herein by reference.

31. Newsome was shocked to receive the VICIOUS and HOSTILE e-mail from Gillan – an e-mail craftily drafte d over the WEEKEND (Saturday, January 13, 2007) and a great deal o f time put in it as W&L's continuing the systematic discriminatory practices leveled against Newsome. (See EXHIBIT "6" – January 13, 2007 E-mail From Gillan to Newsome and Newsome's Response of January 15, 2007, attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.) An e-mail to which Gillan did not want Newsome to respond because he and W&L were attempting to set the stage in creating documents to place in her e mployment file. However, to W&L' s and Gillan's disappointment, Newsome's concerns of such employment violations required her to respond and are addressed and/or memorialized in response to e-mail. See EXHIBIT "6" attached hereto. Moreover, the W&L' s record's will evidence and support do cuments provided by Newsome to mem orialize concerns of employment violations. Gillan specializes in e mployment law; therefore, a reasonable mind may conclude that his e-m ail to Newsom e was create d with m alicious intent and pretext purposes – i.e. to cover-up/mask an illegal animus/employment discrimination and retaliation.

A reasona ble mind may conclude that AFTER obtaining inform ation on Newso me's engagement in protecte d activities, W&L hatc hed a plan to create a hostile, r etaliatory and discriminatory work en vironment in efforts o f forcing her to qu it and/or to l ay the gro undwork for the unlawful/illegal termination of Newsome's employment. W&L's harassment was being done by Gillan's use of e-mails as well as verbal confrontat ions, over Newsome's objections. Gillan heavily relies on e-m ails to launch his attacks and to c arry on em ployment violations (i.e as that with the paralegal he had an affair with).

Although Gillan w as advised by Griffith (H uman Resources Representative) to cease such behavior and correspondence via e-mail; Gillan continued to do so. Such unlawful/illegal actions by Gillan had becom e more hostil e, brutal, unrelenting and vicious that Newsom e beca me emotionally affected (reducing her to tears/crying) by such and was witnessed by Griffith who called Newsome into her office to discuss the matter. (EMPHASIS ADDED). In that Newsome had put in for Vacation Leave, Griffith advised the m atter would be looked into while she was out on vacation and Griffith would let her know h ow W&L intends to handle when she returned. Whe n Newsom e returned from vacation, W&L had not done any thing and advised Newsome that Gillan wanted to continue to work with her. Newsome voiced her objections and advised that she could not understand W&L's decision in that Gillan made it clear it was not working out (evidenced in e-mail). Nevertheless, W&L required Newsome to continue to work with Gillan; however, did not require white employees assigned him prior to Newsome's employment to continue under such hostile and harassing conditions when they complained. Newsome again complained and advised that she would take the matter to William Ellis (attorney /Partner at W&L) of what was going on. Ellis being a litigation attorney and advising Newsome during her employment that if there were any problems that she could come talk to him. Only after notifying of doing this, was Gillan pulled. Leaving Newsome to believe that W&L's refusal to remove Gillan in the beginning, left the appearance and/or impression that certain ones at W&L may have agreed with Gillan's harassment, discriminatory treatment and the hostile environment he created; moreover, was behind his acts in that they knew how it was affecting Newsome (emotionally and physically) and interference with performance of job duties. More over, that certain ones at W&L allowed Gillan to proceed in such a manner they knew were clearly in violation of Title VII and their Policies and Procedures; however, allowed him to proceed. Gillan is an attorney who was known to be engaging in such acts that may present a liability to W&L; however, W&L allowed him to remain in its employment and continue such discriminatory practices. Again, Gillan is an attorney who specializes in employment law; therefore, a reasonable mind may conclude he was aware of his conduct and the liability thereof. Moreover, W&L knew as well and supported such behavior and conduct of Gillan – as evidenced in its retaining his employment and paying the fees he charged W&L for hours used to commit such discriminatory practices.

32. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE that during Newsome's employment, W&L terminated another attorney (Peter K. Newman). From Newsome's understanding, Newman was painted as an attorney with behavior that was hostile, aggressive, harassing, etc.; however, W&L terminated his employment. More over, after the incident gave his assistant, Kathy Richey ("Richey") some time off after the ordeal. Nevertheless, W&L allowed Gillan to continue on knowing his history, reputation, pattern-of-discriminatory practices; moreover, potential liability to W&L. (EMPHASIS ADDED).

33. W&L allowed Gillan to remain in its employment over the REPEAT objection of SENIOR PARTNERS (i.e. Eric C. Holzapfel and William R. Ellis) of the law firm. Holzapfel having over approximately 30 years with W&L. Both Holzapfel and Ellis deciding to leave W&L and not please with the administration and/or handling of matters. (EMPHASIS ADDED).

34. The actions of Gillan clearly violated W&L's policies/procedures regarding "Discrimination" and "Sexual Harassment." Nevertheless, W&L continued to employ Gillan and pay him for services he billed W&L for. (EMPHASIS ADDED). Gillan violating policies and procedures outlined in W&L's Employee Handbook through such discriminatory practices. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE PRETEXT, that while Newsome retained a copy of W&L's Employee Handbook at her desk, upon cleaning out her desk after being terminated, she noticed that W&L had a representative remove Newsome's Employee Handbook from her desk (Newsome kept her desk locked). Newsome believes a reasonable mind may conclude that such act by W&L was done with willful and malicious intent. Moreover, was PRETEXT - done to shield and/or cover-up an illegal animus. The Employee handbook containing pertinent information regarding nondiscrimination for the filing of complaints, its discrimination policy and sexual harassment policies along with other policies and/or procedures of W&L.

35. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that certain Senior Partners made it known as to their concerns regarding Brian Gillan (i.e. what is it that he does at the firm /his purpose); however, Gillan was allowed to remain in the employment of W&L. Gillan being employed at the time of Newsome's termination. Concerns being made known of Gillan's employment in that he does not bring in a great deal of business to the practice; moreover, during the time Newsome worked with Gillan, a great deal of his time was being billed directly to W&L (not hours for work on client matters). Not only that, during his employment, he received increases in the hourly rate he was charging for his services – hours used to draft e-mails as that submitted to Newsome and time used to subject her to hostile, harassing and discriminatory practices. From Newsome's understanding, it appears objections from PARTNERS OF THE FIRM over Gillan's behavior and employment came into question*; however, as with Newsome's concerns, W&L clearly ignored. Resulting in attorneys with a great amount of longevity and seniority leaving W&L. (EMPHASIS ADDED). Attorneys who questioned the employment and unethical practices of Gillan. Neither was Gillan bringing in much business for the firm. Nevertheless, W&L was CONTINUING to INCREASE the HOURLY RATE INCREASES for Gillan. While W&L would want one to think that it had to subject me to frivolous reduction-in-force for economic reasons; however, then W&L turns around and hire SEVERAL white employees shortly AFTER Newsome's termination.

A reasonable mind may conclude given the facts and evidence any argument that W&L may attempt to assert for the elimination of Newsome's position is pretext to shield/mask an illegal animus. Moreover, that the keeping of an attorney who an investigation may yield repeatedly violated the laws under Title VII and other governing statutes/laws, is W&L condoning of such unlawful/illegal discriminatory practices. That Newsome's termination was in retaliation of her reporting of unlawful employment violations during her employment. As well as W&L's knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities. Therefore, any assertion that reduction in eliminating Newsome's position is merely pretext and an investigation into this matter may yield evidence to support that W&L provided Gillan as well as other white employees with additional salary increases and promotions; while it deprived African-Americans such salary increases and promotions. Clearly no financial problems there if they were able to extend special promotions and salary increases. Then SHORTLY after Newsome's termination, W&L employed SEVERAL white employees in its efforts to create an ALL-white work force. Thus, supporting that any proffered reason by W&L is pretext to mask/shield an illegal animus – Newsome's complaining of employment violations and W&L's knowledge of Newsome's participation in protected activities.

36. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE that an investigation will yield that W&L hired white employees shortly AFTER Newsome's unlawful/illegal termination. Moreover, that the salaries offered these newly hired white employees may have exceeded that of Newsome and/or that Newsome was replaced by a white person. Rebutting any frivolous claims W&L may attempt to assert was for financial and/or economic reasons.

37. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE that should W&L assert any such claim as to the need for Newsome's termination may have been for financial/economic purposes, she believes a reasonable mind may conclude that she was making way less in salary than Gillan and other whites that were repeatedly given salary increases. Moreover, over the advice of seasoned lawyers and PARTNERS, W&L elected to keep on Gillan who barely brought in any business or money for the firm and paid Gillan a substantial salary compared to that of Newsome*. Moreover, during his employment provided him with rapid increase(s) in hourly rates with knowledge that a great deal of his hours was being billed to W&L. W&L made a willful, deliberate and conscious decision to keep Gillan employed and to pay him an extremely high salary at the expense of Newsome and others who objected to his work ethics, discriminatory practices as well as employment violations.

38. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE that during Newsome's employment she was required to perform duties of that of paralegals; however, did not obtain the title or pay associated with it. However, whites similarly situated that were performing such duties were either promoted to such a title and may have obtained additional pay to compensate them for the additional duties (if any) obtained while Newsome (African-American) just obtained additional duties and was required to remain at her annual salary and only obtained annual salary increase. While Newsome questioned such practices with Human Resources; she was still denied salary increases as that given to white employees.

39. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE that on October 9, 2008, Newsome was unlawfully/illegally evicted from her apartment (due to the ongoing landlord matter Horwitz was assigned to assist with). Such actions coming although there was a binding Injunction and Restraining Order issued by the Court and Newsome was required to pay rent into escrow which was current at the time of such actions – See EXHIBIT "11" – Injunction and Restraining Order attached hereto and incorporated by reference. As a direct and proximate result, Newsome filed a Complaint of criminal charges with the Federal Bureau of Investigations ("FBI") – a matter that Newsome believes is still pending at the time of the filing of this instant Charge. It is important to note that W&L was made aware of this situation as well as the fact that Newsome had filed a formal charge with the FBI. Said notification was made known verbally and via written correspondence. (See EXHIBIT "12" – October 15, 2008 E-mail & Interoffice Memorandum of Newsome to Griffith attached hereto and incorporated by reference). IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that while W&L states in its Employee Handbook, that it will not discriminate against employees who engage in protected activities, Newsome's termination of employment on January 9, 2009, was illegally motivated because she exercised rights secured to her under the Civil Rights Act, United States Constitution and/or the applicable statutes/laws governing said matters. Moreover, W&L's representative's taking of Newsome's Employee Handbook prior to her termination may leave a reasonable mind to conclude the January 9, 2009 reasons provided for her termination was PRETEXT to mask/shield an illegal animus. Moreover, to shield/ mask the fact that their Employee Handbook addresses it will not discriminate against employee who engages in protected activities (i.e filed law suit). Furthermore, the acts of W&L will support premeditation and forethought in its knowledge that it was acting in violation of the laws governing said matters – resulting in its theft, removal and destruction of evidence from Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) that it knew was incrementing. HOWEVER, W&L IS DISAPPOINTED TO FIND THAT NEWSOME RETAINED COPIES ELSEWHERE.

While discussing the October 9, 2009 incident with Thomas Breed (attorney Newsome worked with at W&L), he asked Newsome whether or not she needed representation. Newsome advised Breed that she had sought W&L's assistance and was assigned Elizabeth Horwitz; however, Horwitz developed an attitude because Newsome refused to waive rights secured under the Fair Housing Act and/or applicable statutes/laws governing such matters. Newsome advised Breed she was in no hurry and that she had filed a complaint with the appropriate agency (FBI) to investigate the matter.

Documentation in W&L's possession will support its knowledge that it was first advised of medical concerns of Newsome as early as October 2008. Moreover, how Newsome had been affected mentally, emotionally, and physically and had to obtain a doctor's excuse for time off from work. See EXHIBIT "12" attached hereto and incorporated by reference.

40. W&L aware of the criminal acts rendered me of October 9, 2008, attempted to use such information to subject me to discriminatory practices and retaliation. Moreover, use this situation against me and attempt to make it appear as though there was a problem with my attendance – ALTHOUGH I was not in violation of any of its policies and procedures and had the time to use (See EXHIBIT "4" – "ATTENDENCE POLICY" and "SICK LEAVE" of Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual at pages 2 and 26-27 attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein). In an effort to add SALT to the wound and horrific ordeal

Newsome had just encountered, W&L was attempting to use this matter for PRETEXT purposes - i.e. efforts to cover-up/mask its discriminatory practices. W&L was fully aware that the October 9, 2008 matter resulted from the legal matters that I brought to its attention in 2007. Griffith in an e-mail to me of October 15, 2008 stated:

> Denise. We do need to meet this after noon to discuss your being out of the office so much over the last couple of days. Also, you need to inform me in advance on doctor's appointments. 45 minutes before an appointment is not sufficient time. Please see me when you return. Andrea.

See EXHBIBIT "12" - October 15, 2008 Correspondence Between Newsome and Griffith attached hereto and incorporated by reference.

Newsome responding to Griffith's October 15, 2008 E-mail via Interoffice Memorandum which states in part:

> As you are aware, per my voicemail messages of October 9, 2008, my apartment was burglarized, etc. I had to leave work not realizing the magnitude of this crime; however, I was devastated and seriously affected by this crime.
> On October 11, 2008, I was admitted to the Emergency Room and test were run out of concerns from symptoms I was having. The doctor recommended that I return to work on 10/14/08, in which I did. (See Document Attached).
> My doctor's appointment for 10/10/08 was scheduled way in advance and prior to the October 9, 2008, criminal actions. The appointment that I set for 10/13/08 was made on 10/10/08; however, had to be cancelled and rescheduled for today in that my doctor wanted this test done right away.
> Without going into details where things are at, as a direct and proximate result of the 10/09/08 criminal acts rendered me, a Criminal Complaint has been filed with the FBI (Federal Bureau of Investigations) . . .

Moreover, provided Griffith with a copy of the "Return to Work" provided by Physician to support Newsome was required to take time off from work. This was TIME in which Newsome had available to her to use under W&L's policies and procedures. This was TIME in which Newsome was required to use prior to year end or be compensated for it. See EXHBIBIT "12" - October 15, 2008 Correspondence Between Newsome and Griffith attached hereto and incorporated by reference.

41. In December 2008 (well over 30 days), Newsome again notified W&L through its representative Andrea Griffith ("Griffith"), Human Resource Manager/Representative, of her moving forward and inquired into how W&L handled medical leave to begin the medical procedure doctors recommended. While Griffith was made aware of medical issue Newsome was dealing with (as early as October 2008), it was in December 2008 - after medical staff finally got back with Newsome to advise of opening to begin the medical process recommended, that Newsome went to Griffith to determine how W&L handles such medical requests and was advised that she would be okay under the FMLA. Moreover, that W&L would provide a percentage of her salary during the time taken.

Newsome advised Griffith of the approximate date (January 29, 2009) on which she was to begin the procedure. Griffith advised Newsome she could use either her sick time, vacation time and/or both, but would wait to see how much time would be required. Thus supporting W&L's knowledge of Newsome being availed FMLA protection. Newsome kept her January 29, 2009 appointment and advised W&L of such as well as concerns of discrimination under the FMLA. See EXHIBIT "28" – January 30, 2009 Letter to Andrea Griffith and C.J. Schmidt attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

> When requesting unpaid leave, employee need not mention Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) and can be completely ignorant of benefits conferred by Act, and notice is sufficient if employee provides employer with enough information to put employer on notice that FMLA-qualifying leave is needed . Stoops v. One Call Communications, Inc., 141 F.3d 309 (7th Cir.).

42. W&L's record will reflect that Newsome timely, properly and adequately provided it with notification of concerns of violations. W&L cannot say that Newsome did not report these violations PROMPTLY to them – as Newsome did with the January 9, 2009 termination. See EXHIBIT "13" – January 11, 2009 Letter of Newsome to Andrea M. Griffith and C. J. Schmidt attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. W&L retaliated as a direct and proximate result of Newsome's request for medical leave and retaliated because of its knowledge of her engagement in protected activities. CONTINUING THE SYSTEMATIC DISCRIMINATORY PRACTICES LEVELED AGAINST NEWSOME. Newsome guess she needs to wait and see whether those who commit such discrimination remained employed – leaving a reasonable mind to conclude that W&L indeed tolerates and supports such discriminatory PRACTICES. Newsome is entitled to know whether or not W&L was entitled to deny her the benefits (i.e. – medical insurance, etc.) she was entitled to and that it afforded to other employees (whites). From the information contained in W&L Policies and Procedures Manual, medical coverage is to be continued and/or Newsome is entitled to medical benefits with W&L as that which she had before it violated the Act. From Newsome's understanding of the W&L Policies and Procedures, she is to be "retained on the firm's health plan(s) under the same conditions that applied before leave commenced if employees make their contributions to the plan(s)…. (Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Proceduures Manual @ pp. 12-14)" – See EXHIBIT "4" – "FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. Remember Newsome was covered under the FMLA once verbal notification was provided to Andrea of her medical condition and intent for medical treatment and W&L's handling of such matters. See EXHIBIT "4" of Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual:

> FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT (FMLA)
> Eligibility:
> On October 16, 2000, the firm became subject to the Family and Medical Leave Act ("FMLA"). (Should the firm ever drop below 50 employees, it will remain covered by the Act until the future point when it has no longer employed 50 or more employees for 20 or more weeks in the current or preceding calendar year.) Family and Medical Leave is unpaid unless the employee has paid leave available. (Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ p. 12)
> Reasons for Requesting Leave:
> . . .The firm will need to carefully analyze each situation to determine if the leave qualifies as FMLA leave. In general, the intent of FMLA is to provide leave for medical conditions that require ongoing, continuous care and treatment. The Act is not intended to cover short-term conditions where treatment and recovery are brief. (Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ p. 13)

Procedure for Requesting Leave:
An employee intending to take family or medical leave because of . . .a planned medical treatment, must submit a request a least 30 days before the leave is to begin. If leave is to begin within 30 days, an employee must give notice to the firm as soon as the necessity for leave arises….

…The firm's notice may be given orally, but will be confirmed in writing. (Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ p. 14)

Pay During Leave:
The employee must use all available paid leave (e.g. paid vacation or sick time, short-term disability, worker's comp., etc.) concurrent with FMLA leave… (Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ p. 14)

Benefits during Leave:
Employees will be retained on the firm's health plan(s) under the same conditions that applied before leave commenced if employees make their contributions to the plan(s)…. (Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ p. 14)

Employees who take family and medical leave will not lose any earned…employment benefits....(Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ p. 15)

43. Andrea Griffith advising Newsome that she would be entitled to medical leave. According to W&L, its Policies and Procedures Manual states what Newsome was entitled to under said policies as well as the FMLA – establishing W&L's FAR DEPARTURE from its own policies and procedures to deprive Newsome protected rights and benefits secured to her under the applicable statutes/laws governing said matters:

SHORT-TERM DISABILITY LEAVE
Definitions:

(a) For purposes of this short-term disability leave provision, a "disability" means a personal condition of an employee which causes the employee to be unable to perform the essential functions of the employee's job for an extended and/or indefinite period of time due to personal illness, injury, hospitalization, post surgical recovery, childbirth, complications due to pregnancy or childbirth, or psychological or mental impairment. A "disability" must be established by medical certification as being of an extended or indefinite duration. Common illness and minor injuries are not disabilities. (Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ p. 23)

(b) Short-term disability leave will commence after an absence of seven (7) working days or 52.50 working hours (the waiting period) in a fourteen calendar-day period.

(c) Short-term disability begins on the eighth working day or 52.50 hours of absence.

Length of Leave and Compensation:

> (a) Employees may use earned sick time (or earned vacation time if sick time is unavailable) during the seven-day waiting period or take it unpaid.
> (c) A full-time employee who has completed one year of continuous employment shall be entitled to fifty (50) days (or 375 hours) of paid disability leave at the rate of eighty percent (80%) of the employee's hourly rate of pay, plus his or her longevity rate (if applicable), in effect on the first day of unpaid absence prior to the commencement of the disability leave. Salaried employees shall be compensated at the rate of eighty percent (80%) of the employee's weekly salary.

(Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ pp. 23 & 24)

44. On January 8, 2009, Newsome submitted her Request for Medical Leave on January 29, 2009 for the medical procedure recommended by her doctors. (See attached hereto as EXHIBIT "14" and incorporated herein by reference as if set forth in full). Form clearly states reason as "MEDICAL LEAVE." Newsome's Request for this leave was approved by the attorneys (Sharon S. Parsley and Thomas J. Breed) she assisted and then submitted to Griffith for handling. Newsome followed the procedures of W&L to obtain this leave. This document further evidences Newsome's protection under the FMLA. While Newsome was terminated, she still attended said appointment.

45. On January 9, 2009, Newsome was taken by surprise when Griffith approached her and asked to see her. Newsome followed Griffith to her office where C. J. Schmidt (an attorney and Managing Partner at W&L) was awaiting their arrival. During this meeting Newsome was advised that her employment with W&L was being terminated. Newsome being advised her position having to be eliminated due to reduction in force necessitated by the conditions/matters the firm was encountering. Newsome was advised that she would be compensated for that week and given two additional weeks of pay. Newsome was advised that her medical insurance would lapse at the end of January 2009 (approximately two days after beginning of the medical process Newsome advised Griffith of first in October 2008 and after being contacted by doctor's medical staff, submitting request for medical leave on January 8, 2009) and that any additional medical coverage could be maintained through COBRA if she desired. Thus supporting W&L's termination of Newsome was illegally motivated and to deprive her protection under the FMLA; moreover to deprive her benefits afforded to other white employees similarly situated.

> Employer may not use reduction-in-force (RIF),[9] reorganization, or improved-efficiency rationale as pretext to mask actual discrimination or retaliation for employee's exercise of FMLA rights; the mere incantation of the mantra of "efficiency" is not a talisman insulating an employer from liability for invidious discrimination. Hodgens v. General Dynamics Corp., 144 F.3d 151 (1998). Moreover, Hodgens goes on to find "an employer may not use its RIF/reorganization/improved-efficiency rationale as a pretext to mask actual discrimination or retaliation; the mere incantation of

Nor are the y the objectives of public policy underl ying statutes like the FMLA or the ADA."

Ohio law is clear that an employer may not retaliate against an employee who exercises rights under the FMLA –

> W&L 2/4/09 Letter From Paul R. Berninger to Newsome:
> . . . I had previousl y told y ou that I believed th at the fir m would accept m y recommendation to extend your health insurance at the firm's cost for a period of ti me to allow you to attend to a medical matter which was pending suffered while employed by the firm as well as your perception of an unlawful termination. You did not respond to the issue of resolution based on an extension of health insurance coverage.

I have been assured by the firm that we would extend your health insurance coverage for a reasonable period, but only on the condition that you sign a release of all your perceived claims. *As you know, that means that if you accept our offer of health insurance coverage for a period of time, yet to be determined, you could not file any charges, lawsuits or other complaints against the firm regarding your employment and separation of employment.

(i) An investigation and evidence will support a pattern-of-discrimination by W&L against African-Americans. One of W&L's attorney (Paul Berninger) advised Newsome of another African-American (Angie Hart) bringing of action and not being successful. Newsome advising lack of knowledge of action by Angie Hart and circumstances surrounding her. (See EXHIBIT "16" – February 2, 2009 Letter of Newsome to Berninger attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein); however, Newsome's interest is in W&L's actions regarding the handling of her termination.

2/2/09 Letter From Newsome to Paul R. Berninger:

. . . From my understanding of the conversation, Wood & Lamping (Andrea) acknowledges that I advised of my request regarding medical procedure I discussed with her. At this time, Wood & Lamping is willing to extend me medical coverage under COBRA where they will make the payments. However, in exchange for such agreement, I would be required to sign a Release relinquishing all rights that I may have to bring charges and/or lawsuit against Wood & Lamping for any injury/harm I sustained from violation s – i.e. wrongful discharge, retaliation, racial discrimination, etc. As I shared with you, my main focus right now is getting the medical procedure done that I was advised of any other relief I seek will be done in the applicable time permitted by statute/laws.

HOWEVER, PLEASE LET ME REITERATE, it is Wood & Lamping's duty and responsibility to mitigate damages – that includes continuing medical coverage and/or benefits – in the showing of good faith (not in continuance of bad faith or malicious behavior, etc. to cause me additional injury/harm).

You mentioned that an employee, Angie, brought charges against Wood & Lamping which was unsuccessful. While I am not aware of any charges by Angie, I would think that any comparison of my treatment and handling would be left up to the appropriate agency to handle*; moreover, up to a jury to decide*. I believe that the liability in my situation is clear and that Wood & Lamping retaliated against me in interfering with my rights under the Family and Medical Leave Act; moreover, may be in retaliation of its knowledge of my engagement in protected activities.

Being brief:

Nevertheless, based o n a dditional inform ation pr oved b y Berninger regarding Angie Hart, it no w raises VALID and SERIOUS concerns as to whether W&L committed s imilar cri minal acts and removed docum entation/evidence from Angie Hart's desk that it kn ew would prove to be incriminating. Blindsiding Hart as it did Newsom e. However, to W&L's disappointment, Newsome maintained additional copies.

Causal Connection:

23. In determining whether a causal connection exists, the proximity between the protected activity and the adverse employment action is often "telling." Holland v. Jefferson Natl. Life Ins. Co., 50 FEP Cases 1215, 1221 (7th Cir. 1989), quoting Reeder-Baker v. Lincoln Nat'l Corp., 42 FEP Cases 1567 (N.D. Ind. 1986). The closer the proximity between the protected activity and the adverse employment action, the stronger the inference of a causal connection becomes. See Johnson v. Sullivan, 57 FEP Cases 124 (7th Cir. 1991) (court held that plaintiff showed causal connection and established prima facie case of retaliation where plaintiff was discharged within days of filing a . . . race discrimination lawsuit); Waddell v. Small Tube Prods., Inc., 41 FEP Cases 988 (3d Cir. 1986) (court properly inferred retaliatory motive from evidence that defendant's decision to rehire plaintiff was rescinded one day after the defendant received notice that state FEP agency had dismissed plaintiff's charges of discrimination).

24. A causal connection may be established with evidence that the adverse employment action closely followed the protected activity. Holland v. Jefferson National Life Ins. Co., 50 FEP Cases 1215 (7th Cir. 1989).

> . . . a court may look to the temporal proximity of the adverse action to the protected activity to determine where there is a causal connection. EEOC v. Avery Dennison Corp., 72 FEP Cases 1602, 1609 (6th Cir. 1997)(citation and quote within quote omitted).
> Temporal relationship between a plaintiff's participation in protected activities and a defendant's alleged retaliatory conduct is an important factor in establishing a causal connection. Gonzales v. State of Ohio, Dept. of Taxation, 78 FEP Cases 1561, 1564 (S.D. Ohio 1998).

30. The Commission having established a prima facie case, the burden of production shifted to Respondent to "articulate some legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason" for the employment action. McDonnell Douglas, supra at 802, 5 FEP Cases at 969. To meet this burden of production, Respondent must:

> . . . "clearly set forth, through th e introduction of admissible evidence," reasons for its actions which, if believed by the trier of f act, would support a fin ding that unlawful discrim ination was n ot the cause of the employment action. *St. Mary's Honor Center v. > 32. Re spondent having m et its burden of p roduction, the Commission m ust pro ve that R espondent retaliated against Complainant because he engaged in protected activity . Hicks, supra at 511, 62 FEP Cases at 100. [unlawful retaliation]." Id., at 515, 62 FEP Cases at 102, quoting Burdine, 450 U.S. at 253, 25 FEP Cases at 115.

47. PRIMA FACIE - CAUSAL CONNECTION: (a) W&L's termination of Newsome occurred on January 9, 2009. (b) SMR&S' client 's (Stor-All 's) Amnesty Weekend was set for January 9th thru January 11th. Stor-All advising Newsome of Amnesty Weekend via facsimile at the number assigned Ne wsome by W &L. See EXHIBIT "18" – 12/19/08 Fax From Lori Whiteside/Stor-All attached hereto and incorporat ed by re ference. (c) On January 9, 2009, Stor-All provided Newsome with "NOTICE TO LEAVE T HE PREMISES." See EXHIBIT " 19" attached hereto and i ncorporated by reference . (d) While Stor-All provided Newsome with faxes at W &L during her employment, on the date of Newsome's termination Stor-All did not provide her with th e "Notice to Leave the Premises" via facsimile (as it did with th e 12/19/08 fax and others) because it knew that W&L was terminating Ne wsome's employment on said date. (e) On Janua ry 20, 2009, SMR&S on behalf of Stor-All filed a lawsuit against Newsome.

48. On January 9, 2009, W&L waited until the end of the day and had Griffith approach Newsome, taking Ne wsome by surprise*,[10] and asked Ne wsome to com e to her offic e where C.J. Schmidt (attorney and Managing Partner of W&L) was waiting for both of them to return. It was at this time, that Newsom e was advised that her e mployment with W&L was being ter minated due to the need to elim inate her position. Ne wsome was t aken by surprise with this news in that she was not aware o r given n otice of W&L 's intent to do so. Neither was Newsome a ware of a ny employment violations a nd/or p roblems W&L was having wit h her wo rk (if any). coverage she desired, would have to be obtained through COBRA which would kick in immediately and would have to be paid by her.

Newsome believe the actions by W&L and/or its representatives were willful, malicious and wanton and done to deprive Newsome r ights secured/guaranteed under the FMLA, and/or the applicable statutes/laws governing said matters. Newsome believe such acts by W&L and/or its representatives are discriminatory and may be based on race as well as retaliatory for her complaining of violations and discriminatory treatment during her employment – continuation of SYSTEMATIC discriminatory practices. W&L used the SURPRISE-Approach to terminate Newsome. An approach discouraged in W&L as addressed in its Employer's Guide. However, this was an approach used because W&L was fully aware that it had created criminal/civil violations in the handling of Newsome's termination and was attempting to cover-up such practices. Newsome believes that her employment with W&L was terminated as a direct and proximate result of its knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities. In support thereof, Newsome states:[11]

a) During Newsome's employment white employees and/or those similarly situated provided notice of medical procedures that they needed and *said white employees were allowed to proceed with such medical procedures without losing their jobs; moreover, some had to obtain medical procedures on a last-minute basis which did not afford them the opportunity to notify W&L prior to seeking such attention, however, they were not terminated and they were allowed to return to their employment with W&L. When white employees did not have time for sick leave and/or medical leave W&L took extra steps to accommodate them with the time and allowed them to return to employment. Therefore, Newsome believes her termination with W&L may have been a direct and proximate result to deprive Newsome rights secured/guaranteed under the FMLA and was racially motivated based on her race. Furthermore, in retaliation of Newsome's participation in protected activities known to W&L and/or its representatives.

W&L failed to provide Newsome with the entitlements set forth in the FMLA based on her race and as a direct and proximate result of its knowledge of her engagement in protected activity. W&L's knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activity resulted in its removal and destruction of evidence it having knowledge would be incriminating and reveal employment violations by it against Newsome.

> Employer may not defend its interference with FMLA's substantive rights on the ground that it treats all employees equally poorly without discriminating; employer's subjective intent is not relevant, and the issue

[11] Prima Facie Tort: A prima facie tort is the intentional infliction of harm without an excuse or justification that is legally recognizable as such. . . The elements of a malicious discharge claim premised on a prima facie tort are:

(iii) Injury to the plaintiff; and

(iv) Insufficiency or absence of justification for the defendant act.

is simply whether the employer provided its employee the entitlements set forth in FMLA. Hodgens v. General Dynamics Corp., 144 F.3d 151 (1st Cir. 1998).

b) IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE, Newsome kept a copy of the Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual in her desk. However, upon cleaning out her desk after being terminated, Newsome noticed this Manual had been removed by a representative of W&L. Newsome kept her desk locked. Newsome believes the removal of the Manual was done with willful and malicious intent by W&L and/or its representatives to cover-up its employment violations - PRETEXT. Moreover, supports W&L and/or its representatives having knowledge that they were acting in violation of FMLA, Title VII and/or any other applicable laws governing said matters. Furthermore, such acts may support ill motive and the actual/underlying reasons for Newsome's termination. W&L specializes in employment laws, so it knew and/or should have known that its actions were unlawful and/or illegal. Moreover, a reasonable mind may conclude that the taking Newsome's Employee Handbook from her desk may have been acts done by W&L to shield the fact it knew the Employee Handbook contained information pertaining to the handling of FMLA requests, termination, etc. that W&L knew and/or should have known it was violating on January 9, 2009, and it did not want Newsome to be able to use this information in any legal action she may decide to bring. However, to their disappointment, Newsome had obtained a copy of the Employee Handbook in that it was brought to her attention that W&L's representatives were known to practice in such an illegal/unlawful manner to avoid liability. Thus making it difficult for an employee to bring legal action against W&L. A reasonable mind may conclude this is why W&L uses the surprise approach that it advises against in W&L's Employer's Guide in its termination of employees. While W&L took steps to commit civil/criminal wrongs to remove and destroy INCRIMINATING evidence that it knew and/or should have known would be used against it during an investigation (state/federal); it FAILED in such efforts because Newsome also retained a copy of Employee Handbook as well as Employer's Guide.

49. IMPORTANT TO NOTE: During Newsome's meeting where she was advised of termination, Griffith advised that Newsome would have medical insurance coverage through the end of January (2009). Newsome's request for medical leave beginning the medical procedure was for January 29, 2009. Griffith advised Newsome that if she was interested in continuing medical insurance coverage, she could do so under COBRA. Newsome is not aware of any other employee being terminated prior to the medical attention they advised Wood & Lamping they would be having and that such other white and/or similarly situated employee was required to cover their medical expenses under COBRA. In Newsome's case, Wood & Lamping LLP terminated her employment and terminated her medical insurance effective January 31, 2009, and thereafter, Newsome was required to pay for any other medical expenses for the medical services she advised Griffith of in December 2008 directly out of pocket – extremely high premium under the COBRA option (Newsome would be requested to pay 100% of the premium cost) – to secure the medical attention Newsome sought and advised Wood & Lamping/Griffith of. Pursuant to the Wood & Lamping LLP Employer's Guide, it states:

> COBRA gives an employee covered by an employer's group health plan the right to stay covered when coverage is lost due to certain qualifying events, and the employee pays for 100% of the premium cost. COBRA coverage must be elected within 60 days after coverage would otherwise end or from the date the election form was sent, whichever is later. The employer is required to continue the same coverage available to similarly situated employees. The cost can be up to the entire cost of coverage, plus a small (2%) additional charge for administration, as decided by the employer. Employers must maintain records pertaining to compliance with COBRA.

(See EXHIBIT "20" at p. 26 of the Wood & Lamping LLP's Employer's Guide attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference). Given such facts and evidence, Newsome believes a reasonable mind may conclude that Wood & Lamping LLP and/or its representatives are in violation of COBRA. Moreover, acts may be willful, malicious and wanton. These were acts knowingly and deliberately done to deprive Newsome of medical services under the FMLA as well as benefits W &L extended to employees similarly situated. Moreover, that W &L's removal and destruction of Newsome's Employee Handbook were acts done by W&L to shield an illegal animus - PRETEXT. However, to W&L's disappointment, Newsome had obtained a copy of the Wood & Lamping LLP's Employer's Guide handed out at a public seminar hosted by an attorney (Julie R. Pugh) she assisted and Heather Walsh. Newsome being advised during her employment of the corrupt practices of W&L retained a copy of the Employee Handbook and W&L's Employer's Guide.

50. IMPORANT TO NOTE: Newsome believes Wood & Lamping LLP and/or its representative(s) was timely, properly and adequately placed on notice of her intent to have a medical procedure done which would require absence from employment. Looking in "The Employer's Guide to Employment Law in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana" of W &L that Newsome obtained from the public seminar that Julie Pugh and Heather Walsh conducted it states (boldface, underline, italics added for emphasis):

> If the condition for which leave is granted is foreseeable, employees must provide the employer with 30 days notice to be entitled to the protection of the FMLA. . .
> Upon return from leave granted under the FMLA, employees are entitled to reinstatement to the position of employment previously held, or to an equivalent position with equivalent benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment . . . Employer's may not interfere with any employee's attempt to exercise his/her rights under the FMLA. It is also illegal for employers to discriminate against or discharge an employee because he/she has attempted to exercise his/her rights. . .granted by the FMLA.

See EXHIBIT "20" at p. 32 of Wood & Lamping's Employer's Guide attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. Therefore a reasonable mind may conclude that W&L's and/or its representative's removal of Newsome's Employee Handbook (Newsome kept her desk locked) was a willful and malicious act and PRETEXT to shield its knowledge that it was committing legal wrongs against Newsome.

51. On or about January 16, 2009, Newsome filed an Official Complaint with the Secretary of Labor/Department of Labor (Wage & Hour Division) under the statutes/laws governing rights protected under the Family and Medical Leave Act ("FMLA"). IMPORTANT TO NOTE, that while Newsome has filed a FMLA Complaint, through this INSTANT Charge of Discrimination, she seek relief protecting rights secured under Title VII and/or statutes/laws governing unlawful employment practices – prohibiting discrimination and retaliation based on race, sex and participation in protected activities.

52. Newsome is not aware of any male employees at W&L having to endure such racial, discriminatory, prejudicial, hostile, retaliatory and harassing treatment.

53. W&L, through its duly authorized agents and employees who acted on behalf of W&L and within the scope of their employment, intentionally discriminated against Newsome based on her race, sex and engagement/participation in protected activities.

54. As a direct and proximate result of the intentional discriminatory acts and practices of W&L, its agents and employees, including the taking away of job duties to give to white employees to provide them with job security,[12] and terminating Newsome's employment AFTER she requested medical leave and due to her reporting and/or objecting to discriminatory practices; Newsome has suffered and continues to suffer injury, including past and future loss of income and other employment benefits, severe emotional pain and suffering, mental anguish, humiliation, loss of enjoyment of life, costs associated with obtaining reemployment, embarrassment, damage to her reputation, and other past and future pecuniary losses.

55. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE that through this instant Charge of Discrimination, Newsome seeks the EEOC's/OCRC's jurisdiction to determine whether or not the unlawful employment practices rendered her is individual and/or systematic discrimination pursuant to 29 C.F.R. § 1601.6.

56. W&L's acts described above and/or throughout this instant Complaint were intentional, willful, and performed with malice or reckless indifference to Newsome's federally protected rights, within the meaning of the FMLA (29 USC § 2654, 29 CFR 825.401) and/or the applicable statutes/laws governing such matters. W&L's violation of the FMLA and denial of benefits to Newsome (to which she was entitled) was a direct and proximate result of her race and participation in protected activities. Moreover, in keeping with the SYSTEMATIC discrimination practices leveled against Newsome.

57. The termination of Newsome's employment by W&L constituted a wrongful discharge and violated public policy of the State of Ohio, as articulated in the Ohio Human Rights Act. Moreover, Ohio Anti-Discrimination laws.

58. As a direct and proximate result of the acts and practices of W&L, its agents and employees, in the wrongful discharge of Newsome from employment, Newsome has suffered and continues to suffer injury/harm, including loss of employment, past and future loss of income and Care should be taken to be sure that the determination of which employees are to be laid off is done in a nondiscriminatory way. Appropriate factors to consider include the need for a particular job function, seniority, and objectively determined by job performance. . . . Final Paycheck and Paperwork: Pay, including any benefits and unused vacation, should be delivered at the termination meeting. This is not only good policy, frequently it's the law. . . . In addition, the employee should be given the termination paperwork while still on the premises, and sign a receipt form. If the employee refuses to sign, the fact should be noted on the paperwork in the employee's presence.

other employment benefits, severe emotional pain and suffering, mental anguish, humiliation, loss of enjoyment of life, costs associated with obtaining reemployment, embarrassment, damage to her reputation and other past and future pecuniary losses.

59. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE that W&L specializes in employment law (i.e. which includes DISCRIMINATION in employment); therefore, it knew and/or should have known that its acts rendered Newsome was discriminatory and unlawful/illegal. In fact, in its Wood & Lamping, LLP The Employer's Guide to Employment Law in Ohio, Kentucky, and Indiana at p. 24 – Informing the Employee, it states: *Obtain Legal Advice. Every situation is different; therefore employers should consult with their attorney before disciplining or discharging an employee. Wood & Lamping regularly consults with clients regarding problems with employees and/or the discharge of employees, advising them as to the best way to handle a particular situation in order to AVOID potential litigation. (See EXHIBIT "20" attached hereto and incorporated herein by reference as if set forth in full). Moreover, a reasonable mind may conclude W&L and/or its representative's taking of Newsome's Employee Handbook was clear and convincing knowledge it was aware civil/criminal wrongs were being committed. Furthermore, that such act was done to shield/mask an illegal animus. A reasonable mind may conclude based on information in W&L's Employer's Guide whether such examples as the theft of Newsome's property is the advice W&L provide to client's to AVOID potential litigation.

60. IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE that Newsome was hired on with W&L on September 11, 2006, AFTER working briefly as a contract worker. It was made known by certain attorneys at W&L that they were pleased with Newsome's work *and wanted to hire her on for a position with them. Newsome was contacted by a representative at an employment agency and advised of W&L's request for the employment of her services which Newsome accepted. Newsome was hired on as an *Estate Planning Coordinator. During the course of her employment and at the termination of her employment the duties of an Estate Planning Coordinator were still needed. To assure that other white employees had a job and/or employment W&L took the job duties of the Estate Planning Coordinator from Newsome and gave them to white employees to perform. Newsome timely* objected to the taking away of the job duties of the Estate Planning Coordinator. Newsome shared her disappointment with Griffith about this change and/or decision of W&L in that she enjoyed what she was doing and the people she worked with. Griffith advised Newsome that there were no complaints in her job performance as the Estate Planning Coordinator; however, the decision to take away job duties was that of those who make such decisions at W&L. Nevertheless, W&L and/or its representatives had made a decision that Newsome would lose these duties and they would be given to white employees. While Newsome lost the job duties of Estate Planning Coordinator to white employee(s), she continued to work throughout her course of employment with at least one attorney at ALL times in the Estate Planning group – at the beginning and during her employment she was assigned Jan M. Frankel (Partner) and during her employment W&L removed Frankel and provided her with Thomas J. Breed ("Breed") (Partner and Department Head of the Estate Planning Group – Group to which Newsome was hired as the Estate Planning Coordinator). During Newsome's employment Breed also became a member of the Executive Committee – group known for making the hiring and termination of employee decisions.[13] (EMPHASIS ADDED). Newsome was working with Breed at the time of her termination. Breed's performance of his work required the job duties Newsome provided as Estate Planning Coordinator that were taken away and given to white employees.

[13] INTERVIEWING AND HIRING. . . Failure to adhere to consistent procedures may encourage claims of discrimination, misrepresentation, or breach of oral employment agreement. – EXHIBIT "20" - W&L's Employer's Guide at page 3.

It is important to note whenever such changes were made, Newsome was advised it was because of her work ethics, ability to perform the duties being assigned her and W&L needing to keep attorneys assigned to her happy – thus, providing the confidence W&L and/or its representatives had in Newsome's ability to perform her duties and the tasks assigned her. Attorneys W&L assigned Newsome that they wanted to keep happy were: (a) V. Brandon McGrath, Sharon S. Parsley and Thomas J. Breed.

61. W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was WITHOUT good cause. Moreover, W&L failed to follow its own policies and procedures for terminating Newsome's employment. (EMPHASIS ADDED).[14] Newsome's termination was in retaliation to W&L's knowledge of her engagement in protected activity as well as its knowledge that one of its attorneys (Thomas J. Breed's) former law firm, Schwartz Manes & Ruby ("SMR&S") – now known as Schwartz Manes Ruby & Slovin, on behalf of SMR&S' client (Stor-All), was in the process of bringing a lawsuit against Newsome regarding a personal matter. Therefore, SMR&S' representation of its client (Stor-All) and Newsome's employment at W&L would create a CONFLICT OF INTEREST!! (EMPHASIS ADDED). Encompassed with such information, W&L's obtaining knowledge of such information was determined to deprive Newsome rights secured under the FMLA, Civil Rights Act, Constitution and other governing statutes/laws, moved swiftly to terminate Newsome's employment. As a result, W&L deprived Newsome medical benefits/fringe benefits afforded to white employees and/or those similarly situated. See:

> "COMPENSATION AND BENEFITS:" Vacations, holidays, paid sick leave, other leaves, and benefits are not required by law, but once established by company policy, must be available to all employees on a nondiscriminatory basis. Statutory holidays need not be observed by private employers, except that company observation of holidays must be made available to all employees of similar position.

IV. UNLAWFUL EMPLOYMENT TERMINATION/WRONGFUL DISCHARGE:

62. Courts have ruled on specific factual grounds as to whether an employer has acted in bad faith in the termination of an at-will employee. In the majority of cases, the existence of an employee booklet or self-imposed policies for terminations have given rise to the application of the implied covenant and limited the common-law employment rule by restricting the employer's right to discharge employees without cause. In these cases, the implied covenant is breached when the discharge is without good cause or when the employer fails to follow the prescribed procedures for terminating employees. The implied covenant may also be violated by conduct that falls into other categories such as retaliatory firings, . . . discharges motivated by the employer's desire to deprive an employee of future compensation for past services. 48 Am Jut Proof of Facts 2d 217-218.

[14] See "EMPLOYEE TERMINATION," "EMPLOYEE TERMINATION PAPER WORK" and "INFORMING THE EMPLOYEE" - EXHIBIT "20" - W&L's Employer's Guide at pages 22-24 attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

63. Retaliatory firings have been traditionally the ground for invoking the public policy exception to the common-law at-will employment doctrine. In these cases, the retaliatory act has been held to violate the public interest if the employee has been discharged for performing an act that public policy encourages, or for refusing to engage in conduct that public policy condemns. 48 Am Jur Proof of Facts 2d 224. Newsome's discharge/termination was a direct and proximate result of her engagement in protected activity and exercising of Constitutional/Civil Rights, Title VII, FMLA, acts that public policy encourages, as well as her refusal to waive protected rights secured to her under the laws that public policy condemns.

64. Most courts recognize an exception to the common-law at-will employment doctrine where the termination of the employee is based upon a violation of a principle of public policy. Thus, where an employee is discharged for exercising a right or performing a duty that public policy encourages or requires, the employer may be subject to liability in tort for wrongful discharge. 48 Am Jut Proof of Facts 2d 192. Sabine Pilot Service, Inc. v. Hauck (1985) 687 SW2d 733, Brockmeyer v. Dun & Bradstreet (1983) 335 NW2d 834

65. PRIMA FACIE: There was a bad-faith breach of the implied covenant by W&L in terminating Newsome's employment:[15]

a) Termination was without notice or warning;

b) Termination was without following established personnel practices and policies as that set forth in the Employee Handbook;

c) Termination was without cause;

d) Termination of employment is in breach of promises provided and/or outlined in the Employee Handbook and inconsistent with the common-law at-will doctrine;

e) Termination was abusive, capricious, arbitrary, unreasonable, vindictive, retaliatory and/or malicious;

f) Termination was an unjustified denial of Newsome's rights under the statutes/laws governing protected activities;

g) Termination clearly evidences lack of good faith on the part of W&L

See "EMPLOYEE HANDBOOK" - EXHIBIT "20" - W&L's Employer's Guide at page 17.

PRIMA FACIE: [(i) Newsome's termination was without notice or warning; (ii) Newsome's termination was done without W&L following its established personnel policies and procedures – as set forth in its Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual; (iii) Newsome's termination was without just cause; (iv) Newsome's termination was a breach of promises provided and/or outlined in Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual as with as the Employer's Guide created and made available to the public by W&L and is inconsistent with the common-law at-will doctrine; (v) W&L's termination of Newsome was retaliatory, abusive, capricious, arbitrary, unreasonable, vindictive, and malicious to cause her substantial injury/harm; (vi) W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was an unjustified denial of her rights under the statutes/laws governing protected activities – moreover, was done to interfere with Newsome's engagement and/or participation in p rotected acti vities; (vii) W&L's term ination of Newsom e's employment is clear evidence that it lacked good faith .]

66. An investigation and research will yield that Newsome is entitled to the relief sought herein. Newsom e's term ination was m aliciously m otivated. W&L i s depending on the EEOC t o continue its own SYSTEMATIC discriminatory practices and failure to perform ministerial duties mandated by law – i.e. acts in furtherance of our government system to oppress people of color and seek ways to break them down and de stroy their li ves as the government has done with Newsome . Targeting th ose who a re strong a nd proud of the ir heritage (African-Ame rican) and exposure of corrupt p ractices of our government . W&L is depending on the EEOC to RETALIATE against Newsome for her bringi ng and exposing of civil/constitutional violations . THE REASON WHY AFRICAN-AMERICANS an d/or PEOPLE OF COLOR are having so many pr oblems w ith discriminatory employment practices, is because the EEOC cover up such unlaw ful/illegal practices of the employer . EMPLOYERS rely upon insiders (relationship to EEOC representatives, lobbyist, etc.) to aid in obtaining rulings in their favor . However, the EEOC and government officials (with the support of others) – in past matters brought to its attention - have gone to great len gths to deprive Newsom e relief to which she is entitled – in keeping with our own GOVERNMENT's systematic discriminatory practices and its targeting African-Americans and/or people of color:

> Case Illustr ation: Plai ntiff was discharged on t he ground o f poor work perform ance, after the e mployer's incom plete and insufficient investigation of the charg es that had b een brought against plaintiff b y co-employees. Plaintiff experienced substantial difficu lty f inding subsequent e mployment, and she ultimately had to leave the state. She had lived and worked in a small community where a dismissal for poor work performance would necessarily have an adverse consequence on her reputation and ability to earn a livelihood . On e of the charg es against he r had been fabricated, and her person nel file had been altered to support the allegation. An a ward of punitive damages against her form er em ployer was affirm ed on the basis of this evidence. Crenshaw v. Bozeman Deaconess Hospital (1984) 693 P2d 487; 104 CCH LC ¶ 55590. (Compensatory damages of $125,000 and punitive damages of $25,000)

Plaintiff had a . . .record of faithful performance until she was fired by a vindictive supervisor and as part of a company policy of removing older workers and replacing them with younger workers in order to reduce pension costs. At the trial of plaintiff's wrongful discharge case, expert witnesses testified that the employer had violated its own personnel practices and policies in thirteen separate instances; and the employer's evidence at trial was often inconsistent and even contradictory as to whether plaintiff was fired because of her alleged poor performance or as part of a reduction-in-force program.. . . Flanigan v. Prudential Federal Sav. & Loan Asso. (1986) 720 P2d 257 (verdict of $95, 000 economic damage, $100,000 compensatory damages for mental distress, and $1,300,000 punitive damages).

An investigation will support the government's posting of protected activity regarding Newsome on the INTERNET. The posting of such protected information is our government's violation of Title VII/Civil Rights/Constitutional protection – equal protection of the laws . Said information has been posted by our government for purposes of depriving Newsome equal employment opportunities, equal protection of the laws, due process of laws, life, liberties and the pursuit of happiness. Moreover, deliberate acts to destroy and ruin the life of Newsome and to make it difficult for her to obtain employment*. While Newsome is entitled to the relief from damages sustained, our government and others have gone to great lengths to see that Newsome is not financially compensated for damages/injuries sustained. It is because of our own government's actions and systematic discrimination leveled against African-Americans and/or people of color, that W&L felt a liberty and very comfortable in committing criminal/civil acts against Newsome*.

67. Reduction-in-force is inapplicable and a defense that cannot be used by W& L. Moreover, that any such defense is PRETEXT and asserted to cover-up/mask an illegal animus. An investigation into this Charge will support that W&L hired several white employees AFTER Newsome's unlawful/illegal termination . Supporting W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was discriminatory.

68. *An investigation and research into this instant Charge as well as prior handling of charges filed with the EEOC and other organizations in the past, will support efforts taken to ruin Newsome's life (as evidenced on the INTERNET) and retaliation by government officials against Newsome for reporting civil violations and/or challenging the EEOC's failure to perform ministerial duties mandated by statutes/laws. Moreover, an investigation will support how* government officials posting of INTERNET information violates the very policies and procedures of the EEOC and decisions rendered by it*. Nevertheless, Newsome has had to endure such civil/criminal wrongs for exercising said rights from this country's government*.

69. An investigation and research into this instant Charge may support that W&L engaged in such illegal/unlawful acts because of its knowledge that government entities and others have been allowed to get away with such civil/criminal wrongs leveled against Newsome . Therefore, W&L engaging in such civil/criminal wrongs is in hopes that the EEOC and others will extend to it the same favors given to others that sought to destroy Newsome's life.

70. In W&L 's termination of Newsome it violated several of its own Policies and Procedures; moreover, violated those provided in its "Employer's Guide" that is provided to employers and/or the public. W&L doing so because it knew that it was in violation of Title VII, Civil Rights Act, etc. – thus, a reasonable mind may conclude that W&L's taking of Newsome's Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual was its knowledge that it was committing criminal/civil wrongs against Newsome and, therefore, sought to cover-up and/or mask such illegal animus.[16]

V. HARASSMENT:

71. An investigation and research into this Charge will support that during Newsome's employment with W&L she was repeatedly subjected to harassment and retaliation as a direct and proximate result of W&L's knowledge of her filing of EEOC charges, engagement in protected activities, systematic discrimination, etc. Moreover, W&L terminated Newsome's employment with intention to bring said information (filing of past charges/engagement in civil lawsuits) to the attention of the EEOC/OCRC and/or government entity. W&L will do so thinking that the revealing of such information will allow it to get away with practices that have been used by former employers of Newsome and the EEOC has condoned. W&L set out to create a hostile, discriminatory and harassing environment for the purposes of interfering with Newsome's performance of job duties, efforts of forcing her out of the workplace and efforts of creating situations to mask its unlawful/illegal termination of Newsome's employment because of her participation on protected activities; moreover, W&L is relying upon the EEOC to allow such systematic discriminatory practices to continue against Newsome:

> African-American . . . suffered harassment because of his race, which was severe and pervasive, as required to support Title VII racial harassment and retaliatory harassment claims against city employer; firefighter was subjected to a plethora of racially offensive jokes, racist graffiti, and derogatory comments, he experienced social isolation and racial segregation, *one supervisor engaged in a pattern of confrontational and caustic behavior toward group . . . who were almost exclusively African-American, including plaintiff, the supervisor repeatedly forced . . . to perform extra and demeaning duties, and . . . took early retirement on the basis of stress. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. §2000e et seq., Jordan v. City of Cleveland, 464 F.3d 584 (6th Cir. Ohio, 2006)
> To establish that an employer's conduct constitutes severe or pervasive retaliatory harassment, the plaintiff must show that the workplace is permeated with discrimination, intimidation, ridicule, and insult that is sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment. Ceckitti v. City of Columbus, Dept. of Public Safety, Div. of Police, 14 Fed. Appx. 512 (6th Cir. Ohio, 2001)
> Evidence of whether the conduct at issue is so severe and pervasive as to create a hostile work environment, as element of claim > of retaliatory harassment under Title VII, may include the frequency of the discriminatory conduct, its severity, whether it is physically threatening or humiliating or instead a mere offensive utterance, and whether it reasonably interferes with employee's work performance. Ceckitti.

[16] The court noted that in the present case an expert on personnel management had testified that the hospital administrator had failed to make a proper investigation before affirming the plaintiff's discharge. In this case expert testimony also revealed that the employer had committed thirteen different violations of its firing policies. The court therefore found the precedent of Crenshaw compelling and held that the negligence theory had been proper. Flanigan v. Prudential Federal Savings & Loan Association, 720 p2d 257, 107 S.Ct. 564.

> Female . . . was not required to establish adverse employment action in order to establish prima facie case of retaliation in Title VII action . . ., where she established that she was subjected to severe or pervasive retaliatory harassment by her supervisor. Dunnom v. Bennett, 290 F.Supp.2d 860 (S.D. Ohio. W.Div. 2003).

PRIMA FACIE: An investigation into this Complaint will support that the relationship between W&L and Newsome changed as a direct and proximate result of: (a) its knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities; (b) Horwitz' (an attorney and Partner at W&L) retaliation against Newsome and advising W&L of not wanting to work with Newsome after Horwitz's and other whites' efforts into getting Newsome to give up rights secured under the Fair Housing Act and other governing statutes/laws failed; (c) Gillan was assigned to develop and create a hostile, intimidating, discriminatory, harassing, etc. environment – being assigned Newsome shortly AFTER Horwitz' refusal to work with her and Horwitz' disappointment when Newsome would not waive protected rights. Newsome was repeatedly placed in situations she felt (and a reasonable mind may find) discriminatory, prejudicial, physically threatening, humiliating, offensive, hostile, frequently occurring and interfering with the performance of job duties; (d) W&L having its representatives tamper with Newsome's computer and began to subject her to close monitoring/supervision and depriving her benefits afforded to other employees similarly situated; (e) W&L removed and destroyed evidence Newsome kept in her desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) that it knew would be incriminating in an investigation for employment violations – removing said documents with ill intent and PRETEXT; (f) W&L condoned such severe and pervasive retaliatory harassment by attorneys/supervisors with the intent to force Newsome out of the workplace and/or cover-up the unlawful/illegal termination Newsome was subjected to; (g) W&L taking away of Newsome's job duties and giving them to WHITE employees was deliberately done to set the stage for her unlawful/illegal termination; moreover, to see that Newsome had nothing to do in hopes of forcing her out of the workplace. W&L's taking away of Newsome's job duties and giving to white employees over Newsome's OBJECTIONS*. When such efforts failed, W&L created false/frivolous reasons to unlawfully/illegally terminate Newsome's employment* . SITUATIONS created and directed by W&L. (h) W&L's termination was done to provide Breed's former employer/law firm (SMR&S) with an undue/unlawful/illegal advantage over Newsome in a lawsuit to be filed against her on behalf of Stor-All. For Newsome to remain in the employment of W&L would have created a CONFLICT OF INTEREST in SMR&S representation of Stor-All and W&L representation of Newsome.

> Under Title VII, existence of retaliatory hostile work environment is based upon frequency of retaliatory conduct, its severity, whether it is physically threatening or humiliating, or mere offensive utterance, and whether it unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance. Donahoo v. Ohio Dept. of Youth Services, 237 F.Supp.2d 844 (N.D. Ohio.E.Div. 2002).

W&L failed to exercise reasonable care to prevent and correct promptly the discriminatory and harassing behavior. Instead, W&L elected to go forward and continue such practices thinking that it would be successful in masking such behavior. However, to W&L disappointment and its pattern-of-practices it simply continued to change its plans of operation for such discriminatory employment practices. Practices which resulted in W&L goin g into Newsom e's desk *(Newsome kept her de sk locked), rem oving and destroy ing docum entation that it knew would be incriminating an EEOC/OCRC and/or g overnment agency investi gation for e mployment violations. Now W &L is disappointed to find that Newsome maintained other copies and refuses to forego protected rights in the recovery of damages for the discriminatory termination/discharge.

72. An investigation into this instant Charge will support that Newsom e timely, properly and adequately took advantage of any preventive or corrective opportunity and reported employment violations to W&L. Moreover, based on W&L's area of specialty in the law (Employment), it knew and/or should have known that it was acting in vi olations of e mployment/labor laws go verning said matters. Ne wsome placed W&L on notice of concerns of its em ployment violations. Rather than correct such violations, W&L m ade a conscious decision to proceed. Doing so in that it saw the impact and affect such unlawful/illegal em ployment practic es were havi ng on Newsome mentally, physically, emotionally, etc.

> Employer's affirm ative d efense to retaliatory harassm ent claim s under Title VII i s com prised of the following elements: (1) that em ployer exercised reasonable care to prevent and correct prom ptly any harassing behavior, and (2) that plaintiff em ployee unreason ably failed to take adva ntage of a ny preventative or corrective opportunities provided by employer to avoid harm otherwise. Donahoo.

73. PRIMA FACIE: (a) Newsome is an African-American female and a member of the protected group; (b) Newsom e was subjected t o unwelcomed harassm ent and discrimination to which she repeatedly objected; (c) The discrimination/harassment complained of is based on race in that Newso me is African-Am erican and m ay be based on her sex (fem ale); (d) The discrimination/harassment complained of had the purpose and effect of unreasonably interfering with Newsome's work and pe rformance of her duties. Moreover, a work environment to be retaliatory, hostile, prejudicial, discriminatory, intimidating, hostile, harassing, threatening, etc; (e) W&L was timely, adequately and properl y placed on notice of supervisors' violations (including January 9, 2009 termination) – see EXHIBIT "13" attached hereto. Nev ertheless, W&L did nothing to correc t or deter suc h em ployment violations; (f) W&L fam iliar with the liability it incurred through the unlawful/illegal termination of Newsom e's employment attempted to cover-up or m ask employment violations by removing and destro ying e vidence it knew and/or shoul d have kno wn would b e incriminating in legal actions brought against it. W&L is now disappoint ed to find that Newsom e had retained another copy of her Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Proced ures Manual; (g) Since Newsome's termination, W&L has repeatedly attem pted to get Newsom e to waive prot ected rights and agree no t to bring legal action ag ainst it in ex change for e mployment benefits to which she is AUTOMATICALLY entitled to. Said demand by W&L is clearly in violation of Newso me's rights and neither is it lawful for W &L to demand suc h relief that is prohibited by statutes/laws. See EXHIBIT "15" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

> To establish a claim against em ployer under state civil rights law for hostile-work-environment sexual or racial harassment, a plaintiff must establish (1) that the em ployee was a member of the protected class, (2) that the employee was subjected to unwelcom e harassment, (3) that the harassm ent co mplained of was based up on sex or ra ce, (4) that the harassm ent had the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with the em ployee's work perform ance or creat ing an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environm ent, and (5) the existence of respondeat superior li ability. R.C. §§4112.02(A),

Courts em ploy the same criteria use d for analy zing hostile-work-environment sexual harassm ent when consi dering claims for racial harassment broug ht under state civil rights statute. R.C. §§ 4112.02(A), 4112.99. Bell v. Cuyahoga.

To prevail on claim of hostile work environment racial harassm ent under state antidiscrim ination statute, the harassm ent com plained of must be sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter th e conditions of the victim's em ployment and create an abusive wo rking environ ment. R.C. §4112. 01 et seq. Tarver v. Calex Corp., 708 N.E.2 d 1041 (Ohio.App.7. Dist.Mahoning.Co., 1998)

*To establish a clai m against an em ployer for hostile work environment created by sexual or rac ial harassm ent, a plaintiff m ust establish: (1) the e mployee was a m ember of the protected class, (2) the em ployee was subjected to unwelcom e harassm ent, (3) the harassment com plained of wa s ba sed upon se x or race, (4) the harassment had the purpo se or effect o f unreasonably interfering with the employee's work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environm ent, and (5) the exis tence of respondeat superior liability. 74. Because W&L 's racial com position is m ajority white, African-Americans were subjected to discriminatory practices a nd treatm ent that W&L did not subject white em ployees to. Therefore, a reasonable mind may conclude W&L's workplace was permeated with di scrimination, ridicule and practices severe enough to alter Newsome's employment - to which it adversely affected and resulted in her termination. Moreover, W&L repeatedly allowing such unlawful/illegal practices and abusive working environment.

*Title VII is violated when the workplace is perm eated with discriminatory intim idation, ridicule and insult sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim 's em ployment and create an ab usive worki ng environment. Peterson v. Buckeye Steel Casings, 729 N.E.2d 813 (Ohio.App.10 Dis.Franklin.Co., 1999)

75. Because of the severe and pervasive racial discrim ination, harassm ent, retaliation, systematic d iscrimination, etc., Newsom e has brought this instant Charge. A Charge necessary to address and expose the continued systematic discriminatory practices; moreover, the unlawful/illegal STALKING of Newsom e from em ployer-to-employer and state-to-state to preclude/deprive her of employment opportunities. W&L creating situations to force Ne wsome out of the workpl ace/to quit. When such efforts failed, W&L unlawfull y/illegally term inated Newsom e's em ployment. Newsome's termination coming without just cause.

*Under state statute governing unlawful discriminatory pract ices, a plaintiff m ay bring a cl aim in which he can sh ow that severe and pervasive ha rassment on the basis of race altered the conditio ns of employment by creating a hostile work environm ent. > To constitute a hostile work environment, conduct must be severe or pervasive enough to create an environment that a reasonable person would find hostile or abusive and that the victim must subjectively regard as abusive. R.C. § 4112.02. Rice v. Cuyahoga.

VI. HOSTILE:

76. PRIMA FACIE: Newsome believes an investigation will yield (a) she is an African-American female and, therefore, a member of the protected class; (b) she was subjected to unwelcomed repeat harassment and discriminatory practices – systematic discrimination; (c) said harassment was based on race and/or sex – no males were subjected and/or required to endure the harassment/ discriminatory treatment that Newsome had to endure during her employment; (d) the harassment unreasonably interfered with Newsome's work performance and affected her physically, mentally and emotionally; moreover, created a very hostile, offensive and intimidating work environment to which Newsome repeatedly objected to; (e) there is a basis for W&L's liability – W&L engaged and/or allowed its employees to engage in such unlawful/illegal employment practices based on Newsome's engagement in protected activity and her refusal to abandon rights secured to her under the applicable statutes/laws, its knowledge of Newsome's filing of EEOC charges; its knowledge of Newsome's engagement in investigations and/or lawsuits. W&L's knowledge that it violated the laws attempted to cover-up and/or mask such unlawful/illegal employment practices by removing and destroying evidence that it knew would be incriminating. Moreover, attempted to get Newsome to agree to not bring legal action to obtain recovery of liability sustained as a direct and proximate result of civil/criminal wrongs leveled against her – See EXHIBIT " 15" attached hereto and incorporated by reference.

> To prove claim of hostile work environment harassment based upon sexual harassment, plaintiff-employee must show by preponderance of evidence that (1) she was member of protected class, (2) she was subjected to unwelcome. . . harassment, (3) the harassment was based on sex, (4) harassment unreasonably interfered with her work performance by creating hostile, offensive, or intimidating work environment, and (5) there is basis for employer liability; same prima facie analysis is applicable to claim of hostile work environment based upon race with third prong requiring plaintiff to establish that she was subjected to unwelcome racial harassment. Civil Rights Acct of 1964, § 703(a)(1), 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e-2(a)(1). Rogers v. DaimlerChrysler Corp., 2008 WL 5061636 (N.D. Ohio.W.Div., 2008).

W&L's Partners, Executive Committee, Supervisors having full knowledge and/or should have known it was acting in violation of Newsome's protected rights, Title VII, Civil Rights Act, employment laws, etc. Moreover, that it initiated a plan to cover-up such violations in hopes that Newsome would not have evidence to expose such employment violations. Therefore, a reasonable mind may conclude that W &L's methods of covering up their civil/criminal wrongs is a common pattern-of-practice with it and its knowledge of willful and blatant employment violations.

77. PRIMA FACIE: (a) the harassment W&L subjected Newsome to was unwelcomed. (b) W&L's harassment of Newsome was based on her race and sex. (c) W&L's harassment of Newsome was sufficiently severe or pervasive to affect the terms, conditions, or privileges of her employment, or any matter directly or indirectly related to Newsome's employment. (d) The harassment W&L subjected Newsome to was committed by supervisor(s) and W&L, through its supervisory personnel, knew and/or should have known of the harassment because Newsome complained and W&L was allowing supervisory personnel to engage in the harassment leveled against Newsome. W&L failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action – instead went to great lengths (i.e. breaking into Newsome's desk that she kept locked for purposes of removing and destroying documents incriminating and supporting W&L discriminatory practices; moreover failure to implement polices/procedures) to cover-up/mask employment violations.

> In order to establish a claim of hostile-environment sexual harassment, the plaintiff must show (1) that the harassment was unwelcome, (2) that the harassment was based on sex, (3) that the harassing conduct was sufficiently severe or pervasive to affect the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment, or any matter directly or indirectly related to employment, and (4) that either (a) the harassment was committed by a supervisor, or (b) the employer, through its agents or supervisory personnel, knew or should have known of the harassment and failed to take immediate and appropriate corrective action. > Harassment because of sex need not be explicitly sexual; if sufficiently patterned or pervasive, any harassment or unequal treatment of an employee that would not occur but for the sex of the employee is unlawful. R.C. § 4112.02(A). Stachura.

> In order to determine whether the harassing conduct was severe or pervasive enough to affect the conditions of the plaintiff's employment, the trier of fact, or the reviewing court, must view the work environment as a whole and consider the totality of all the facts and surrounding circumstances, including the cumulative effect of all episodes of sexual or other abusive treatment. R.C. § 4112.02(A). Stachura.

VII. RETALIATION:[17]

78. PRIMA FACIE: (a) Newsome engaged in protected activities. (b) At the time of Newsome's termination, W&L had knowledge of her engagement in protected activities. (c) W&L took an adverse employment action against Newsome in retaliation to her engagement in protected activities. (d) There is a causal connection between Newsome's engagement and protected activities, W&L's knowledge of said engagement and W&L's termination of Newsome's employment.

79. PRIMA FACIE: (a) W&L had actual and imputed knowledge that Newsome participated in protected activities. Based on said knowledge, W&L retaliated against Newsome for Goodrich Co.,* 699 N.E.2d 97 (Ohio.App.8.Dist.Cuyahoga.Co., 1997) - To establish a prima facie case of retaliatory discharge, an employee must produce the following evidence: (1) that she engaged in protected activity; (2) that her protected activities were known to employer; (3) that employer took adverse employment action against her and stated reasons that were not the true retaliatory reason; and (4) that there is a causal connection between the protected activity and the adverse employment action. *White v. Mt. Carmel Med. her engage ment in protected activities and for her exercising rights secured to her under the applicable statutes/laws governing said m atters. (b) W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was in retaliation and in efforts of providing thos e involved in matters involving protected activities she engaged in with an u ndue/unlawful advantage over Newsome. W&L 's discriminatory practices were deliberately done to cause Newsome financial devastation and ruin to preclude/prevent her from exercising p rotected rights and pu rsuing justic e. (c) W&L aware that it was comm itting civil/criminal wrongs re moved and destroyed evidence from Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) that would be incrim inating in any legal action brought b y Newsom e ag ainst it. (d) W&L's unlawful/illegal acts were done so that it could provide EEOC/OCRC and/or government agency with information regarding Newsome's engagement in p rotected activity (as a de fense) and the taking of Newsom e's Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedure s Manual wa s done with malicious intent to cover-up such employment violations and e fforts to prevent government officials from obtaining inform ation which would yield ev idence of violation of its own p olicies and procedures. PLEASE T AKE NOTICE: That while W &L provided its employees with individual fax numbers – See EXHIBIT "22" – W&L Phon e/Individual Fax Directory attached hereto and incorporated herein, SMR&S' client (without Newsome's k nowledge a fax was being sent – Newsome obtained seeing it laying a round) elected to send its Decembe r 19, 2008 fax to W &L's main number for ill purposes and in furtherance of the systematic discrimination W& L was subjecting Newsome to. Newsome di d not provide Stor-All's representativ e with W &L's main fax number. Stor-All's repre sentative submitted fax addressing matter it was having with Newsome to place W &L on notice in that it would be seeking W &L's assistance in terminating Newsome's employment – due to CONFLICT OF INTEREST that existed because Stor-All's attorney worked with Breed's former law firm. The acts of Stor -All and W &L were willful a nd malicious with inten t to bring about the ter mination of Newsome's em ployment. W &L's termination of Newsome 's employment was to p rovide SMR&S' client with an undue/unla wful advantage over New some in the lawsuit W &L was advised would be filed against her. W &L having knowledge that under its "REPRESENTATION" policy, Newsome could request representation in legal matter SMR &S brought on behalf of Stor-All. Thus, would crea te a CONFLICT OF INTEREST due to Breed's former employment and relationship to SMR&S. It is important to note that ALL of those engaging in such unlawful/illegal activities being WHITE. It is important to note, decision makers at W& L reaching a decision to terminate Newsome's em ployment were ALL WHITE. Decision makers were aware of Newsom e's engage ment in pro tected activities. There is a caus al connection between Ne wsome's engagement i n protected activities, W&L's termination of Newsome's employment and SMR&S' filing of lawsuit against Newsome. – See EXHIBIT "23" – *February 6, 2009 Correspondence of Newsome to David Meranu*s attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

> Employer violated § 2000e-(3)(a) b y discharging an em ployee after learning he had filed charges of discrimination against a form er employer. EEOC Deci sion No . 71-4 60, 1973, EEOC Deci sions ¶ 6175.

> To establish a violation of § 2000e-3(a), it must be shown that the employer had actual or imputed knowledge that the plaintiff participated in a protected activity; and, further that based on such knowledge the discharge was in fact retaliatory – that is, motivated by the employee's participation in protected activity with the intent to retaliate against the employee for such participation, and not by unrelated legitimate business reasons. However, while retaliation must be the principal reason for the discharge it need not be the sole reason; and an employment action based in part on an unlawful consideration is not rendered lawful by the coexistence of a nondiscriminatory reason. If any element of retaliation or reprisal played any part in the discharge, no matter how remote or slight or tangential, it is in violation of the law. The trier of fact determines the reasons for the employee's discharge based on reasonable inferences drawn from the totality of facts, the conglomerate of activities, and the entire web of circumstances presented by the evidence. In examining the evidence, the trier of fact may consider such factors as the timing of the discharge; departures from customary dismissal notice or procedures afforded other employees; harassment, surveillance, or other disparate treatment or special conditions of employment in comparison to similarly situated employees or to prior treatment of the plaintiff immediately following the protected activity and leading up to the discharge; threats or retaliation against other employees for engaging in similar conduct; absence of a reasonable alternative reason for the discharge. . . 7 Am Jur POF 2d 38, 39. (Tidwell v. American Oil Co., 332 F.Supp. 424)

SMR&S' attorney, David Meranus (a white male), disappointed that he had lost legal argument before the Hamilton County Municipal Court regarding transfer of case to higher court filed by Newsome in a motion to transfer matter to higher court, at the signing of Magistrate's Order, advised of his knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activity. See EXHIBIT "24" – February 6, 2009 correspondence to Meranus with a copy being sent to W&L's representatives attached hereto and incorporated by reference. Therefore, a reasonable mind may conclude that W&L had knowledge also of Newsome's engagement in protected activities and agreed to termination of her employment to provide SMR&S and its client with an undue/unlawful/illegal advantage over Newsome in the lawsuit filed against her; moreover, to financially devastate Newsome to preclude her from defending against the lawsuit W&L knew SMR&S would be filing on behalf of its client. SMR&S' counsel supporting concerns of Newsome that she was being STALKED from employer-to-employer/job-to-job and state-to-state IN RETALIATION of her engagement in protected activities – filing of EEOC Charge. UNLAWFUL/ILLEGAL PRACTICES being done to deprive Newsome equal employment opportunities for exposing and/or reporting employment violations.

80. The unlawful/illegal practices of SMR&S, its clients and others STALKING Newsome from job-to-job/state-to-state to contact her employer (s) of her engagement in protected activities was of serious concerns to Newsome, that in December 2008, Newsome went to Washington, D.C. (as mentioned in February 6, 2009 correspondence to Meranus) to address such CRIMINAL acts. Moreover, the conversation with Meranus confirmed Title VII violations in which W&L engaged in with SMR&S.

81. To establish a violation of ~2000e-3(a), it must be shown that employer had actual or imputed knowledge that the plaintiff participated in a protected activity (7 Am. Jur. Proof of Facts 2d 38, 39; EEOC Decision No. 71-100 0, 1973 CCH EEOC Decisions ¶6194; EEOC Decision No. 70-840, 1973 C CH EEOC Decisions ¶6155), and fu rther, that based on such knowledge t he discharge was in fact retaliatory - that is, m otivated by the em ployee's participation in protected activity with the intent to retaliate ag ainst the employ ee for su ch participation, and not by unrelated legitim ate business reasons.

82. PRIMA FACIE: W&L term inated Ne wsome's em ployment because of: (a) its knowledge t hat Newsom e had filed and/or would be filing EEOC c harge(s) aga inst another employer; and (b) its knowledge that Newsome was engaged in protected activities (past, present and knowledge of future intent). While W&L knew that its termination and retaliation against Newsom e for her engagem ent in exercising her rights and/ or engaging in protected activities were acts prohibited by statutes/laws and infri nged upon her rights, it nevertheless, proceeded t o comm it said illegal/unlawful acts agai nst Newsom e. Therefore, Newsome is entitled to an injunction of and against W &L restraining it from ref using to employ her bec ause she has filed EEOC complaint s against empl oyers in the past and its knowledge of he r intent to do so in the future as well as knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities (under the applicable statutes/laws).

Civil Rights Act of 1964, §§ 703, 704, as amended, 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 2000e-2, 2000e-3.

83. PRIMA FACIE: An investigation into this instant Complaint will support a prima facie case[18] wherein W&L retaliated under Title VII against Newsome in that: (a) Newsome engaged in activity protected under Title VII – W&L having knowledge of Newsome's filing of past EEOC charges, filing of lawsuits addressing said violations, and engagement in other protected activities, etc.; (b) Newsome's exercise of her civil rights as well as her intentions to bring additional legal actions for civil rights violations were known by W&L; (c) thereafter, W&L made a willful, conscious and deliberate decision which adversely affected Newsome's employment – terminating employment; and (d) there was a causal connection between Newsome's engagement in the protected activities made known to W&L and its adverse action in the retaliating, harassing, and terminating employment, etc. of Newsome. Moreover, W&L engaged with others (by conspiring) to deprive Newsome of protected rights and infringe upon said rights.

> E.E.O.C. v. Avery Dennison Corp.,* 104 F.3d 858 (C.A.6. Ohio,1997) - To establish prima facie case of retaliation under Title VII, employee must prove by preponderance of evidence that: (1) employee engaged in activity protected by Title VII; (2) employee's exercise of his or her civil rights was known by employer; (3) thereafter, employer took employment action adverse to employee; and (4) there was causal connection between protected activity and adverse action. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 704(a), 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e-3(a).

> Wille v. Hunkar Lab., Inc., 724 N.E.2d 492 (Ohio.App.1.Dist. Hamilton.Co.,1998) - To state a claim of retaliation, an employee must demonstrate that: (1) she engaged in a protected activity; (2) employer knew of her participation in the protected activity; (3) employer engaged in retaliatory conduct; and (4) the alleged retaliatory action followed employee's protected activity sufficiently close in time to warrant the inference of retaliatory motivation.

84. PRIMA FACIE: An investigation will yield evidence that W&L knew that: (a) Newsome during her employment had filed a complaint with the applicable agency regarding rights secured/protected under the Fair Housing Act; filed the appropriate complaint with the applicable agencies addressing civil rights violations, filed a complaint with the Federal Bureau of Investigations ("FBI"), Newsome's engagement in protected activities (filing of past EEOC charges and intent to bring future legal lawsuits) – engagement in pending lawsuits involving [18] DiPietro v. Morgan Stanley DW Inc., 517 F.Supp.2d 1016 (S.D.Ohio.W.Div., 2007) - To establish a prima facie case of retaliation, employee must show that (1) he engaged in a protected activity; (2) employer was aware of such activity; (3) employer thereafter took adverse employment action against employee; and (4) there was a causal connection between the protected activity and the adverse employment action. Spengler v. Worthington Cylinders, 514 F.Supp.2d 1011 (S.D.Ohio.E.Div., 2007) - Under McDonnell Douglas burden-shifting framework, employee must make out prima facie case of retaliation by showing that (1) he or she engaged in a protected activity, (2) employer had knowledge of employee's protected conduct, (3) employer took an adverse employment action towards employee, and (4) there was a causal connection between the protected activity and the adverse employment action.

Constitutional/Civil Rights violations, etc.; (b) W&L having knowledge of Newsome's participation and her opposition to said civil rights violations; (c) W&L terminated Newsome's employment for purposes of: unlawfully/illegally aiding others, providing others to which Newsome brought actions and would be bringing legal actions with an undue advantage – terminating Newsome's employment to financially devastate her, prevent her from seeking legal recourse (i.e. for lack of financial income would provide those Newsome opposed with an undue and/or unlawful/illegal advantage). W&L having knowledge and/or should have known that one of its attorneys, Thomas J. Breed 's, former law firm (SMR&S]) was about to bring a lawsuit against Newsome. W&L assigning Newsome to Breed to provide him with legal support. Therefore, in an effort to provide SMR&S with an undue advantage (i.e. LEGAL and financial advantage, etc.) over Newsome, W&L terminated Newsome's employment in efforts of aiding SMR&S. W&L having knowledge of SMR&S' client's legal issues with Newsome because SMR&S client (Stor-All) sent Newsome a fax at her place of employment for W&L to review and notification of the legal issues going on [See EXHIBIT "21" - fax from Stor-All's representative]; moreover, SMR&S' knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities – see correspondence to Meranus of February 6, 2009 at EXHIBIT "_" attached hereto. Said knowledge of SMR&S knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activity was confirmed on February 6, 2009, at a hearing in which SMR&S lost its argument regarding transfer of a lawsuit to a higher court 's jurisdiction – Newsome filing the appropriate Motion to Transfer and court granting her request for transfer. Disappointed with this loss Stor-All's attorney, David Meranus, made it known to Newsome of his knowledge of her engagement in protected activity . Therefore, a reasonable mind may conclude that if Meranus had knowledge of such information, that W&L had knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities and reached an agreement to terminate her employment to provide SMR&S and its client (Stor-All) with an undue advantage in the lawsuit W&L knew and/or may have known was going to be filed against Newsome; moreover, effort taken by W&L and SMR&S to eliminate the CONFLICT OF INTEREST both knew would arise if Newsome were to remain in the employment of W&L because of the support Newsome provided Breed.

85. W&L using such information for unlawful/illegal purposes – to deprive Newsome of employment and rights to engage in protected activities. Evidence further establishing a causal connection between Newsome's opposition to employment violations, her participation or in protected activities, SMR&S' knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activity and employment with W&L, and W&L's adverse action taken against Newsome to terminate her employment.

> Zanders v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 898 F.2d 1127 (C.A.6.Ohio,1990) - Plaintiff claiming retaliatory discrimination must show protected participation or opposition under Title VII, alleged retaliator's knowledge of that participation or opposition, employment action or actions disadvantaging persons engaged in protected activities, and causal connection between protected participation or opposition and employment action, that is, retaliatory motive playing part in adverse employment action. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § § 704, 704(a), 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 2000e-3, 2000e-3(a).

PRIMA FACIE - CAUSAL CONNECTION: (a) W&L's termination of Newsome occurred on January 9, 2009. (b) SMR&S' client's (Stor-All's) Amnesty Weekend was set for January 9th thru January 11th. Stor-All advising Newsome of Amnesty Weekend via facsimile at the number assigned Newsome by W&L. See EXHIBIT "18" – 12/19/08 Fax From Lori Whiteside/Stor-All attached hereto and incorporated by reference. (c) On January 9, 2009, Stor-All provided Newsome with "NOTICE TO LEAVE THE PREMISES." See EXHIBIT "19" attached hereto and incorporated by reference. (d) While Stor-All provided Newsome with faxes at W &L during her employment, on the date of Newsome's termination Stor-All did not provide her with the "Notice to Leave the Premises" via facsimile (as it did with the 12/19/08 fax and others) because it knew that W&L was terminating Newsome's employment on said date. (e) On January 20, 2009, SMR&S on behalf of Stor-All filed a lawsuit against Newsome.

86. PRIMA FACIE: Newsome believes an investigation into this instant Complaint will show a prima facie case, that: (a) she engaged in activity protected by Title VII – as early as October 2006, W&L was aware of what issues Newsome was having with her landlord and claims of violation under the Fair Housing Act. While W&L allowed one of its attorneys (Elizabeth Horwitz) to assist Newsome with this matter, Horwitz became upset when Newsome refused to waive her rights under the Fair Housing Act, Civil Rights, etc. Horwitz is a white female as well as landlords and their counsel being white*. Therefore, those committing such civil wrongs and attempting to get Newsome (African-American) to waive her rights under the Fair Housing Act and applicable statutes/laws were white and acting in clear violation of laws prohibiting their activities.* Horwitz in retaliation requested W&L remove Newsome from providing her legal assistant/support in which it obliged said request; (b) Newsome in the preservation of her rights proceeded to bring legal action as well as followed up with filing the applicable charge under the Fair Housing Act with the appropriate agency – to which W&L was fully aware and/or should have known Newsome had elected to exercise protected rights – as well as the criminal complaint Newsome filed with the FBI. Moreover, W&L knew and/or should have known of past, present as well as Newsome's intent to bring future legal actions for violations to her civil rights and/or protected rights; (c) W&L took and adverse employment action against Newsome – retaliating against Newsome, subjecting her to harassment and hostile work environment, which eventually led to the terminating Newsome's employment - immediately following the accommodation of Horwitz' requests, W&L assigned an attorney (Brian P. Gillan) to Newsome for purposes of retaliation, harassment, hostile and discriminatory treatment. Gillan being assigned Newsome for purposes of creating a hostile and discriminating environment for purposes creating a situation to mask W&L's unlawful/illegal animus and criminal/civil wrongs it engaged in, in terminating Newsome's employment. Moreover, to create an environment so harassing, hostile, etc. to force Newsome to quit; and (d) there is a causal connection between W&L's knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities and the pattern-of-discriminatory practices (stalking of Newsome from job-to-job/employer-to-employer and state-to-state) rendered Newsome; furthermore, a causal connection between W&L's engagement with others to infringe upon the protected rights of Newsome. Such systematic discriminatory practices were done under the direction of those who are white – (i.e. majority of decision makers being white).

University of Cincinnati,* 215 F.3d 561 (C.A.6.Ohio, 2000) - To establish a claim under the opposition or the participation clause of Title VII, plaintiff must meet the test of a slightly modified McDonnell Douglas framework by showing, at the prima facie case stage, that: (1) he engaged in activity protected by Title VII; (2) this exercise of protected rights was known to defendants; (3) defendants thereafter took an adverse employment action against plaintiff, or plaintiff was subjected to severe or pervasive retaliatory harassment by a supervisor; and (4) there was a causal connection between the protected activity and the adverse employment action or harassment. VIII. PRETEXT/BAD FAITH:

91. Wood & Lamping went into Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) to remove and destroy documents – i.e. Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual (revision date as of July 2006). Newsome's employment date was September 11, 2006, although she worked at W&L as a contract employment prior to permanent employment. W&L's removal of documentation was done for purposes of destroying evidence it having knowledge would be incriminating and its intent to provide false and misleading information to government agencies should Newsome decide to bring legal action against it. A reasonable mind may conclude that W&L's taking and destroying of said evidence was for purposes of obstructing an investigation and efforts to obtain an undue/unlawful/illegal advantage over Newsome should she bring legal action. Moreover, W&L's taking and destruction of documentation further supports premeditation, willful and malicious intent to engage in criminal/civil wrongs leveled against Newsome. W&L's taking and destruction of evidence further supports its knowledge that it was acting in violation of its OWN policies and procedures in the termination of Newsome's employment. W&L did not want Newsome to have documentation to refer to that would reveal said violations of its policies and procedures. An investigation into this instant Charge will support that W&L failed to follow proscribed procedures in the handling of Newsome's request for medical leave as well as its termination of Newsome's employment. W&L's removal and destruction (willful, deliberate and malicious) of incriminating evidence clearly supports PRETEXT and its acts were done in bad faith – i.e. to cover-up/mask discriminatory practices, obstruction of investigation, deprivation of equal employment opportunities, failure to abide by its own policies and procedures, etc*.*

> What Constitutes Evidence of Bad Faith – Generally: . . . the existence of an employee booklet or self-imposed policies for terminations have given rise to the application of the implied covenant and limited the common-law employment rule by restricting the employer's right to discharge employees without cause. In these cases, the implied covenant is breached when the discharge is without good cause or when the employer fails to follow the prescribed procedures for terminating employees. The implied covenant may also be violated by conduct that falls into other categories, such as retaliatory firings. . . see 48 Am Jur POF 2d 217-218

92. W&L knew and/or should have known that their termination of Newsome's employment was PRETEXT to cover-up/mask an illegal animus. During Newsome's employment, she repeatedly advised of concerns of discriminatory practices. As Newsome did with the January 9, 2009 termination. See EXHIBIT "16" - February 2, 2009 Letter of Newsome to Paul R. Berninger attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein which states in part:

> February 2, 2009 Letter From Newsome to Paul R. Berninger:
> 7. PRETEXT on the part of Wood & Lamping can also be shown. I believe a reasonable mind and/or jury may conclude that its taking of my Policies and Procedures Manual was deliberate, willful and malicious. Moreover, done to cover up unlawful/illegal practices. Clearly prior to my termination Wood & Lamping had premeditated, calculated and well-hatched plan to cover-up their retaliatory and discriminatory practices. Such acts which are clearly unacceptable. Thank goodness I decided to make a copy of the Policies and Procedures Manual as well as keep my copy of the binder provided at the Seminar Julie Pugh and Heath Walsh conducted. Even the laws are aware how shady employers are in attempting to cover-up such unlawful/illegal acts. No I believe I have a valid claim.
> 8. It is going to be interesting to find out why others (white) felt comfortable acknowledging bringing Complaints and wanting feedback; however, when I presented mine, how Wood & Lamping retaliated; moreover, subjected to discriminatory treatment - which ultimately resulted in my termination.
> 9. Elimination of my job – taking away of my job duties were merely acts orchestrated by Wood & Lamping to mask their unlawful/illegal practices (discrimination and retaliation and knowledge of my engagement in protected activities). The Policies and Procedures Manual clearly states no employee engaging in protected activities would be discriminated and/or retaliated against; however, that was not the case. Again, who am I - just let a jury decide.

10. While you mentioned economic times contributing to Wood & Lamping's decision, that is also up to a jury to decide. Let them release their financial information and of course a great deal of other information as it relates to the information they relied upon to reach their decision. Let the jury decide whether or not my termination was for non-discriminatory reasons. I really do not think so. However, that is not up to me to decide. . .

93. An investigation into this instant Charge will support that W&L's termination of Newsome's employment violated policies and procedures as set forth in its Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual and its Employer's Guide. This Employer's Guide was created by W&L and is provided to the public.

94. An investigation into this instant Charge may yield that W&L failed to investigate the harassment and discrimination reported by Newsome. Said failure was a direct and proximate result of its knowingly creating a hostile, intimidating, discriminatory, threatening, harassing and discriminatory work environment for purposes of forcing Newsome to quit and/or creating situations for purposes of covering-up/masking the unlawful/illegal employment termination to which it subjected Newsome to.

> Employment Termination Policies: No particular form for an employee booklet or personnel pamphlet is required before the implied covenant may be invoked to condition the termination of an at-will employee upon a showing of good cause. All that is required is that the booklet describe what conduct constitutes ground for dismissal and what activities of employees warrant disciplinary action short of discharge. Where this requirement is met, the court will hold the employer to something approximating a due process standard in determining whether the employer acted in good faith. . . Thus, the issue was whether the employee had received the required warning provided by the booklet. .. The court held that a covenant of good faith was implied in the employee's employment contract, and that there was a triable issue of fact as to whether the employer had afforded the employee the process required by the employee booklet.. . .The information upon which the employee relies as an objective manifestation of the employer's implied promise of job security in exchange for good performance may be entirely informal. A formal printed booklet that is routinely distributed to new workers is not always required, and neither is a statement outlining the employer's termination procedures. . . The court also held that an employee booklet with termination policies was not essential to invoke the implied covenant. . . Where the employee pamphlet or the employer's personnel policies prescribe a procedure for terminating at-will employees and imply that employees will be dismissed only for cause, the employer has an affirmative duty to carry out its function in good faith and to deal fairly in determining to discharge an employee . . . The employer's good faith may be evidenced by the fact that the employer performed all of the investigation, hearing and > evaluative processes strictly in accordance with the provisions of its policies or the em ployee booklet. . . On the other hand, wh ere the evidence shows that the process w as incomple te and negligently conducted, and included the deliberate alteration of the employee's personnel file in order to document charges aga inst the emp loyee, such evidence may not only result in a finding o f bad faith on the employer's part but also lead to the imposition of punitive damages for oppression and malice. . . .An expert witness testifi ed on plaintiff's behalf that the investigation of the charg es against her had been incom plete and that, in the expe rt's opinion, the dism issal had been unjustified. On th e em ployer's appeal, th e court affirm ed a judgment awarding pl aintiff contract dam ages, com pensatory damages and punitive damages. See 48 Am Jur POF 2d 218 – 222.

95. Violation of Employee Handbook Rules: Employee hand books or manuals are frequently used as a basis for implied-in-fact contract rules. An employee handbook may give rise to an implied-in-law contractual obligation. Thu s, although there is som e authority to the contrary, it has been rec ognized that the fair dealing portion of the covenant gives the em ployee the benefit of the rules and regulations prom ulgated for his pro tection, as in an em ployee handbook. While the procedures for discharge in an em ployee handbook do not necessaril y create a contract right in the employee, the employee's dismissal without following the procedures outlined in the handbook m ay be evidence of bad faith by the employer. 82 Am Jur 2d Wrongful Discha rge § 72 (Gates v. Life of Montana Ins. Co., 638 P.2d 1063 (1982)).

96. An investigation into this instant Charge m ay yield that W&L manipulated job assignments which adversely affected Newsome. Therefore, precluding any a ssertion W&L m ay attempt to assert unde r the at-will em ployment doctrine. W&L hiring Newsom e as an Estate Planning Co ordinator; however, in its m anipulation of job assignm ents, too k awa y duties for sai d position and gave to whi te employees. W&L doing so over Newsome's objections. At the time of Newsome's termination she was assigned and provided legal support to Thomas J. Breed. Thomas J. Breed is a Partner and the Department Head of the Estate Planning Group as well as a member on the Executiv e Committee (Comm ittee making dec ision on hiring and termi nation). Breed being a member of the group au thorizing and/or approvi ng the termination of Newsom e's em ployment. Members of the Executive Committee are ALL white. Breed being the attorney to which his form er law firm (SMR&S) at the time of Newsome's termination would be filing a lawsuit against Newsome – a lawsuit that was filed on or abo ut January 2 0, 2009 against Newsom e. To allow Newsome t o remain in th e employment of W &L and continue to assist B reed would ha ve created a CONFLICT OF INTERE ST for SMR &S in its representation of Stor-All in the lawsuit filed against Newsome. W&L scheming, conniving, and deviously wo rking with SMR&S to deprive Ne wsome equal employment opportunities and rel ying upon relationships. An inve stigation will y ield that Newsome's termination of employment with W&L was maliciously motivated.

> Retaliatory Dismissal s: Retaliatory firings have been traditionally the ground for invoking the public p olicy exception to the co mmon-law at-will em ployment doctrine. In these cases, the retaliato ry act has been hel d to violate the public interest if the em ployee has been discharged for perform ing an act that public policy encourages, or for refusing to e ngage in co nduct that public policy condemns.. . . The court held that the . . . seem ing manipulation of job assignments, the capricious f iring, and the apparent connivance of the personnel manager in this course of events all supported the jury' s conclusion that the dismissal was maliciously motivated. . . . In other decisions where an employee's recovery for bad faith wrongful discharge has been upheld, it was relatively clear that the retaliatory dismissal of the employee would constitute a violation of public policy. The public policy issue is rarely given separate treatment, however, where the discharge was independently or alternatively found to constitute a violation of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. 48 Am Jur POF 2d 224-225.

IX. STATISTICS/DISPARATE TREATMENT:

29 CFR § 1607.11 – Disparate Treatment

> The principles of disparate or unequal treatment must be distinguished from the concepts of validation. A selection procedure – even though validated against job performance in accordance with these guidelines – cannot be imposed upon members of a race, sex, or ethnic group where other employees, applicants, or members have not been subjected to that standard. Disparate treatment occurs where members of a race, sex, or ethnic group have been denied the same employment, promotion, membership, or other employment opportunities as have been available to other employees or applicants. Those employees or applicants who have been denied equal treatment, because of prior discriminatory practices or policies, must at least be afforded the same opportunities as had existed for other employees or applicants during the period of discrimination. Thus, the persons who were in the class of persons discriminated against during the period the user followed the discriminatory practices should be allowed the opportunity to qualify under less stringent selection procedures previously followed, unless the user demonstrates that the increased standards are required by business necessity. This section does not prohibit a user who has not previously followed merit standards from adopting merit standards which are in compliance with these guidelines; nor does it preclude a user who has previously used invalid or unvalidated selection procedures from developing and using procedures which are in accord with these guidelines.

97. An investigation into this instant Charge may support that hiring and terminations of African-Americans are disproportionate; moreover, adversely affected African-Americans. W&L maintaining approximately 1% to 3% of African-Americans in workplace consistently comprised of approximately 95% to 97% whites.

98. PRIMA FACIE: An investigation in this instant Charge will support that: (a) Newsome's job duties were taken away and given to white employee(s) over her objections. W&L doing so to provide white employees with job security. Had W&L not taken job duties from Newsome to give to white employees, it would have been white employees not having work. (b) Newsome was assigned attorneys W&L wanted to keep happy and attorneys that were not pleased with Assistants/Legal Secretary(s) they were assigned; (c) Newsome was required to take on various attorneys along with paralegal assignments; however, was not given additional increase in pay rates or promotions as white employees were; (d) Salary pay rates/increases were heavily disproportionate amongst whites and African-Americans – i.e. with whites getting better pay raises, salary increases and/or promotions for taking on additional duties; (e) Newsome was deprived medical leave and/or fringe benefits afforded to whites and/or those similarly situated; and (f) Newsome was deprived equal treatment, equal employment opportunities - based on W&L's knowledge of her engagement in protected activities (clearly violating W&L's policies and procedures) and systematic discrimination – afforded to white employees and/or those similarly situated.

> Equal Employment Opportunity Commission v. New York Times Broadcasting Service, Inc., 542 F.2d 356 (6th Cir. 1976) – Although statistical evidence is primarily used in cases alleging racial discrimination within meaning of Civil Rights Act of 1964, statistical evidence is important tool for placing all seemingly inoffensive employment practices in their proper perspective. Civil Rights Act of 1964, §§ 701 et seq., 706(e) as amended 42 U.S.C.A. §§ 2000e et seq., 2000e-5(f)(1).
> Prima facie violation of Civil Rights Act may be established by statistical evidence showing that an employment practice has effect of denying members of one race equal access to employment opportunities. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq. New York City Transit Authority v. Beazer, 440 U.S. 568, 99 S.Ct. 1355 (n.5) (1979)

99. W&L repeatedly attempted to get Newsome to work with Brian Gillan over her objections to the discriminatory practices reported. W&L attempting to do so with knowledge that working with Gillan had affected Newsome physically, mentally and emotionally as a direct and proximate result of the creation of a hostile, threatening, intimidating, harassing and discriminatory work environment. W&L advising Newsome that Gillan wanted to continue to work with her. Gillan wanting to do so although advising that it was not working out. See EXHIBIT "25" attached hereto and incorporated by reference. Gillan doing so AFTER commending Newsome of the great work she was doing (advising "You're the best!"). See EXHIBIT "7" - December 21, 2006 E-mail from Gillan attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. W&L did not require whites who complained of Gillan's unlawful/illegal actions to continue to work with Gillan; however, W&L was requiring Newsome to continue to work with Gillan. It was only because Newsome advised of reporting such unlawful/illegal actions did W&L pull Gillan – a PROTECTED ACTIVITY.

100. An investigation into this Charge will support that W&L terminated another employee/attorney (Peter Newman – white male) that was said to be hostile, harassing, loud, etc. and provided Newman's Assistant (Kathy Richey) with some time off to regroup from such hostile and harassing treatment. Kathy Richey is a white female. Kathy Richey was assigned to work with Gillan prior to Newsome's employment; however, due to complaints, Gillan was removed from her desk. Gillan was assigned to Hope Kortanek - a white female; however, after complaints W&L from white employees, W&L did not try and force white employees to continue to work with Gillan. Gillan was assigned to Newsome (African-American female); however, when Newsome complained of hostile and discriminatory practices and forwarded evidence of such hostile, threatening, harassing and discriminatory practices evidenced in Gillan's e-mail to the Human Resource representative (Andrea Griffith), W&L forced Newsome to continue to work with Gillan over her objections. It was not until Newsome advised of reporting such employment violation that W&L pulled Gillan. However, this did not stop W&L from continuing to seek ways in which to terminate Newsome's employment. At the time of Newsome's termination of employment, both Richey and Kortanek and Gillan were still employed. See EXHIBIT "25" – April 19, 2007 E-mail of Newsome to Griffith attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

April 19, 2007 Email of Newsome to Andrea M. Griffith:

> Just to let you know tha t I am think ing about talking to Bill Ellis when he returns regarding BPG.
>
> While I hav e been patient, I find th at his be havior is incr easing annoying, b adgering an d harassing. I shared with you from his first e-mail the motives for his actions.
>
> I was told prior to going on vacation in March to b e patient. It is now April and his behavior is still the sa me. Providing false deadlines or urgency of some and then constan tly and re peatedly bad gering regarding them. The discovery that BPG mentioned in his e-m ail on last week and needing to be done by Monday (4-16-07) was served on him on or about February 23, 2007 . So would think he knew as early as February that he had a deadline. Then I was give n the impression that it had to go out Monday; however, did not get it until yesterday. Now the constant notes providing time restraints. Along with attacks on my appointments along with implication that they are excessive – when they are not.
> While I am aware that Kathy and Ho pe worked with him in th e past, they are not now. My concerns is the reason and/or the difference between their situation and mine . It is appa rent that I am being required to work with BPG when he has made it clear i t w as not working out , so why am I being subjected to his treatment and changes were made for Kathy and Hope, yet not I.

Still I am working with him and he is allowed to continue to do what he is doing. As I shared, I believe he has a motive and shared such motive with you. Furthermore, as I shared his actions and behavior is not right, neither is it fair.
> Please let me know som ething. As I mentioned, I intend to d iscuss this m atter with Bill when he returns, because it is affecti ng my ability to perform my tasks and the request of other attorneys.

101. W&L knew and/or should have known of Gillan's established pattern-of-harassment and sexual discrimination against females. Moreover, Gillan used his position to engage in a sexual relationship with a contract employee. When this information was made known, W&L terminated the female in which Gillan was having a sexual relationship with . Newsome addressed said relationship in January 15, 2007 e-mail to Andrea Griffith. See EXHIBIT "6" attached hereto and incorporated by reference. Again, W&L terminated the employment of an attorney (Peter Newman); however, allowed Gillan who has an established record of violating employment laws to remain in its employment and allowed Gillan to continue to sexually harass and/or use his position to harass female employees and/or take advantage of female employees. Gillan drafting and distributing an e-mail to Newsome that was drafted with discriminatory/hostile/harassing intent. Gillan attacking Newsome through e-mail(s) and asserting her to be "insubordinate," and exhibiting "passive/aggressive behavior." Such discriminatory practices condoned by W&L because it was intending (for PRETEXT purposes) to place discriminatory e-mail in Newsome's employee file and did not want a rebuttal or the truth in Newsome's employee file that would support how early the retaliation and discrimination against Newsome had begun and W&L's efforts to cover-up/mask its knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activity. W&L knew and/or should have known that Gillan was prejudice and had a history of discriminating against females. Moreover, used his position to obtain an undue advantage (i.e. engage in sexual relationship) over female(s).

> EEOC Decision No. 71-357 (¶ 6168) Retention of Supervisor With Known Prejudices Was Unlawful: Racial Discrimination-Discharge for Misconduct-Racially Tainted Evidence – The discharge of a Negro worker was reasonably to be regarded as unlawful where the misconduct used as a basis for the termination was tainted with racial discrimination in that the warnings and statements regarding the employee's work performance came from a supervisor known to be prejudiced against Negroes, and much of the misconduct charged against him involved opposition to racial discrimination.
> Racial Discrimination-Prejudice of Supervisor-Retention as Violation - There was a reasonable basis for believing that an employer violated the Act by retaining as a foreman an individual known to be prejudiced against Negroes. Negro employees were discriminated against because of their race with respect to terms and conditions of employment in that they were precluded from many of the jobs open to Caucasian employees because of the employer's policy of not assigning Negroes to jobs under this prejudiced foreman.

102. At the time of Newsome's termination, W&L employed approximately 65 employees of which two (2) were African-American – which is 3%. To include one person who is of India descent (at time of hire, Newsome does not believe employee – Brian Coutinho - had obtained American citizenship; however Coutinho was working on it) would be approximately 4%. Pertinent information needed to address "Disparate Treatment" in W&L's handling of hiring(s) and termination(s). Moreover, W&L's goal of creating an ALL-white work environment.

At the time of Newsome's employment there were two (2) other African-Americans – Angie Hart and Marcia Sherman. Ms. Hart's employment was ABRUBTLY terminated. From my understanding from information received AFTER my unlawful/illegal termination, Ms. Hart believed that W&L may have discriminated against her. Newsome being advised by Paul Berninger that Ms. Hart brought action against it. See EXHIBIT "1" - attached hereto and incorporated by reference. However, Newsome prior to being provided information from Paul Berninger (attorney at W&L) had no knowledge that Ms. Hart had brought and/or was intending to bring legal action against W&L. However, what is important to note, W&L may have subjected Hart to the same discriminatory practices and having knowledge (although Hart did not) that it was committing Title VII violations/employment violations – as with New some – W&L may have removed and destroyed evidence that Hart possessed which it felt would be incriminating and would support any action brought by Hart. Because W&L did so with Newsome – removed and destroyed evidence – a reasonable mind may conclude W&L has a known practice of committing such criminal/civil wrongs to avoid employer liability.

Based upon the information contained herein, the racial composition of employees at W&L, W&L's removal and destruction of evidence from Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) that it knew was incriminating, a reasonable mind may conclude that the racial composition of W&L's workforce and its acts to cover-up/mask discriminatory practices, was its knowledge that it was engaging in Title VII violations, Civil/Constitutional violations, criminal/civil wrongs against Newsome. Moreover, the pattern-of-discrimination and retaliation against Newsome based on W&L's knowledge of her engagement in protected activities further support racial discrimination and its efforts to interfere with Newsome's rights to seek recovery. See EXHIBIT "16" - Newsome's Letter of February 2, 2009 to Paul Berninger attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein:

February 2, 2009 Letter from Newsome to Paul R. Berninger:

Pattern-of-Discrimination/Retaliation:

1. About November 2006, I requested assistance from Wood & Lamping regarding a Landlord matter I was dealing with. Elizabeth Horwitz was assigned to assist me. However, Elizabeth became upset with me with I refused to give up rights I believe I was entitled to under the Fair Housing Act. From my take, Elizabeth (white) and opposing counsel (white) were must have agreed to try and convince me to waive rights secured under the Fair Housing Act. Such efforts failed and I proceeded to file the lawsuit to protect my rights. Again, Elizabeth being upset with me, requested a change in Secretaries/Legal Assistants and Wood & Lamping obliged. Her acts were unacceptable, and clearly obvious of no understanding or feeling of what it is like to have to stand by rights that many sacrificed their lives for so that I can enjoy and live where I want not where another decides. Some of our conversations I am confident are memorialized in Wood & Lamping's e-mails.

2. Then I was assigned Brian Gillan. While I was commended on my work ethics and strived to carry myself in a professional manner, my experience with Brian Gillan was a continuance by Wood & Lamping to subject me to retaliation and discriminatory treatment. First appearing to be pleased with my work (as evidenced in e-mail), Brian's sudden change and craftily drafted e-mail to slander my character, work ethics, etc. was launched. Wood & Lamping was aware of this and for quite some time did nothing to deter Brian's acts although I reported violations to its attention. It was not until I advised that I was to going to report this to Bill Ellis that Brian was pulled. My concerns were made known as to the motives behind Brian's conduct; however, nothing was done. My concerns regarding how other white employees were not required to endure the hostile, discriminatory and brutal treatment that Wood & Lamping was going to make me endure although it was fully aware of the emotional, physical and m ental im pact it was having on me. Som e o f our conversations I am confident are memorialized in Wood & Lamping's e-mail (for example attached). . . .

3. While it was not clear to m e why Wood & La mping would not represent me in m atters brought to its attention, I could not d well on that. I was able to obtain an Injunction and Restraining Order in my Landlord & Tenant matter which Elizabeth though t would be h ard to obtain. Then in October 2008, I was unlawfully evicted from my residence. Wood & La mping was t imely and p romptly notified of this m atter. I even advised of m y re porting this matter to th e FBI. Either way, I was engagi ng in protected activities in which Wood & Lamping was fully aware. See my correspond ence with Andrea regarding this. What I did not lik e about this was ho w Andre a attempted to make it appear there was a problem with my being out. I do not eve r recall exceeding any days allowed for leave (va cation and/or sick); however, aware of m y circumstances, attempted to add salt to the womb – clearly UNACCEPABLE.

4. I had a doctor's appointment in October and advised Andrea of what was taking place. Then in December 2008 , I went to An drea to advise of medical procedure and determ ine how leave would be covered. Andrea advised of the Family and Medical Leave Act and how the firm would handle such m atters. I fol lowed up with the required Request Form for leave on January 8, 2009. On January 9, 2009, I wa s term inated being advised m y position was being eliminated.

5. Since leaving Wood & Lamping, I have foun d out that Tho mas J. Breed's fo rmer law firm Schwartz Manes & R uby – no w Schwartz Manes Rub y & Slovin – is represent ing a client that has busi ness a business dispute with m e. Whether or not W ood & Lam ping would have represented me in that m atter, I do not know. What I do know, is that I recall getting a fax from the com pany while at Wood & Lamping when I picked it up from the counter in the cop y room. While I was not aware at the tim e th at To m's form er law firm was representing that co mpany, I found it interesting to find out th at my termination came on January 9, 2009 – the very sam e weekend this company was holding what they called an "Am nesty Weekend." Not only that, no fax as sent prior by them on this date (so I concluded that they knew of what was about to take place at Wood & Lamping), but I was mailed a notice on the ver y sam e date of m y ter mination. Tom is a member of the Executive Board at Wood & Lamping if I am not mistaken. Raising co ncerns for a reasonable mind (jury) as to the motive behind m y termination – was it done to aid his former law firm (y ou scratch my back and I' ll scratch y ours – at my expense). What is To m's interest in the m atter and whethe r or not he has an y interest still with Schwartz Manes? Again, that i s not up to me t o decide, but for a jury I would think. A causal link/connection can be established.

6. In regards to the FMLA, I will only present the following and let you take it from there because all I am required to do is present a prima facie case and evidence which I believe can be done . . .

Newsome believes that an investigation into this instant Charge will yield that W&L's January 9, 2009, termination of Newsome's employment was a direct and proximate result of its knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities, her filing of Title VII actions, complaint of discriminatory treatment, hostile work environment, etc. The record evidence will support W&L's knowledge of Newsome's engagement in lawsuits and its knowledge that Breed's former law firm (SMR&S) would be filing a lawsuit against Newsome. Therefore, as a direct and proximate result of knowledge of said information, W&L terminated Newsome's employment without just cause.

An investigation into this instant Charge and evidence contained herein, will support W&L's African-American employees (approximately 3% at the time of Newsome's termination) were discriminated against because of their race in respect to hiring, promotions, raises/merit increases, termination, terms and conditions of their employment, employee benefits – i.e. deprived benefits (such as medical coverage) - that were afforded to whites and/or those similarly situated, etc. Moreover, W&L terminated the employment of African-Americans that complained of discriminatory practices.

An investigation into this instant Charge and evidence contained herein will support that W&L's termination of Newsome was a direct and proximate result of its efforts to create an ALL-white workforce. It appears from information provided by Paul Berninger (attorney at W&L) that another African-American (Angie Hart) may have believed her discharge/termination was illegally motivated. Therefore, a reasonable mind may conclude based on such information, W&L decided to violate Title VII and remove African-Americans from its place of employment because it did not want its discriminatory practices exposed. Upon W&L's termination of Newsome's employment, it *hired several WHITE employees SHORTLY thereafter. Moreover, W&L terminated Newsome's employment with discriminatory and retaliatory intent. Further supporting DISPARATE TREATMENT.

> Racial Discrimination-Prejudiced Supervisor-Effect on Racial Composition of Workforce – On the basis of testimony regarding the prejudices held against Negroes by a supervisor and the inferences to be drawn from the fact that Negroes made up 26 percent of the workforce prior to hiring of such supervisor but declined to 5 percent after his hiring, it was reasonable to conclude that the employer was unlawfully refusing to hire Negroes as a class because of their race. . . .

It is clear from the transcript, and we so find, that the testimony of Respondent's officials regarding Charging Party's opposition to racial discrimination influenced the decision to discharge him. Under these circumstances, the discharge was in violation of Section 704(a) of Title VII. (United States v. > The record before us contains Respondent's payroll covering 97 production employees for the week ending June 30, 1968. It reveals that 10 (26%) of 38 production employees hired before June 30, 1966, are Negro, and that only 3 (5%) of 59 post-Foreman B hires are Negro. On the basis of the testimony of Respondent's Superintendent regarding Foreman B and the inference which may be drawn from these figures, we conclude that Respondent has violated and is violating Title VII by refusing to hire Negroes as a class because of their race.

We will endeavor to make reasonable accommodations for known physical or mental limitations of otherwise qualified employees and applicants with disabilities unless the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of or business. Our employment decisions, including, but not limited to, hiring, compensation, benefits, training, and promotions are based on the principles of equal employment opportunity. Discrimination by any member of the firm will not be tolerated. > (Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ p. 11) – EXHIBIT "4" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

W&L violated Title VII as well as other statute/laws governing employment. W&L refusing to hire African-Americans because of their race and apparently because complaints of concerns of discriminatory practices. As a direct and proximate result of Newsome's complaints and now it appears from information obtained from Paul Berninger (attorney at W&L) that another African-American (Angie Hart) complaining of discriminatory practices, that W&L has set out to create an ALL-white workforce and/or ridding itself of African-American employees who complained of discriminatory practices. At the time of Newsome's employment and during her employment, W&L did not employ any Afri can-American attorneys . While the re were vacancies for at torneys and apparently a need for sup port staff, W&L shortly AFTER Newsome's termination employed several white employees. W&L creating a work environ ment of approximately one (1) African-American – Marcia Sherm an. Therefore, leaving the racial com position of approximately 1 % for Africa n Americans. Supporting DISPARATE TREATMENT.

An investigation into this instant Charge will support the racial bias revealed by the disproportionate workforce, work opportunitie s, prom otions, raises, etc. Therefore, there is a reasonable basis for bel ieving that W&L engag ed in unlawful employme nt discrimin ation against African-Americans on account of their race and/or sex and reporting of discriminatory practices and there is a SIGNIFICANT dispropo rtion of said race in emp loyment at W &L. Ther efore, such statistics may be used to infer a pattern or practice of discrimination by W&L. Moreover, said statistical evidence and otherwise, a s well as the record a s a whole, m ay c onclude that W&L discriminated against Ne wsome, Afri can-Americans as a class, because of their race a nd sex with respect to hirings, termination, promotions, raises, etc.

Therefore, reasonable cause m ay exist to be lieve that W& L and/or its representatives collectively and severally engaged in unlawful em ployment practices in violation of Title VII of t he Civil Rights Act, by term inating, refusing to hi re African-Am ericans because of com plaints of discriminatory practices by said class, prom otions, pa y raise s, etc. Moreover, for purposes of creating an ALL-white workforce – supporting DISPARATE TREATMENT.

An investigation into this instant Charge will support that W&L's instigation and creation of discriminatory work en vironment. Furtherm ore, how W&L t ook awa y jo b duties of Newsome to give to white em ployee(s). W&L taking of job dut ies from Newsom e (over Newsom e's objections) was to provi de white employ ee(s) with job security. The job duties W&L took away from Newso me to give to white employee(s) were th ose still need ed and required in the job Newsome performed at the time of her unlawful /illegal termination . W &L assignin g Ne wsome to work with Thom as J. Breed, Department Head of the Estate Planning Group, and requiring the duties of Estate Planning Coordinator – position Newsome was hired for. W&L's taking awa y of Newsome's job duties was done with m alicious intent and done for pretext purposes – to mask/cover-up illegal anim us. Terminating Newsom e's em ployment in retalia tion of her participation in protected activities an d knowledge that Breed' s form er law firm (SMR&S), on behalf of Stor-All, would be filing a lawsuit against Newsome.

415 F.2d 1038 (5th Cir. 1969); Cameron Iron Works v. EEOC, 320 F.Supp. 1191 (S.D. Tex. December 18, 1970), 3 EPD ¶8064. From the above evidence, statistical and otherwise, and the record as a whole, we conclude that Respondent Local, Respondent Employer Associations, and their contractor members discriminated against Charging Parties, Negroes as a class, and Spanish surnamed Americans as a class, because of their race and national origin respectively, with respect to the referral and hiring of cement mason foremen and cement mason journeymen and apprentices. . .

Reasonable cause exists to believe that Respondent Local, Respondent Employer Associations, and the individual members of the Employer Associations collectively and severally engaged in unlawful employment practices in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, by refusing to hire, limiting, segregating, and otherwise discriminating against Charging Parties, Negroes as a class, and Spanish surnamed Americans as a class because of their race and national origin.

EEOC Decision No. 72-0976 (¶6344) Racial Bias Against Negro Supervisor: Racial Discrimination-Negro Supervisor-Notice of Promotion-Lack of Support – There was reasonable cause to believe that an employer discriminated against a Negro worker by failing to give the customary notice of promotion of the worker to a supervisory position, failing to support him in the supervision of white employees, failing to award him incentive pay, assigning him the least desirable night shift duty during most of the tenure of his employment, and by discharging him because of his race.

104. Newsome set forth a detailed statistical pattern as well as pattern of discriminatory practices – i.e. refusal to represent Newsome in legal matters because she refused to forgo protected rights and/or waive protected rights secured to her under Fair Housing Act, Title VII, Civil Rights Act, Constitution, etc. – wherein W&L engaged in unlawful employment practices by maintaining hiring and termination practices that adversely affected and discriminated against African-Americans because of their race. During Newsome's employment, W&L employed no African-American attorneys and if there were any prior to Newsome's hiring, W&L was sure not to hire anymore. However, similarly placed persons of different races were accorded dissimilar treatment. W&L repeatedly hiring white employees. Providing Newsome with false reasons for her termination and shortly thereafter hiring several whites – in its efforts of creating an ALL-white workforce.

Racial Discrimination-Segregated Job Classifications – Detailed statistical patterns established a reasonable basis for finding that an employer engaged in an unlawful employment practice by maintaining a hiring and job assignment policy which discriminated against Negroes because of their race. The employer employed no Negroes as officials or managers, sales workers, office and clerical workers, skilled craftsmen or over-the-road drivers. The employer employed 110 persons, 13 of whom (or 11 percent) were Negroes, in an area where about 40 percent of the population was Negro.

Where similarly placed persons of different races are accorded dissimilar treatment, the Commission must find, in the absence of other evidence, that race was a factor in the disparate treatment. On the basis of the evidence presented herein we conclude that there is reasonable cause to believe that Charging Party was discriminated against with respect to the several foregoing terms and conditions of employment because of his race. . . .The statistical patterns detailed above establish, prima facie, that Respondent maintains racially discriminatory hiring and assignment policies. Bing v. Roadway Express, 444 F.2d 687 (5th Cir. 1971), 3 EPD ¶ 8265.. . . There is reasonable cause to believe that Respondent Employer has engaged and continues to engage in unlawful employment practices in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 by discriminating against Charging Party in the terms and conditions of his employment and subsequently terminating him because of his race (Negro), and by maintaining a hiring and assignment policy which discriminates against Negroes because of their race.

105. PRIMA FACIE: (a) The statistical evidence contained in this instant Charge and W&L's unlawful/illegal termination for purposes of creating an ALL-white work environment; along with false reasons provided for termination and its knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities, are important tools for placing all seemingly inoffensive employment practices in their proper perspective; (b) an investigation into this instant Charge will support from the statistical evidence that W&L's practices has the effect of denying African-Americans equal access to employment opportunities; moreover, when African-Americans complained of discriminatory practices, W&L sought ways to terminate their employment as well as remove and destroy evidence it having knowledge would be incriminating and support Title VII violations and/or employment violations regarding discrimination/retaliation, etc.; (c) W&L repeatedly relied upon word-of-mouth hiring and when it terminated Newsome's employment relied upon discriminatory practices to eliminate the number of African-Americans in the workplace while it employed SEVERAL white employees shortly AFTER Newsome's termination. W&L knew at the time of Newsome's termination that it was committing Title VII violations as well as other discriminatory practices – intent of hiring additional white employees in their creation of an ALL-white work environment with intent to exclude African-Americans; and (d) Newsome believes an investigation will yield that she was qualified for the position she lost as well as was assigned job duties performed by paralegals, and, W&L shortly after Newsome's termination hired white employees with knowledge that it was engaging in Title VII violations and/or discriminatory employment practices.

106. An investigation into the allegations of this instant Charge will support liability under Title VII of and against W&L which includes: (a) disparate treatment (employment of African-Americans during Newsome's employment NEVER exceeded 3%) – wherein Newsome (who is a member of the protected group – Afric an American) was treated differently than non-members of her class/race and the reason being because of W& L's knowledge of her e ngagement in protected activities an d VOCALIZED opposition to violation of her protected ri ghts; (b) W&L allowed Newsome to be subjected to harassm ent tha t creat ed an offensive, retaliatory , and hostile work environment; and (c) W&L retaliated against Newsom e for her engagement in protected activity secured under statutes/laws.

> Dunnom v. Bennett, 290 F.Su pp.2d 860 (S. D.Ohio.W.Div., 2003) - Several theories of liability are available under Title VII, including: (1) disparate treatment, in which a member of a class protected by the statute is treated differently than non -members of the class, and the reason is due to the protected status; (2) harassm ent that creates an offensive or hostile work environm ent; and (3) retaliati on for protected activity under the statute. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

107. W&L treated Newsom e differently because of her race, i ts knowledge of her engagement in protected activities, an d Newsom e's refusal to forgo and/or waive rights secured to her under th e applicable statutes/laws. W&L 's ac ts against Newsome were overt and intentional conduct because of her race and exercise of protected rights.

108. Two theories of race discrim ination which have developed since the enac tment of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, and which are particularly comm on to claim s of discrimination in job assi gnment, are "disparate tr eatment" an d "disparate im pact," or "pattern of practice." Disparate treatment race discrimination involves overt or intentional conduct, and occurs when an e mployer tre ats one individual or gr oup differently from another bec ause of that individual's race.

109. To establish a prima facie case of individual disparate treat ment based on race in violation of Title VII of the 1964 Civi l Rights Act, with respect to job assignm ents, Newsom e must show: (a) she is a member of a group protected by the statute; (b) that she satisfactorily performed duties assigned; (c) that she was rejected under circumstances giving rise to an inference of unlawful discrimination. Moreover, may require that Newsome demonstrate that from such discrimination she was "harmed." Evidence of a pattern of practice of discrimination against Newsome, who is African-American may serve to support a claim of disparate treatment.

PRIMA FACIE – DISPARATE TREATMENT: It is important to note: (i) Newsome is an African-American female and, therefore, a member of group protected under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act; (ii) Newsome satisfactorily performed duties assigned her and was assigned to attorneys W&L wanted to keep happy and complained about the work of the Assistant/Legal Secretary assigned. While Newsome was assigned various attorneys and took on additional job duties, W&L did so without giving her the pay increases and/or promotions as it afforded to white employees obtaining additional job duties and/or responsibilities; (iii) Newsome was rejected and terminated by W&L because of her race and W&L's knowledge of her engagement in protected activities. Newsome's employment with W&L was terminated in its obliging Thomas J. Breed's former employer/law firm (SMR&S) with termination because it had knowledge that SMR&S on behalf of its client, Stor-All, would be bringing a lawsuit against Newsome. Further supporting the criminal/civil wrongs of W&L and its overt and deliberate acts to infringe upon Newsome's rights secured to her under Title VII and/or governing statutes/laws; and (iv) Newsome has been injured/harm as a direct and proximate result of W&L discriminatory practices; moreover, as a direct and proximate result of W&L's engagement in systematic discriminatory practices/ pattern-of-discriminatory practices, disparate treatment to cause Newsome injury/harm based upon its knowledge of her engagement in protected activities.

110. An investigation into this instant Charge will support W&L's knowledge of Newsome's previous filing of EEOC Charges, engagement in protected activities, filing of lawsuits, participation in investigations, etc. Moreover, that another African-American (Angie Hart) believed that she was discriminated against – pursuant to conversation with Paul Berninger. W&L fully aware of its discriminatory intent removed and destroyed evidence from Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) that it knew would be incriminating.

> Grano v. Department of Development of City of Columbus, 637 F.2d 1073 (C.A.6.Ohio, 1980) - In a Title VII suit brought under a disparate treatment theory, the allegation is that defendant failed to hire or failed to promote person because of his or her race, religion, national origin, or sex, and reason why employer acted as he did is crucial; thus, where Title VII case is brought under disparate treatment theory, plaintiff must prove discriminatory intent. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq. as amended 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.

111. An investigation into this instant Charge may support that hirings and terminations of African-Americans are disproportionate; moreover, adversely affected African-Americans. W&L maintaining approximately 1% to 3% of African-Americans in workplace consistently comprised of approximately 95% to 97% whites.

> Barnes v. GenCorp Inc., 896 F.2d 1457 (C.A.6.Ohio, 1990) - Appropriate statistical data showing employer's pattern of conduct toward protected class as group can, if unrebutted, create inference that defendant discriminated against individual members of class, but to do so, statistics must show significant disparity and eliminate the most common nondiscriminatory reasons for disparity.

112. W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was based on her race, sex, engagement in protected activities, and systematic discrimination. W&L SHORTLY after Newsome's termination employed SEVERAL white employees in its efforts to have a non-African-American workplace. Moreover, in retaliation of receiving complaints of discriminatory practices. W&L having knowledge that it was acting in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act as well as engaging in discriminatory practices, retaliation, systematic discrimination, etc., acted with willful, malicious and malice in its removing and destruction of evidence known to it to be incriminating and supporting employment violations. W&L's acts were pretext in efforts of covering-up and/or masking discriminatory employment practices.

113. W&L may have applied the same unlawful/illegal tactics used on Newsome – in its removal and destruction of evidence incriminating to W&L – on Angie Hart because it knew that its practices were racially motivated and discriminatory. Moreover, that because concerns of discriminatory practices were made known to it and Hart's notification of discriminatory practices, that it moved to cover-up/mask such discriminatory practices in the handling of Newsome's termination.

114. W&L provided promotions with pay increases automatically to white Secretaries/Legal Assistants to Paralegals without notice and/or posting for position. Those who were subject to and receiving such benefits were ALL white. W&L provided promotions and/or salary increases to whites for taking on extra duties (paralegal, etc.) without posting. Rendering said special promotions and/or salary increases with knowledge that it was acting violation of the laws and engaging in discriminatory practices which adversely affected African-Americans.

115. Objective harm to Newsome resulted from W&L's racial discriminatory conduct.

116. Bias against Newsome occurred in the taking away of job duties to give to white employees similarly situated and to provide them with job security while Newsome continued to work for attorneys in the Estate Planning Department as well as required the performance of job duties taken away.

117. Sexual harassment is actionable under Title VII only if it is so severe or pervasive as to alter the conditions of the victims employment and create an abusive working environment. Clark County School Dist. V. Breeden, 532 U.S. 268, 121 S.Ct. 1508. . . . Two types of harassment are unlawful under Title VII: . .. (2) situations in which the working environment is oppressive to members of the protected group because of actions of coworkers, supervisors, or customers. (29 CFR § 1604.11) (45B Am. Jur. 2d § 824) The second type of unlawful harassment may occur absent any economic effect on the complainant's employment, and is referred to as hostile work environment harassment. When the workplace is so permeated with discriminatory intimidation, ridicule, and insult that is sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of the victim's employment and create an abusive working environment, Title VII is violated. Discrimination based on sex, race, . . . if it creates a hostile or abusive work environment, violates Title VII. . . . A hostile work environment harassment claim involves a pervasive atmosphere of discriminatorily severe or unwelcome working conditions that have the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual's work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment.

118. When a workplace is so permeated with discriminatory intimidation, ridicule, and insult that are severe or pervasive to alter conditions of victim's employment and create an abusive working environment, Title VII is violated. Title VII comes into play before the harassing conduct leads to clinical mental illness because: (a) a discriminatorily abusive work environment, even one that does not seriously affect an employee's psychological well-being, can and often will detract from employees' job performance, discourage employees from remaining on the job, or keep them from advancing in their careers; and (b) even without regard to these tangible effects, the very fact that the discriminatory conduct was so severe or pervasive that it created a work environment abusive to employees because of their race, gender, religion, or national origin offends Title VII's broad rule of workplace equality.

119. W&L created a workplace environment discriminatory and prejudicial as a direct and proximate result of Newsome's engagement in protected activities and her refusal to forgo rights secured to her under the applicable statutes/laws. W&L doing so for purposes of depriving Newsome equal protection of the laws, due process of laws, deprivation of rights secured under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, Constitution, W&L's keeping with systematic discrimination leveled against Newsome for her exercising rights and efforts to deprive her life, liberties and the pursuit of happiness. W&L's termination was in keeping with the systematic discrimination to which Newsome has become a victim in that W&L is engaging in criminal/civil wrongs to prevent and preclude Newsome equal employment opportunities and efforts of destroying her life and to create difficulty in her obtaining employment opportunities elsewhere. Such systematic discriminatory practices W&L was engaging in being practices commonly known to be used by white employers to preclude/prevent African-Americans from obtaining employment elsewhere. Such acts which are clearly motivated by malice and ill intent.

120. W&L was responsible and condoned the discriminatory acts rendered Newsome. W&L confident that it had destroyed evidence was disappointed to find that Newsome had retained copy of Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual. Rendering W&L disappointing news in that they had failed to achieve their goal in cover-up/masking discriminatory practices and efforts to remove and destroy evidence supporting its knowledge of violations of its own policies and procedures. Moreover, W&L's failed efforts to cover-up/mask conspiracy it was engaging in with others through the systematic discrimination leveled against Newsome based upon its knowledge of her engagement in protected activities/exercise of protected rights. A reasonable mind may conclude that W&L's removal and destruction of Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual and/or evidence were efforts taken by it to avoid liability. Moreover, W&L's repeated efforts in requesting that Newsome waive protected rights and not bring legal action against it in exchange for receipt of medical benefits and/or medical insurance.

> In a hostile work environment harassment claim where no job benefits are affected by the undesirable conduct alleged, a plaintiff must demonstrate both that sexual or other discriminatory harassing actions took place, and that the employer was responsible for the harassment. (Andrews v. City of Philadelphia, 895 F.2d 1469 (1990); Katz v. Dole, 709 F.2d 251 (1983))

121. A reasonable mind may conclude that in the context of all the relevant circumstances based upon the facts, evidence and legal conclusions contained in this instant Charge as well as that yielded from an investigation into the allegations contained herein, that W&L's acts were pervasive, severe, hostile, discriminatory, threatening, intimidating, harassing, etc. and done for purposes of forcing Newsome to quit and efforts initiated for PRETEXT purposes – i.e. to cover-up/mask discriminatory practices. A reasonable mind may conclude that Newsome has been affected emotionally and mentally and during the course of her employment had to endure repeated discriminatory practices because W&L was aware of her participation in protected activities, refusal to waive rights secured under the Civil Rights Act, Constitution and other governing statutes/laws. Moreover, that W&L repeatedly attempted to get Newsome to forego protect rights and agree not to bring legal action against it in exchange of obtaining medical insurance to which she was entitled. Said demand by W&L is clearly prohibited as a matter of statutes/laws. W&L is attempting to coerce Newsome to forego protected rights in exchange of receiving medical benefits to which she was entitled and medical benefits afforded to whites and/or those similarly situated.

> In determining whether harassment is sufficiently serious enough to create a hostile work environment, the employer's conduct as a whole is evaluated in the context of all the relevant circumstances. Haehn v. City of Hoisington, 702 F.Supp. 1526 (1988).

122. PRIMA FACIE: (a) Newsome suffered intentional discrimination due to her race and sex. W&L allowed harassment by male supervisor (Gillan) and others based on knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities, filing of charges/lawsuits, participation in investigation(s), etc. W&L knew and/or should have known of Gillan's engagement in employment violations and discriminatory practices leveled against female employees wherein he repeatedly asserted and abused his supervisory powers and subjected them to harassment; resulting in a sexual relationship with female employee in his usurpation of power/authority. (b) The record evidence will support W&L's discrimination against Newsome was pervasive and regular. Moreover, W&L's knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities that further prejudiced it against her. Leading W&L to conspire with others to infringe upon Newsome's rights secured under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, Constitution, Fair Housing Act, Family & Medical Leave Act, and other statutes/laws governing said matters. Newsome was subjected to discriminatory employment practices as a result of W&L's knowledge of her engagement in protected activity. W&L subjected Newsome to discriminatory practices in keeping with the systematic discriminatory practices leveled against Newsome for the reporting of Title VII violations, filing of charges and/or lawsuits, participation in investigations, etc. for recovery of injury /harm sustained. (c) The record evidence will support W&L's hostility towards Newsome, retaliatory and discriminatory practices towards Newsome, etc. which has detrimentally impacted/affected Newsome's life. W&L as early as January 15, 2007 and as recent as January /February 2009 (in response to its January 9, 2009 termination), was timely, properly and adequately placed on notice of its employment violations and the detriment of such civil rights violations leveled against Newsome. (d) The discrimination W&L leveled against Newsome would detrimentally affect a reasonable person of the same race and/or sex. (e) Respondent superior liability exist and the record evidence will support that W&L's Human Resource Representative (Andrea Griffith), W&L's Managing Partner (C. J. Schmidt), W&L's Executive Committee, Partners of the firm and others were aware they were acting in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act and/or the applicable statutes/laws governing employment. Moreover, W&L's removal and destroying of evidence known to it to be incriminating and would support employment violations/discrimination.

> Various tests have evolved to establish hostile work environment claims under Title VII. One test for sexual harassment requires that: (a) the employee suffered intentional discrimination due to sex and race; (b) the discrimination was pervasive and regular; (c) the discrimination detrimentally affected the plaintiff; (d) the discrimination would detrimentally affect a reasonable person of the same sex in that position; and (e) respondent superior liability exists. (Knabe v. Boury Corp., 144 F.3d 407 (1997); Andrews v. City of Philadelphia, 895 F.2d 1469); Washington v. City of Cleveland, 948 F.Supp. 1301 (N.D. Ohio 1996). (The subjective component of the test for a hostile work environment in violation of Title VII does not require that an employee feel physically threatened; instead, the employee must subjectively perceive the environment to be abusive. (Williams v. General Motors Corp., 187 F.3d 553)

123. The record evidence will support that Newsome repeatedly advised W&L of concerns of abusive environment and supervisors' hostile and unacceptable behavior. Behavior which affected Newsome's work and ability to perform job duties assigned. Discriminatory practices to which Newsome objected to both verbally and/or in writing. Newsome being advised that W&L would handle; however, W&L allowed such discriminatory practices to continue and merely continued to seek ways to cover-up discriminatory practices and complaints submitted by Newsome, as well as seek ways in which to terminate Newsome's employment. Newsome's complaints of employment violations and W&L's knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities resulted in its going through Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) to remove and destroy evidence it knew would be incriminating and would reveal discriminatory practices, criminal/civil wrongs and efforts taken the obstruct justice should Newsome bring legal action against it – legal action W&L repeatedly requested that Newsome waive in exchange for receipt of medical benefits to which she was automatically entitled to.

> Factors as to whether the workplace environment is sufficiently hostile or abusive to support . . . harassment claim under Title VII include: (a) frequency of discriminatory conduct; (b) its severity; (c) whether it is physically threatening or humiliating or a mere offensive utterance; and (d) whether it unreasonably interferes with employee's work performance. (Clark County School Dist. V. Breeden, 532 U.S. 268, 121 S. Ct. 1508, 149 L. Ed. 2d 509; DeAngelis v. El Paso Mu. Police Officers Ass'n, 51 F3d 591 (1995)).

> In a case of race-based hostile work environment, . . . court established the following elements: (a) membership in a protected class; (b) plaintiff subjected to unwelcomed racial harassment; (c) harassment based on race; (d) harassment had the effect of unreasonably interfering with work performance by creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive work environment; and (e) the existence of employer liability.

X. EMPLOYMENT-AT-WILL/PROTECTED ACTIVITY:[19]

> At-Will Employment Doctrine: At common law, in the absence of an employment contract or a definite term, employees and employers were free to terminate their relationship with or without cause at any time. The parties were engaged in an employment relationship said to be terminable "at-will" by either party. This notion became known popularly as the "at-will doctrine.". . . Today the employer's unbridled freedom to fire an employee without cause and without incurring civil liability no longer exists. . . Later, courts began to find that self-imposed termination policies and practices of employers contained implied promises not to discharge at-will employees except for good cause. If a discharge occurred under circumstances showing intentional abuse, the courts often permitted an additional recovery under a separate tort theory, such as intentional infliction of emotional distress . . . modern courts have fashioned a separate, independent cause of action sounding in tort for wrongful discharge. This tort continues judicial > settled that, where an employer has mixed motives for discharging an employee, and any one of those reasons is unlawful, the non-discriminatory nature of other motives does not preclude a finding of reasonable cause to believe that the employer (or, in this case, employers) has engaged in an unlawful employment practice within the meaning of Title VII of the Act. [NLRB v. Murray Ohio Manufacturing Company, (48 LC ¶ 18,691) 326 F.2d 509, 517 (6th Cir. 1964); Wonder State Manufacturing Company v. NLRB (49 LC ¶ 18,870) 331 F.2d 737, 738 (6th Cir. 1964)].

124. Newsome's termination of employment with W&L was premeditated. Moreover, W&L having knowledge that Ohio is an at-will-employment state, thought that it could create false/frivolous reasons for Newsome's unlawful/illegal discrimination and go unchallenged. However, to W&L's disappointment, it found out that documentation removed from Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) and destroyed would be that in which Newsome a copy had. W&L removing and destroying evidence that it knew would be incriminating and would reveal violations of its own policies and procedures. W&L thinking that it could terminate Newsome and assert perhaps a defense under the at-will-employment doctrine. However, such defense would also fail because the record evidence reveals that such defense is null/void when the evidence supports violations under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act and/or applicable laws governing said matters. Moreover, that W&L's Title VII/employment violations and discriminatory practices occurred under circumstances showing intentional abuse and intentional violations of the statutes/laws prohibiting discrimination in employment. W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was *in violation of fundamental principle of public policy and clearly a breach of an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. While W&L's policies and procedures clearly violates its Policies & Procedures – i.e. see "EQUAL OPPORTUNTY" and "POLICY AGAINST UNLAWFUL HARASSMENT" at pages 11 and 20-22 of Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual - W&L took a far departure from said policies and procedures and subjected Newsome to discriminatory practices as a direct and proximate result of her race/sex and knowledge of her engagement in protected activities. W&L doing so with knowledge that its discriminatory treatment of Newsome during her employment as well as her termination violated Title VII of the Civil Right Act and employment laws.

125. An investigation into this instant Charge will support that W&L engaged in unlawful employment practices by refusing to represent Newsome in legal matters to which she sought representation and that said refusal was illmotivated – see "REPRESENTATION OF EMPLOYEES" at page 22 of Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual at EXHIBIT "4" attached hereto. Said refusal by W&L to represent Newsome was discriminatory and denied as a direct and proximate result of her race and its knowledge that Newsome had engaged in protected activities. W&L knew and/or should have known that Newsome believed in exercising rights secured to her under the laws. That Newsome believed in pursuing the proper legal avenue/recourse when protected rights were violated. W&L with said knowledge attempted to coerce Newsome to forego the exercise of protected rights; moreover, waive the right to bring legal action against it for the discriminatory practices leveled against her.

126. Newsome's unlawful/illegal termination would not have occurred had W&L not been aware of her engagement in protected activities and/or filing of EEOC Charge/lawsuits. Moreover, Newsome's engagement and participation in civil rights activities, refusal to forego protected rights, knowledge of Thomas J. Breed's former law firm's (SMR&S) intent to file a frivolous lawsuit against Newsome, resulted in the unlawful/illegal termination. The fact that ALL persons engaging in such civil wrongs against Newsome and trying to convince her to waive and/or forego rights were white is pertinent information – apparently not understanding or appreciating (as Newsome did) the sacrifices of persons making it possible for the creation and enactment of civil rights laws.

An investigation into th is instant Charge will support systematic discrimination and that W&L's discriminatory practices and t ermination was a direct and proximate result of it s knowledge of Newsom e's engagem ent in protect ed activities and her refusal to forego exercising protected rights. W&L determined to violate Newsom e's rights and decided that should she bring legal action against it, it would resort to the sy stem creat ed to destroy and m ask such discrim inatory practices leveled against African-Am ericans. Moreover, resort t o advising th e EEOC an d/or g overnment agencies of New some's engagement in other legal matters . W&L will be attempting to rely upon unlawful/illegal practices of former employers and others against Newsome. As with W&L and many others, the o bject of such discriminat ory practices is to; (a) deprive Newsom e of equal employment opportunities, (b) deprive her equ al protection of the laws, (c) deprive her due proces s of laws, (d) obstruct the administration of justice, and (e) paint Newsome as the boy-who-cried-wolf, paranoid, a serial litigator, etc. – such tactics of a system destroy the li ves of African-Americans and/or people of colo*r.*

O ne of three o f Respondent's officials who participated in the dec ision to discharge Charging Party stated in an affidavit that he ha d contacted an employer against whom Charging Party had m ade a previous Commission Charge. He states that the employer re commended that "we tak e action now for our o wn protectio n." He also stat ed that "the m aterial in (Charging Party' s perso nnel file) gave indication th e (Charging Party) was n ot rational (s ic). The file reflected he had filed a C ivil Rights charge with E EOC. I was sure the same thing would eventually happen to me." . . . There is no evidence on the record indicating that Respondent would have discharged Charging Party had it not been aware of Charging Part y's earl ier charge. Such an action based, at least in part, upon Chargi ng Party' s participation in Commission procee dings violates Section 704(a) of Title VII.

129. An investig ation into this instant Charge will support systematic discriminatory practices leveled against Newsome. Moreover, W&L's engagement with third parties to induce th e breach and/or discriminatory practices. It was during the signing of the Magistrate's Order in a legal matter brought by SMR&S attorney (David Mera nus) on beha lf of their client (Stor-All) advised of his knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activity. Information confirming Newsome's concerns of systematic discriminatory practices as well as being stalked from job-to-job/state-to-state and her em ployer(s) bein g contacted and notified of her enga gement in protected activities. Said contact is made for purposes of getting Newsom e terminated from place of em ployment, deprive Newsome of equal em ployment opportunities, deprive Newsom e equal protection of the laws, etc. See EXHIBIT "24" – February 6, 2 009 Letter to Meranu s attached hereto and incorporated by reference.

131. Newsome believes that an investigation into this instant Com plaint m ay reveal that W&L's term ination of h er em ployment is an o ngoing pattern-of-discrim ination and/o r systematic discrimination of certain white em ployers against Newsom e for her exercising of protected rights secured to her under Title VII, Civil Rights Act, Fair Housing Act, etc. Newsome in good faith exercised her rights and brought the applicable legal actions to address legal wrongs rendered against her – said engagem ent and/or pursuit which is clearly protected and prohibits retaliation against her. Moreover, Newsome had a good faith belief that she is being subjected to systematic discrimination and former employers and other s have been stalking her from job-to-j ob/state-to-state contacting her employ ers and adv ising of past/present legal actions and/or her intent to file future lawsuits.[21] As evidenced in Newsome's conversation with David Meranus, attorney for Stor-All, in a lawsuit filed by him on behalf of Stor-All against Newsom e. Confirmation of s aid stalking was made known on February 6, 2009 during the e xecution of Magistrate's Order ruling in favor of Newsome's motion to tra nsfer matter. See EXHIBIT "24" – February 6, 2009 Letter of Newsome to David Meranus attached hereto an d incorporat ed b y re ference. W&L obtaining a copy of said correspondence in that i t is evident Newsome's termination of em ployment and Stor-All 's la wsuit establishes a causal connection.

> IMPORTANT TO NO TE: That while Newsom e was not sure (however had an idea) of the persons behind the stalking, Meranus' confirmation of February 6, 2009, shed additional light and provided Newsome with pertinent information to determine this. In the lawsuit SMR &S brought against Newsome on behalf of its client (Stor-All), Stor-All's insurance company (Liberty Mutual) has been made known. This information is important because Liberty Mutual has been linked to the employer in New Orleans, Louisiana in the matter Meranus addressed. Supporting a CAUSAL Link and acts in furtherance of systematic discrimination against Newsome; moreover, the scope, range (extending across states), and at what great lengths that white employers have gone to see that Newsome is not employed. In that it was Meranus that mentioned this matter, Newsome believe it is important to determine how such information was obtained and the CAUSAL Link between Newsome's engagement in protected activity in New Orleans, Louisiana and her termination of employment from W&L. While Newsome was not aware during the settlement of a claim with Liberty Mutual on January 21, 2009 (day after SMR&S filed complaint on behalf of Stor-All against Newsome), during the course of Stor-All's lawsuit, its insurance company has become known to Newsome. Therefore, raising serious and valid concerns as to Liberty Mutual's role, Stor-All and SMR&S role in Newsome's termination of employment with W&L. See EXHIBIT "27" – January 21, 2009 Fax from Liberty Mutual to Newsome attached hereto.

Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 704(a), 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e-3(a).

132. While W&L may attempt to assert that Ohio is an "employment-at-will" state, its Title VII violations against Newsome precludes any such defense under said "at-will" doctrine. Moreover, its retaliation and harassment of Newsome because she opposed employment practices prohibited by law precludes any such defense under the employment-at-will doctrine.

133. Newsome believes the evidence provided not only in this instant Complaint and written documentation evidencing W&L's knowledge that she was engaging or would be engaging in protected activity – had filed and/or would be filing Title VII actions opposing unlawful practices, filing of criminal complaint addressing civil wrongs (i.e. under Civil Rights Act, etc.), participating in an investigation, proceeding with lawsuits addressing civil wrongs protected under Title VII, Civil Rights Act, etc. – will support retaliation by W&L and its attempt to cover-up/mask said violations by committing criminal/civil wrongs in the taking and destroying of evidence from Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked).

Muir v. Chrysler LLC, 563 F.Supp.2d 783 (N.D.Ohio.W.Div., 2008) - "Protected activity" element of prima facie case of retaliation under Title VII may be met by evidence of opposing an unlawful practice or making a charge, testifying, assisting or participating in an investigation, proceeding or hearing. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 704(a), 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e-3(a).

134. An investigation into this instant Charge may yield information that W&L having knowledge that Newsome would be bringing civil lawsuits against former employers. Therefore, in an effort to aid former employers and/or those engaged in legal action brought by Newsome, W&L terminated Newsome's employment to provide opposing parties with an undue advantage – by financially devastating Newsome for purposes of creating difficulty in bringing actions and to provide opposing parties with an unlawful/illegal advantage – over any claims that she would be entitled to bring under the applicable statutes/laws within the time allotted. RAISING VALID CONCERNS that such practices are in furtherance of the systematic discrimination leveled against Newsome and the perpetrators of said discrimination are ALL white – in keeping with each scratching the others back. W&L relying up on its knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities and intent to use such information as a defense, proceeded to go into Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) to remove and destroy evidence which it knew was incriminating and would support the discriminatory practices leveled against Newsome. Moreover, W&L's violations of its own policies and procedures. Then W&L attempted to coerce Newsome and get her to waive any rights she had to bring legal action in exchange for receiving medical benefits to which she is entitled and benefits afforded to white employees and/or those similarly situated.

135. Newsome believes the evidence contained in this instant Complaint as well as an investigation into the allegations of this Complaint will yield that she complained of harassment and/or hostile/ discriminatory treatment; therefore, shielding/protecting her against the retaliatory acts rendered her by W&L. Furthermore, that W&L's retaliation towards Newsome was a direct and proximate result of her notifying of exercising protected rights and its knowledge of Newsome's participation in bringing and/or filing of charge(s)/complaint(s)/lawsuit(s) to recover from civil/legal against her as well as her participation in an investigation.

Payton v. Receivables Outsourcing, Inc., 840 N.E. 2d 236 (Ohio.App.8.Dist.Cuyahoga.Co., 2005) - Complaining to the employer about. . . harassment is a protected activity for the purposes of a claim for retaliatory discharge.

Payton v. Receivables Outsourcing, Inc., 840 N.E. 2d 236 (Ohio.App.8.Dist.Cuyahoga.Co., 2005) - An employee is engaged in a protected activity, for the purposes of a claim of retaliatory discharge, if she opposes a discriminatory employment action or has made a charge, testified, assisted or participated in any investigation, proceeding, or hearing concerning discriminatory employment practices.

Gliatta v. Tectum, Inc., 211 F.Supp.2d 992 (S.D.Ohio.E.Div., 2002) - For purposes of a retaliation claim under Title VII, activities such as filing an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) claim fall under the "participation" clause of Title VII. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 704(a), 42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e-3(a).

The record evidence will support Newsome's reporting of harassment by supervisor(s); as well as others harassing her for exercising of protected rights and seeking relief from said wrongs. How bold and blatant was W&L? The record evidence will support that Newsome timely, properly and adequately placed it on notice of violations; moreover, W&L having access to various sources to support its knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities elected to take a far departure from its own policies and procedures for purposes of depriving her equal employment opportunities, equal protection of the laws, etc.

136. Newsome's termination was unjustified, illegally motivated, was not due to any economic conditions and/or hardships, was not of business necessity and is evidenced by W&L's hiring of several white employees AFTER Newsome's termination of employment in its efforts of creating an ALL-white workplace and its efforts to destroy evidence to cover-up/mask discriminatory practices when it went into Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) to remove and destroy evidence incriminating to it and revealing knowledge of its employment violations.

137. Bad Faith Discharges. An alternate theory of recovery in wrongful discharge cases may be advanced on the ground that the employee's at-will employment contract contained an implied-in-law covenant of good faith and fair dealing and that an unjustified dismissal under some circumstances constitutes a breach of the covenant enabling the employee to recover damages in a cause of action sounding in contract or tort, in some cases, both contract and tort [Note: Protecting At-Will Employees Against Wrongful Discharge: The Duty To Terminate only in Good Faith. 93 Harv L Rev 1816 (1980)]. To some extent this theory has been recognized by the courts in . . . Ohio [Randolph v. New England Mut. Life Ins. Co. (6th Cir. Ohio) 526 F2d 1383]. See 31 Am Jur Trials 317 § 7.

138. Bad Faith Breach of Contract. Regarding breach of contract claim in terminating Newsome's employment, W&L violated its contractual obligations in bad faith, then W&L is liable for all damages suffered by Newsome which are traceable to the breach, including those which could not be foreseen at the time the contract of employment was formed. Newsome's employment was terminated by W&L in bad faith violation of the employment contract, therefore, Newsome can recover all damages proximately caused by W&L's bad faith breach, including damages for mental distress, provided such injury is proximately caused by the bad faith breach. See 31 Am. Jur Trials 317 § 60, p. 509.

139. W&L in terminating Newsome's employment breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

140. Definition of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing. Newsome seeks to recover damages which she claims were sustained as a result of W&L's breach of its duty to act in good faith and deal fairly with Newsome with regard to the terms of W&L's personnel and appraisal policies and procedures. Every contract of employment includes as a matter of law an obligation of good faith and fair dealing between the parties in its performance or enforcement. This implied duty of good faith and fair dealing forbids either party from doing anything which will interfere with the right of the other to receive benefits of the agreements. The implied duty imposes on each party the obligation to do everything that the contract presupposes they will do to accomplish its purpose. See 31 Am Jur Trials 317 § 60, pp. 509-510.

141. Breach of the Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing – Standard of Proof. Liability for the W&L's breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing is imposed for failure of it to act in good faith and to deal fairly rather than arbitrarily in the performance of its obligations under the employment contract so as not to frustrate the purpose of the employment contract or to deny Newsome the benefits of the contract. It is not necessary to prove actual dishonesty, fraud or concealment in order for Newsome to recover damages for breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing. See 31 Am Jur Trials 317 § 60, p. 510.

142. As a matter of law, Newsome is entitled to recover liability s ustained by W &L for employment violations and its breac h of the duty of good f aith and fair dealing. W&L acted arbitrary and committed criminal/c ivil wrongs to cover-up/mask Title VII/employment violations. While it is not necessary for Newso me to prove actual dishonesty, frau d or throug h the evidence contained in this instant Charge, W&L's theft of her property to cover-up/mask and shield an illegal animus will further sustain pretext and knowledge of its engage ment in criminal/civil wrongs leveled against Newsome.

XI. R EDUCTION IN FORCE:

> Hodgens v. General Dynamics Corp., 144 F.3d 151 (1st Cir. 1998) - [6]Employees' rights to obtain leave under . . .are essentially prescriptive, setting subst antive floors for conduct by employers, and creating entitlements for employees. [9]Employer's motive is relevant to whether em ployer has violated proscriptiv e provisions . . . protecting from discrim ination those em ployees who exercise their rights . . .; the issue i s whether employer took the adverse action because of a prohibited reason or for a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason. [18]. . .protects e mployee who visits a d octor with sym ptoms that are eventually dia gnosed a s constituting a serious health condition, even if, at the time of the initial medical appointment s, the illness has not yet been diagnosed nor its degree of seriousness determined. [21]For employee to be unable to pe rform his or her job within meaning of . . . section entitling employee to 12 weeks of leave for seriou s h ealth condition m aking em ployee unable to perform his or her job, it will suffice if employee is unable to perform job because of need to o btain m edical treatm ent o r diagnosis; he or she d oes not have to be physically u nable to work. [23]Employer m ay n ot use reduction-in-force (RIF), reorganization, or im proved-efficiency rationale as pretext to mask actual d iscrimination or retaliat ion for employee's exercise of . . . rights; the mere incantation of the mantra of "efficiency" is not a talism an insulating an em ployer from liability for invidious discrimination.
> > N.23 - But an employer may not use its RIF/reorganization/improved-efficiency rationale as a pretext to m ask actual discrimination or retaliation; the m ere inc antation of the m antra of " efficiency" is not a tal isman insulating an e mployer from liability for invidious discrim ination. See McDonnell Douglas, 411 U.S. at 804, 93 S.Ct. 1817 (employer may not use an ostensibl y legitim ate reason for an adverse action as a pretext for discrimination that is prohibited by statute); 29 U.S.C. § 2615(a); 29 C.F.R. § 825.220; cf. INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 944, 103 S.Ct. 2764, 77 L.Ed.2d 317 (1983): "Co nvenience and efficiency are not the prim ary objectives-or the hallm arks-of democratic government." Nor are they the objectives of public policy underlying statutes . . .

[25]Even if employer's articulated reason for its adverse employment action is facially neutral, as in the case of a reduction in force (RIF), if in reality the employer acted for reason prohibited by the . . . retaliation provision, then its asserted legitimate reason and its ostensibly nondiscriminatory selection criteria as to who is subject to RIF cannot insulate it from liability.

> N.25 - Because of the availability of seemingly neutral rationales under which an employer can hide its discriminatory intent, and because of the difficulty of accurately determining whether an employer's motive is legitimate or is a pretext for discrimination, there is reason to be concerned about the possibility that an employer could manipulate its decisions to purge employees it wanted to eliminate. See Weldon v. Kraft, Inc., 896 F.2d 793, 798 (3d Cir.1990) (Subjective evaluations of performance "are more susceptible of abuse and more likely to mask pretext" than objective job qualifications.) (internal quotation marks omitted). The law does not permit this. Even if an employer's actions and articulated reasons are facially neutral (e.g., a RIF), if in reality the employer acted for a prohibited reason (e.g., retaliation for exercising a protected right), then its asserted legitimate reason for the RIF and its ostensibly non discriminatory selection criteria as to who gets RIFed cannot insulate it from liability. As Judge Posner wrote in the context of . . .discrimination, "[a] RIF is not an open sesame to discrimination . . . Even if the employer has a compelling reason wholly unrelated to . . . any of its employees to reduce the size of its work force, this does not entitle it to use the occasion as a convenient opportunity to get rid of its . . . workers." Matthews v. Commonwealth Edison Co., 128 F.3d 1194, 1195 (7th Cir.1997) (citation omitted). Nor can it be an opportunity to get rid of workers who exercise their . . . right. . .

143. There is no legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for Newsome's termination. An investigation into this instant Charge will support a pattern-of-practice used by W&L. Such practices that W&L may have also been used on another African-American employee (Angela Hart). As Newsome advised W&L, "You mentioned that an employee, Angie, brought charges against Wood & Lamping which was unsuccessful. While I am not aware of any charges by Angie, I would think that any comparison of my treatment and handling would be left up to the appropriate agency to handle; moreover, up to a jury to decide . ." See EXHIBIT "16" attached hereto and incorporated by reference. Taking advantage of African-Americans who may not be familiar with what their rights are and apparently W&L's repeat reliance upon such corrupt practices – placing employees at a disadvantage so that they can obtain an undue/unlawful/illegal advantage should legal actions be brought against it.

144. W&L may attempt to use the reduction-in-force as an excuse to shield/mask Title VII violations – thinking that the state of the economy would provide it with such a frivolous defense masked behind discriminatory practices – however, *SHORTLY AFTER Newsome's unlawful termination, W&L hired several white employees. Evidencing further discriminatory practices to reduce the number of African-Americans W&L employed and efforts of maintaining an ALL-white workforce.

145. Even if W&L's RIF were true (when it is not), such defense cannot be used to deprive Newsome of protected rights secured to her under Title VII and/or other statutes/laws governing engagement in protected activities. W&L's deprivation of benefits under the Family & Medical Leave Act was also due to Newsome's race. W&L affording whites and/or those similarly situated medical leave to attend to medical issues; however, deprived Newsome of such benefits when she applied.

146. W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was done to aid Thomas J. Breed's former employer/law firm (SMR&S) in a lawsuit it obtained knowledge would be filed against Newsome.[22] W&L's termination being done to aid a third party in legal matters to be brought against Newsome and to provide said third-party with an undue/illegal/unlawful advantage over Newsome. W&L's participation in such matter is also racially and discriminatorily motivated. Moreover, PRETEXT to cover-up/mask systematic discriminatory practices leveled against Newsome.

147. Newsome was not only terminated because of her race and W&L knowledge of her engagement in protected activities, but to deprive Newsome of medical benefits and/or fringe benefits afforded to white employees and/or those similarly situated.

> Hollins v. Ohio Bell Telephone Co., 496 F.Supp. 2d 864 (S.D.Ohio.W.Div., 2007) - When an employee complies with the requirements of the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA), the employee is entitled to certain substantive rights under the Act, including the right to take FMLA leave and the right, upon return from the leave, to be restored to the position of employment held when the leave commenced or to an equivalent position.

> Schmauch v. Honda of America Manufacturing, Inc., 295 F.Supp.2d 823 (S.D.Ohio.E.Div., 2003) - Employers have prescriptive obligation under the FMLA, i.e., they must grant employees substantive rights guaranteed by the FMLA, and they have a proscriptive obligation, i.e., they may not penalize employees for exercising such rights.

XII. PUBLIC POLICY:[23]

Defining "Public Policy:" "Public policy" has been characterized as the principle that no one can lawfully do that which has a tendency to be injurious to the public or against the public good.. . . In order for an employee discharge to be against public policy, the discharge must affect a duty that inures to the benefit of the public at large, rather than a particular employee. . . . the specific circumstances in which public policy will support a cause of action for wrongful termination, stating that a public policy cause of action arises only when the termination is in retaliation for performing an important and socially desirable act, exercising a statutory right, or refusing to commit an unlawful act. The Model Termination Act provides that an employer may not take adverse action in retaliation against an individual for filing a complaint, giving testimony, or otherwise lawfully participating in proceedings under the Act. Courts in some states also look to the employer's motivation for discharging the employee as a part of its determination of whether public policy has been violated. A discharge will violate public policy only when the employer was motivated by bad faith, malice, or retaliation. The termination itself must be motivated by an unlawful reason or purpose that is against public policy. 82 Am. Jur 2d Wrongful Discharge § 57 (Green v. Amerada-Hess Corp., 612 F.2d 212 (5th Cir. 1980)).

Public Policy: Despite the almost universal acceptance of the employment at will doctrine, the common law governing the employment relationship has been undergoing a period of flux corresponding to increasingly rapid and fundamental changes in the legal, social and economic conditions affecting the relations between employer and employee that have taken place since the formulation of the doctrine. An important judicially created restriction on an employer's otherwise arbitrary right to discharge an employee at will is the view recognizing a civil cause of action for wrongful discharge when such an employee is discharged in retaliation for actions which are protected by public policy. . . . The "public policy" exception to the employment at will doctrine has been applied to afford civil relief to an employee at will discharge under the following circumstances: . . . any employee because the employee has testified or is about to testify, or because the employer believes that the employee will testify in any investigation or proceedings relative to the enforcement" of the. . . law guilty of a misdemeanor, . . . for having filed a complaint under the . . . Act under the provision of that Act m aking it unlawful "to discharge. . . any em ployee because such employee has filed any complaint or instituted or caused to be instituted any proc eeding unde r or related to this Act, or has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding. . . In m ost cases recognizing a private cause of action on the part of an employ ee discharged i n retaliation for actions which are protected by public policy, the public policy is evidenced by either. . . a statute designed specifically to protect the rights of the employee vis-à-vis employer. . . .On the other hand, there is also authority rec ognizing a cause of action for the wrongful discharge of an em ployee at will in instances in which the employer's motive for the discharge i nterferes w ith an important public interest, regardless of the exist ence of an express statutory prohibition or statem ent of public policy specifically protecting the right of the em ployee vis-à-vis em ployer. . . a nd the public's interest in m aintaining a proper balance between the two, the court held that any termination of employment which is motivated by bad faith or malice or based on retaliation is not in the best interest of the economic system or the public good and constitutes a breach of the employment contract . Other courts have apparently indicated that a discharge from em ployment which is m otivated solely by malice on the part of the employer may be actionable under the prima facie tort doctrine. . .Using this approach, the plaintiff must satisfy the burden of showing an exclusive m alicious m otivation for the discharge, excluding any motive other than a desire on the part of the employer to cause the plaintiff harm . The co nduct recog nized as tortuous must involve specific intent on the part of the employer to harm the plaintiff or to achieve some other proscribed goal. . . . 7 Am Jur POF 2d 20-22, 25-28.

Public Polic y Considerations. The courts hav e dem onstrated an increased willingness to imply a terminate-for-cause only condition in an at-will em ployment c ontract, and to enforce th e covenant o f good faith and fair dealing arising out of the contractual relationship . The ground upon which m ost courts are w illing to im pose a restriction on the em ployer's right to di scharge an a t-will em ployee without cause, however, is public policy considerations. Thus, where an employee is fired for exercising a right that public policy w ould encourage, or for refusing to per form an a ct that public policy would condemn, civil liability for resulti ng damages may be imposed on the employer. This restriction on the em ployer's power to fire an at-will employee without cause appears to have been accepted, at least in principle, in the following jurisdictions:. . . Ohio [Smith v. Frank R. Schoner, Inc., 94 Ohio App 308, 51 Ohio Ops 4 55, 115 NE2 d 25]. . .The restriction has also been ap plied in two areas of federal jurisdiction. . . . The discharged e mployee bears the bur den in most ca ses of establishi ng that the alleged w rongful di scharge contravened a public policy that was clearly mandated and specifically expressed in a statute, judi cial decision or administrative agency regulation. . . While the courts are not entirely uniform in their statement of the public policy exception, they do appear to be in greater agreem ent on the specific areas covered by this ground. Where the employee has been discharged for allegedly exercising a right encouraged by public policy, liability has been imposed in virtually every case where the dismissal was in retaliation for filing a . . . claim . . . In other cases, the courts have imposed liability for wrongful discharge where the firing was in retaliation for an employee's serving on a jury, for reporting criminal activity, . . . Liability for wrongful discharge is more consistently found on public policy where the dismissal is in retaliation for the employee's refusal to participate in illegal acts or for attempting to rectify unlawful activity by the employer or coworkers. Thus, an employer has been held liable for wrongful discharge for firing an at-will employee in retaliation for the employee's refusal to participate in an illegal . . . scheme. . . 31 Am Jur Trials 317, § 6.

148. While Newsome approached W&L for legal representation regarding a legal matter she was dealing with involving her landlords and their counsel out of concerns that she was being requested to forego rights secured to her under the Fair Housing Act, Civil Rights Act, Constitution and other governing statutes/laws, Newsome did so in keeping with W&L's policies and procedures; however, W&L retaliated against Newsome because she refused to waive her rights and/or forego protected rights – i.e. as W&L has repeatedly tried to get Newsome to waive rights and agree not to bring legal action against it. See EXHIBIT "15" attached hereto and incorporated by reference.

149. Relation of Public Policy to Covenant: In determining whether the covenant of good faith and fair dealing has been breached, many courts will also examine public policy. Conduct of the employer which violates or undermines the public policy set forth in a statute will be deemed a breach of the covenant. In some jurisdictions, a cause of action for wrongful discharge in contract for violation of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing is coterminous with, and extends no further than, a cause of action for wrongful discharge in tort. The case that first enunciated the covenant involved an employee fired because she refused to yield to her supervisor's. . . overtures; public policy was the basis for creating the implied covenant that prevents such abusive dismissals*, the court holding that a termination by the employer of a contract of employment at-will which* is motivated by bad faith and malice or based on retaliation is not in the best interest of the public good and constitutes a breach of the employment contract. Thus, a dismissal which contravenes public policy constitutes not only an independent retaliatory tort, but also a breach of the implied covenant between the parties. While some courts have held that a discharged at-will employee may maintain a claim for breach of an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing whenever the termination violates an established public policy, most of the courts recognizing breach of the implied covenant claims in the employment at-will context have done so where dismissal deprived an at-will employee of an employment benefit that was earned or reasonably expected. 82 Am Jur 2d Wrongful Discharge § 68.

150. Public Policy Exception: Most courts recognize an exception to the common-law at-will employment doctrine where the termination of the employee is based upon a violation of a principle of public policy. Thus, where Newsome is discharged for exercising a right or performing a duty that public policy encourages or requires, W&L may be subject to liability in tort for wrongful discharge. This exception is recognized, at least in principle, in the overwhelming majority of jurisdictions. Newsome may bear the burden of establishing that the alleged wrongful discharge contravened a public policy that was clearly mandated and specifically expressed in a constitution, statute, judicial decision, or administrative agency regulation in which Newsome was discharged for pursuing an employment-related right that is one of important public interest protected by state or federal constitutions, statutes, or judicial decisions; of which an investigation will yield Newsome has shown and the evidence provided in this instant Charge will support has been sustained. See 48 Am Jur POF 2d 192-193.

151. A. PRIMA FACIE: (a) Public policies involved in W&L discriminatory practices and employment violations leveled against Newsome include but it not limited to – (i) Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.]; (ii) 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.6 and 1601.7; (iii) Section 4112 of the Ohio Revised Code; (iv) Ohio Civil Rights; (v) Ohio/U.S. Constitution; (vi) knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities – i.e. filing of past EEOC Charges, filing of civil lawsuits, filing of claims under the Fair Housing Act, filing of criminal charges and participation in investigation, etc.; (vii) participation in federal investigations; (viii) violations under the applicable statutes/laws governing said matters. (b) Newsome was engaged in conduct favored by public policy. (c) W&L knew and/or believed that Newsome was engaged in protected activities – i.e. W&L finding out through other sources as well as Newsome advising of engagement in protected activities. (d) Retaliation was the motivating factor behind W&L's termination of Newsome's employment. W&L retaliated by terminating Newsome to deprive her of benefits to which she was entitled. Not only that, W&L having knowledge that Thomas J. Breed's (attorney Newsome assisted) former law firm (SMR&S), on behalf of its client (Stor-All), would be filing a lawsuit against Newsome; therefore, W&L terminated Newsome's employment for purposes of providing SMR&S and its client with an undue/illegal advantage over Newsome in the lawsuit that would be filed against her. (e) W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was to undermine an important public policy. In an effort to cover-up/mask such systematic discriminatory practices, W&L removed and destroyed evidence that it knew and/or should have known was incriminating. Evidence which it knew and/or should have known would support W&L's violations of its own policies and procedures. Criminal/civil wrongs committed by W&L were done with malicious intent to obstruct the administration of justice.

> Elements of Public Policy Exception: To prevail, an employee asserting a discharge that undermines public policy must establish five key elements:
> (i) The existence of a relevant public policy;
> (ii) That he or she was engaged in conduct favored by public policy;
> (iii) That the employer knew or believed that the employee was engaged in protected activity;
> (iv) That retaliation was a motivating factor in the dismissal decision, and > (v) That the discharge would undermine an important public policy.
>
> (a) In some jurisdictions, to state a claim for wrongful discharge due to violation of public policy, an employee must demonstrate:
>
> (1) that the employee was discharged;
>
> (2) that the dismissal violated some clear mandate of public policy; and
> (3) that there was a nexus between the defendant and the decision to fire the employee.

(c) A prim a facie case of term ination in violation of public policy requires a showing that:

(1) the employer prohibited the em ployee from perform ing a public duty o r exercising an im portant job-related right or privilege;

(2) action directed by the employer would violate a specific statute relating to public health, safety or welfare, or would un dermine a clearly exp ressed public p olicy relating to the em ployee's basic re sponsibility as a citizen or a right or privilege as a worker;

(3) the employee was term inated as a result of refusing to comply with the em ployer's order or directive was based on th e em ployee's reasonable belief that the action ordered by the employer was illegal, contrary to a clearly expressed statut ory policy relating to the employee's duty as a citizen, or violative of the employee's right or privil ege as a worker. See 82 Am Jur 2d Wrongful Discharge §55. Owens v. Carpenters' Dist. Council, 161 F3d 7 67 (4th Cir. 1998); Hayden v. Bruno's Inc., 588 So.2d 874 (1991).

B. PRIMA FACIE: (i) Newsom e was discharged/term inated from her place of employment; (ii) Newsom e's discharge/termination clearly violated public policy clearly m andated by statutes/laws governing said m atters – i.e. (a) Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.]; (b) 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.6 and 1601.7; (c) Section 4112 of the Ohio Revised Code; (d) Ohio Civil Rights; (e) Ohio/U.S. Constitution; (f) knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities – i.e. filing of past EEOC Charge s, filing of civil lawsuits, filing of claim s under the Fair Ho using Act, filing of cri minal charg es and participation in investigation, etc.; (g) participation in federal investigations; (h) violations under the applicable statutes/laws governing said matters.; and (iii) The rec ord evidence will support that here is a nexus/connection betwe en W&L's decision to discharge/terminate Newsome's.

C. PRIM A FA CIE: (I) W&L's termination of Newsom e's em ployment prohibited her from perform ing a public policy and exercising he r rights secured/guaranteed under the FMLA. Depriving Newsome of benefits pro vided to whi te em ployees and/or em ployees sim ilarly situated. Moreover, W&L deprived Newsome from perform ing a public duty or ex ercising an i mportant job-related right or privilege. (II) The unl awful/illegal acts and discrim inatory practices orchestrated by W&L clearly violated public policy -- Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C.A. § 2000e et seq.]; 29 C.F.R. §§ 1601.6 and 1601.7; Section 4112 of the Ohio Revised Code; Ohio Civil Rights; Ohio/U.S. Constitution; knowledge of Newsom e's engagem ent in protected activities – i.e. filing of past EEOC Charges, filing of civil lawsuits, filing of claim s under the Fa ir Housing Act, filing of criminal charges and pa rticipation in investigation, etc.; participation in federal investigations; violations u nder the ap plicable statutes/laws go verning said m atters. -- relating to public health welfare and clearly undermined expressed public policy relating to Newsome's responsibility as a citizen and employee. (III) Newsome's employment with W&L was term inated because she refuse d to forego protected rights; for the exercise/engagem ent in protected rights; reporting of criminal/civil wrongs to the proper authorities; W&L' s knowledge that any discrim inatory practices and/or employment violations would be m et with legal action, therefore, W&L had representatives rem ove and destroy evidence it knew would be incriminating and support violations of its own policy and procedures as well as public policy.

152. PRIMA FACIE: (a) W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was motivated by reasons contrary to public policy. (b) Based on the orientation provided Newsome at the time of employment, Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual, W&L's Employer's Guide, W&L's specializing in employment/labor laws, and the applicable statutes/laws governing employment laws, she had an expectation of job security and fair treatment under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and other governing statutes/laws.

> (Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures Manual @ p. 11) – EXHIBIT "4" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

(c) An investigation into this instant Charge will support an absence that W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was for good cause. Therefore, a breach of good faith and fair dealing. (d) A special fiduciary relationship existed between W&L and Newsome. (d) An investigation on into this instant Charge as well as the evidence, facts and legal conclusions set forth herein, will support actual bad faith, malice, criminal intent, breach of good faith and fair dealing on the part of W&L and it having knowledge that there was no just cause for the termination of Newsome's employment. Criminal/Civil wrongs by W&L to remove and destroy evidence that it knew was incriminating and would support discriminatory intent/practices; moreover, done to obstruct the administration of justice and deprive Newsome rights secured to her under the applicable statutes/laws. W&L demanding that Newsome waive her right to bring legal action against it in exchange of benefits unlawfully/illegally withheld in retaliation of her exercising and/or engaging in protected activities. (e) An investigation into this instant Charge will support fraud, deceit and misrepresentation on behalf of W&L to cover-up/mask discriminatory practices leveled against Newsome. (f) W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was arbitrary.

> Specific Circumstances Constituting Breach: Breach of an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing occurs where:
> (i) Termination is motivated by a reason contrary to public policy.

(ii) There is an expectation of job security or fair treatment.

(iii) There is an absence of an express representation that employment is terminable at will.

(iv) A special, fiduciary relationship exists between the parties.

(v) There is actual bad faith on the part of the employer, not merely the absence of good cause for discharge.

(vi) There is fraud, deceit, or misrepresentation on the part of the employer.

(vii) The discharge is arbitrary.

82 Am Jur 2d Wrongful Discharge § 71.

153. Through this instant Charge, Newsome seeks the intervention of the EEOC/OCRC to enforce the applicable laws and to bring the proper actions of and against W&L for any /all employment violations/discriminatory practices found. Newsome was unlawfully/illegally discharged/terminated from employment with W&L in violation of public policy.

> Miller v. MedCentral Health Sys., Inc., 2006 -Ohio- 63 (Ohio.App.5.Dist.Richland.Co., 2006) -Fact that statutes and regulations establishing public policy do not require an employee to report the violation or specifically protect the reporting employee from retaliation does not foreclose a discharged employee from maintaining a common-law claim for wrongful discharge in violation of public policy.

154. Newsome believes an investigation will support that she engaged in protected activities and W&L's knowledge of said engagement (i.e. filing of Title VII Charges, filing of lawsuit(s) for civil/legal wrongs, participation in investigations – See Exhibit "_" - filing of charge for violations under Fair Housing Act, notified W&L of request for medical leave protected under Family & Medical Leave Act, etc.) all of which supports Newsome's engagement in statutorily protected activities, of which an adverse employment action occurred which resulted in Newsome's termination of employment. There is a causal link between Newsome's engagement in the protected activities and W&L termination of her employment for the engagement in said protected activities. There is evidence to support W&L repeatedly requesting that Newsome waive protected rights and not bring legal action against it in exchange for benefits to which she was automatically entitled to – benefits W&L afforded to whites and/or those similarly situated; however, deprived Newsome of.

> Kowalski v. Kowalski Heat Treating, Co., 920 F.Supp. 799 (N.D.Ohio, 1996) - To establish prima facie case of retaliation, plaintiff must show that he engaged in a statutorily protected activity, that adverse employment action occurred, and that causal link between the two exists.

155. W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was done with willful, malicious and deliberate intent to cause her injury and harm.

> Malicious Discharge: Some courts recognize tortuous discharge claims only when the termination of an employee is in retaliation for performing an important and socially desirable act, exercising a statutory right, or refusing to commit an unlawful act.. . . 82 Am Jur 2d Wrongful Discharge § 83 (*Graham v. XIII. PRETEXT:

> She now must have the opportunity to demonstrate that the proffered reason was not the true reason for the employment decision. This burden now merges with the ultimate burden of persuading . . . she has been the victim of intentional discrimination. She may succeed in this either directly by persuading the court that a discriminatory reason more likely motivated the employer or indirectly by showing that the employer's proffered explanation is unworthy of credence. Tye v. Board of Educ. Of Polaris Joint Vocational School Dist., 811 F.2d 315 (6th Cir. Ohio, 1987)
> In each case, the plaintiff attempted to establish a prima facie case by showing (1) membership in the protected class, (2) discharge, (3) qualification for the position, and (4) replacement by a person who was younger or a member of the opposite. . . Tye v. Board of Educ. Of Polaris

156. PRIMA FACIE: (a) Newsome is an African-American female; therefore a member of the protected class. (b) Newsome was discharge/terminated from employment with W&L. (c) Newsome was qualified for the position (Estate Planning Coordinator) for which she was hired and was qualified to perform additional job responsibilities assigned her; and (d) Newsome was replaced by a white employee; moreover, W&L hired several white employees shortly AFTER Newsome's unlawful/illegal discharge.

157. PRIMA FACIE: (a) The reason provided to Newsome for her termination has no basis in fact. PRIOR to W&L's termination of Newsome's employment it removed and destroyed evidence from her desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) that would support violation of its own policies and procedures – removing and destroying of incriminating evidence. (b) The proffered reason W&L provided Newsome for termination did not actually support or motivate the adverse action taken against her. (c) An investigation into this instant Charge will support that W&L 's proffered reason for Newsome's termination is false, unworthy of belief and insufficient to motivate the adverse action taken against her.

> Title VII plaintiff who is trying to show that employer's stated reason for adverse employment action is pretextual is required to show by preponderance of evidence that proffered reason: (1) had no basis in fact; (2) did not actually motivate adverse action; or (3) was insufficient to motivate adverse action. Niswander v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 529 F.3d 714 (6th Cir. Ohio, 2008)

158. An investigation into this instant Charge will support W&L's EXTREME discriminatory and retaliatory practices leveled against Newsome. Moreover, leveled against African-Americans in efforts of reaching its goal of creating a non-African-American workplace. Moreover, the criminal/civil wrongs committed against African-Americans for reporting what they believed were discriminatory practices – i.e. Paul Berninger advising that another African-American employee (Angie Hart) expressing concerns similar to that of Newsome. Newsome was unaware of such claims by Hart until Berninger addressed such matter to her. Based upon W&L's handling of Newsome's employment as well as efforts to cover-up/mask/destroy evidence, a reasonable mind may conclude that W&L did the same with Hart for purposes of avoiding liability.

> When determining relative weight to assign similar past acts of harassment, factfinder may consider factors such as severity and prevalence of similar acts of harassment, whether similar acts have been clearly established or are mere conjecture, and proximity in time of similar acts to harassment alleged by plaintiff. Hawkins v. Anheuser-Busch, Inc., 517 F.3d 321 (6th Cir. Ohio, 2008)
> In hostile work environment case, more weight should be given to acts committed by serial harasser if plaintiff knows the same individual committed offending acts in the past; serial harasser left free to harass again leaves impression that acts of harassment are tolerated at the workplace and supports plaintiff's claim that workplace is both objectively and subjectively hostile. Hawkins v. Anheuser-Busch.

An investigation into this instant Charge will also support that W&L subjected Newsome to a hostile working environment over her objections. Moreover, W&L allowed an attorney (Brian Gillan) who had a history of hostile treatment of females as well as engaged in sexual relationship, etc. to continue to work in its employment. W&L aware of Gillan's past and history of harassing female employees allowed said behavior and assigned Gillan to Newsome. W&L left Gillan free to commit such unlawful/illegal acts for purposes of creating a hostile, threatening, intimidating, discriminatory, harassing environment against Newsome for purposes of covering-up/masking its unlawful/illegal discriminatory and retaliatory practices for Newsome's objections and participation in protected activities. When a white employee (Kathy Richey) was subjected to alleged acts by another attorney (Peter Newman), W&L terminated Newman's employment and allowed Richey time off to recoup from such alleged hostile treatment alleged by Newman. However, when Newsome was subjected to such hostile/discriminatory and retaliatory practices to which she complained, W&L allowed Gillan to remain in its employment and to feel free to continue such employment violations.

159. A reasonable mind may conclude that W&L's removal and destruction of evidence will support PRETEXT. Moreover, said actions of W&L were done for purposes of obstructing the administration of justice, depriving Newsome equal employment opportunities, cover-up/mask

W&L's violation of its own policies and procedures. W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was illegally motivated, done to cover-up/mask discriminatory practices, aid third party (SMR&S) in a legal matter it having knowledge would be brought against Newsome – termination being rendered in efforts of eliminating a CONFLICT OF INTEREST – a clear violation involving public policy as well as violation against an employee for engaging in protected activities made known to W&L.

> To establish, for purpose of Title VII claim, that employer's reason for terminating employee was pretextual because it was more likely than not that employee was terminated based on an illegal motivation, employee must show that the sheer weight of the circumstantial evidence of discrimination makes it more likely than not that the employer's explanation is a pretext, or coverup. Abdulnour v. Campbell Soup Supply Co., LLC, 502 F.3d 496 (6th Cir. Ohio, 2007)

> To demonstrate that employer's reason for the discharge was pretextual, in an employment discrimination action, the employee show by the preponderance of the evidence either (1) that the proffered reasons had no basis in fact, (2) that the proffered reasons did not actually motivate his discharge, or (3) that they were insufficient to motivate discharge. Jones v. Potter, 488 F.3d 397 (6th Cir. Ohio, 2007)

160. An investigation into this instant Charge will support that Newsome approached W&L for representation in a legal matter to which W&L assigned Elizabeth Horwitz (attorney – white female). However, Horwitz' job was to convince Newsome to waive protected rights secured to her under the Fair Housing Act, Civil Rights Act, Constitution and other governing statutes/laws – as W&L has attempted to do regarding depriving Newsome rights secured under the FMLA (See EXHIBITS "15" attached hereto and incorporated by reference). When Newsome refused to waive protected rights, Horwitz became upset and requested to be assigned another person to provide her legal assistant. Horwitz became very hostile and irate because Newsome refused to forego her rights and expressed her entitlement to exercise said rights. From that point on, W&L subjected Newsome to discriminatory/hostile/retaliatory practices and harassed due to her refusal to waive protected rights, having to move forward and file the required civil actions to preserve her rights, W&L's knowledge of Newsome's engagement in protected activities as well as filing of charges/lawsuits to protect her rights. W&L taking job duties away from Newsome and giving to white employee – job duties to which was still required in the position Newsome held based on the attorneys assisted. At the time of Newsome's termination the job duties taken away from her and given to white employee were still required of the attorney, Thomas J. Breed (Department Head of the Estate Planning Group), to which Newsome provided legal support. The decision makers and those engaging in the discriminatory practices leveled against Newsome are ALL white. Moreover, from the evidence, clearly have no regard for Civil Rights nor understanding of Newsome's appreciation and entitlement to said protected rights sought to be exercised. W&L's proffered reason for the termination of Newsome's employment is PRETEXT for racial prejudice.

> Black female employee had proven employer's violation of statute regarding right of all persons to full and equal benefits of laws where employee had established that she was treated in harassing manner due to her filing of discrimination claims, that her attempted transfer was employment term varying from those accorded to similarly situated white workers, and that, although employer articulated legitimate nondiscriminatory reasons by way of rebuttal, employer had been shown by preponderance of evidence to have employed such reason merely as pretext for racial prejudice. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1981. Harris v. Richards Mfg. Co., Inc., 511 F.Supp. 1193 (n.6) (1981).

Proof of prima facie case under section of civil rights statutes regarding right of all persons to full and equal benefits of laws requires that person alleging violation first establish that his employment terms vary from those which his employer accords to similarly situated white workers. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1981. Harris v. Richards Mfg. Co. at n. 7.

161. Because of the systematic discriminatory practices of W&L and its engagement of third-parties to deprive her of protected rights, Newsome has brought this instant Charge with the EEOC/OCRC for purposes of recovering damages sustained from such injury/harm. Therefore, Newsome is demanding that the EEOC/OCRC perform the MANDATORY ministerial duties required and enforce the applicable statutes/laws governing Title VII/Civil Rights violations and/or discriminatory practices/employment violations leveled against her. An investigation into this instant Charge will support W&L's efforts to get Newsome to forego – i.e. agree not to bring legal action against it – protected rights in exchange for obtaining medical benefits to which she was entitled to and said benefits afforded to white employees of W&L and/or those similarly situated. As a direct and proximate result of Newsome's refusal to waive protected rights, W&L allowed her medical benefits/fringe benefits to lapse.

Under section of civil rights statutes regarding right of all persons to full and equal benefits of laws, both compensatory and punitive damages are recoverable. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1981. Harris at n.8.

An award of punitive damages is permissible under section of civil rights statutes relating to right of all persons to full and equal benefits of laws even though action under such section is joined with Title VII action. Civil Rights Act of 1964, §§ 701 et seq., 704(a) as amended 42 U.S.C. A. § § 2000e et seq., 2000e-3 (a); 42 U. S.C.A. § 1981. Harris at n. 9.

Under section of civil rights statutes relating to right of all persons to full and equal benefits of laws, court may award compensatory damages for embarrassment, humiliation and mental anguish, and damages for emotional distress may be inferred from circumstances as well as proved by testimony, but there must be sufficient causal connection between defendant's illegal actions and injury to plaintiff. 42 U.S.C.A. § 1981. Harris at n.10.

XIV. CONSPIRACY:

Limitations on the Right of Discharge – Statutes Providing Civil Remedies: Some statutes dealing with the employer-employee relationship may expressly provide civil remedies. 42 USCS § 1985(3) authorizes an action by the injured party for the recovery of damages sustained as a result of a conspiracy (1*) for the purpose of depriving any person of equal protection of the laws, or of equal privileges and immunities under the laws* . . . A conspiracy by private persons to accomplish the purposes proscribed by § 1985(3) is actionable, even in the absence of state action. . . . Even without state action, a plaintiff may contend that various of his constitutional rights,. . . have been denied , or that the exercise of such rights was the reason for defendant 's termination in his employment within the context of a § 1985(3) action. However, the jury will be faced only with the question of whether defendants conspired to deprive plaintiff of his constitutional rights. 7 Am Jur POF 2d 28, 29, 31. See Griffin v. Breckenridge, 408 U.S. 88, 29 L.Ed.2d 338, 91 S.Ct. 1790. 15 Am. Jur. 2d, Civil Rights § 16.

The alleged discriminatory practices against which the employee's charge or opposition is directed need not be found to actually exist in order for the employee's activity in protesting to be protected under § 2000e-3(a), if the employee has acted on a reasonable and good faith belief that the employer was engaging in unlawful employment practices. Even if the employee's complaints are completely unfounded, the Act forbids employer retaliation for making them. . . . The filing of charges is protected even if the charge contains collateral statements which are false and apparently malicious, and this includes charges filed against a previous employer. .. . . Section 2000e-3(a) also provides "exceptionally broad" protection from retaliation against individuals who oppose unlawful employment practices.. . .Activities in opposition to unlawful employment practices that have been held to be protected under § 2000e-3(a) include. .. other prohibited discrimination in employment. . . expressing an intention to file an unfair employment practices charge. . . Opposition to any unlawful employment practice is protected against retaliatory discharge by § 2000e-3(a). . .this is true even if opposition is unintentional and not by design. . . Moreover, it has been held that § 2000 e-3(a) protects an individual from retaliatory discharge even when the target of his activity in opposition to unlawful employment practices is directed against someone other than the retaliating employer. 7 Am Jur POF 2d 34 – 37

162. An investigation into this instant Charge will support that W&L CONSPIRED and engaged with third-parties to deprive Newsome of equal employment opportunities because of its knowledge of past filings of EEOC Charges against other employers, filing of lawsuits, participation in investigations, and engagement in protected activities. W&L's termination of Newsome's employment was done to deprive her equal protection of the laws and equal privileges and immunities under the laws. Moreover, to provide opposing parties involved in litigation with an undue/unlawful/illegal advantage over Newsome. As a direct and proximate result of W&L's unlawful/illegal employment practices, Newsome has been denied rights secured to her under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Ohio Civil Rights law, Ohio/U.S. Constitution, and any and all other statutes/laws governing said matters.

*PRIMA FACIE - CAUSAL CONNECTION: (a) W&L 's termination of Newsome occurred on January 9, 2009. (b) SMR&S' client's (Stor-All's) Amnesty Weekend was set for January 9th thru January 11th. Stor-All advising Newsome of Amnesty Weekend via facsimile at the number assigned Newsome by W&L. See EXHIBIT "18" – 12/19/08 Fax From Lori Whiteside/Stor-All attached hereto and incorporated by reference. (c) On January 9, 2009, Stor-All provided Newsome with "NOTICE TO LEAVE THE PREMISES."

See EXHIBIT " 19" attached hereto and incorporated by refe rence. (d) While Stor-All provid ed Newsome with faxes at W &L during her employment, on the date of Newsom e's termination Stor-All did not provide her with the "No tice to Leave the Premises" via facsimile (as it did with the 12/19/08 fax and others) because it knew that W&L was terminating Newsome's employment on said date. (e) On January 20, 2009, SMR&S on behalf of Stor-All filed a lawsuit against Newsome.

XV. S YSTEMATIC DISCRIMINATION:

Elements of Damages – In Gene ral: All em ployment-related losses for salaried and hourly wage employees are recoverable in a wrongful discharge suit, regardless of whether t he action so unds in contract or tort. Thus, the em ployee m ay re cover back pay , bo nuses, and commissions that would have been ea rned but for the dismissal. The employee's recovery m ay include damages fo r loss of fringe benefits. . . The em ployee is also entitled to recover the cost of securing oth er em ployment, and this cost m ay include moving expenses. Moreover, it has been held that the em ployer may be estop ped from raising the issue of the employee's duty to mitigate damages IF the employee's dismissal was maliciously motivated .. . . Dam ages for con sequential losses and emotional distress genera lly are not allowed in a wrongful discharge case if the cause of action sounds e ntirely in contract. Where the action sounds in tort alone, or in both contract and tort, such compensatory dam ages are allowed. . . Plaintiff testified th at as a result of the firing he suffered em otional distress b y way of humiliation and lost co nfidence and trust. . . The c ourt held tha t this evidence supported an award of com pensatory dam ages.. . . P unitive damages are recoverable in an action for bad faith wrongful discharge if the defendant's con duct is sufficiently culpable.. . . The am ount of punitive damages or exemplary damages to be awarded is a m atter for the discretion of the jury ; it depend s on the circum stances of the particular case. Punitive dam ages must bear a reasonable relationship to the actual dam ages sustained by t he plaintiff, though there is no fixed ratio by which punitive and actual dam ages are properl y proportioned. An appel late court generally will not substitute its judgment for that of the trier of fact as to the a mount of punitive damages to be awarde d. . . . Plaintiff experienced substantial difficulty finding subsequent employment, and she ultimately had to leave the state. She had lived and worked in a sm all co mmunity where a dism issal for poor work perform ance would necessari ly have an adverse consequence on her reputation and ability to earn a livelihood. One of the charges against her had been fabricated and her personnel file had been altered to support the allegation. An award of punitive damages against her former employer was affirmed on the basis of this evidence. . . .Plaintiff had a . . . faithful performance until she was fired by a vindictive supervisor . . .At the trial of Plaintiff's wrongful discharge case, expert witnesses testified that the employer had violated its own personnel practices and policies in thirteen separate instances; and the employer's evidence at trial was often inconsistent and even contradictory as to whether plaintiff was fired . . . as a part of a reduction-in-force program. In addition, the president of the company for which she had worked had revealed a calloused attitude toward. . . plaintiff in particular. . . An award of exemplary damages against the plaintiff's former employer was affirmed on appeal. [FN 89] *Flanigan v. 163. An investigation into this instant Charge will support that Newsome has been subjected to unlawful/illegal employment practices in violation of Title VII, Civil Rights law, Constitutional law as well as other statutes/laws governing said matters. Moreover, that the very statutes/laws that the EEOC are to uphold and enforce has REPEATEDLY been abused and violated with Newsome being a victim of such legal wrongs. An investigation into this instant Charge will support how the United States Department of Labor and others have engaged in UNLAWFUL/ILLEGAL practices in retaliation of Newsome's bringing of legal actions challenging its Department's (i.e. EEOC) failure to enforce and uphold the laws under which it was created.

The evidence will support that UNLAWFUL/ILLEGAL practices have been leveled against Newsome – as with other African-Americans – in retaliation of her challenging the EEOC's practices to interfere and/or preclude her from getting employment. Such practices which include posting information regarding EEOC Charges and/or engagement in protected activity on the INTERNET for ill purposes – i.e. for the destroying of Newsome's life, liberties and pursuit of happiness; moreover for blacklisting purpose. Our government's USAGE of such practices clearly in violation and a FAR DEPARTURE from EEOC policies and procedures.

164. While it is a KNOWN FACT of the difficulty in African-Americans and/or people of color obtaining employment; moreover, equal employment opportunities, an investigation into this instant Charge will support the SYSTEMATIC DISCRIMINATION that has been leveled against Newsome and the SYSTEMATIC PRACTICES of our government to destroy the lives, liberties and pursuit of happiness of such citizens as Newsome who are educated, happy to be an African-American because they have challenged discriminatory handling of charges filed.

165. As a direct and proximate result of the SYSTEMATIC DISCRIMINATORY practices leveled against Newsome and perhaps made known to W&L and/or W&L taking as acceptable based on handling of matters by the United States Department of Labor and others in the posting of information on the INTERNET for PUBLIC review. A reasonable mind may conclude that the United States Department of Labor and others have engaged in such practices for prejudicial/discriminatory/retaliatory intent.

XVI. EMPLOYER LIABILITY:

166. PRIMA FACIE: An investigation into this instant Charge will support that: (a) W&L knew and/or should have known of the harassment Newsome was repeatedly subjected to; and (b) W&L failed to take prompt and/or appropriate corrective action. W&L advising Newsome that supervisor (as Gillan) wanted to continue to work with Newsome. Gillan wanting to do so over Newsome's objections to harassment and discriminatory practices. W&L aware of Newsome's objections required Newsome to continue to work with Gillan because Gillan advised wanting to continue to work with her. W&L allowed and condoned such harassment although it was aware of the affect it was having on Newsome's ability to perform her job duties, the emotional and mental affect on Newsome, and that its harassment of Newsome was in retaliation of Newsome's reporting and/or complaining of said harassment and discriminatory practices.

An investigation will support that while W&L implemented policies and procedures to remedy harassment and discriminatory practices, it may be held liable for discriminatory practices in violation of Title VII and applicable statutes/laws when the evidence supports an indifference as to indicate an attitude of permissiveness that amounts to discrimination – i.e. when a white employee (Kathy Ritchey) was subjected to what W&L believed to be harassment, it terminated the employment of an attorney (Peter Newman) and afford Ritchey time off from work to recover. However, W&L allowed a serial harasser (Brian Gillan) to remain in its employment and allowed Gillan to continue such practices. Gillan known as a harasser having a history of harassing female employees as well as engaging in sexual acts. While W&L terminated Newman for such harassment, it allowed Gillan to remain in its employment. Newsome advising of concerns of how white co-workers subjected to Gillan's harassment were not required to continue to work with Gillan; however, W&L required Newsome to continue to work with Gillan over her objections. It was only AFTER W&L was notified by Newsome of reporting such discriminatory practices that W&L assigned Gillan to another employee. However, the discriminatory practices did not stop there. W&L continued such discriminatory practices and retaliated against Newsome for such reporting. Shortly after the Gillan incident, W&L took away job duties of Newsome to give to white employee. W&L in retaliation beginning the process of covering up/masking such pattern-of-discriminatory practices took away Newsome's job duties over her objections. W&L failed to take an affirmative duty to prevent said harassment and discriminatory practices rendered Newsome. W&L allowed a serial harasser (Gillan) and person known to repeatedly violate its policies and procedures to remain in its employment. Gillan is an attorney who specializes in employment/labor law; therefore, he knew and/or should have known that his acts were in clear violation of Title VII and other statutes/laws governing said matters.

> For purposes of a Title VII claim, even after a hostile work environment has been established, for an employer to be liable for the . . . harassment of an employee by a coworker, the harassed employee must show that the employer both (1) knew or should have known of the harassment and (2) failed to take prompt and appropriate corrective action. McCombs v. Meijer, Inc., 395 F.3d 346 (6th Cir. Ohio, 2005)
> An employer who implements a remedy for . . . harassment can be liable for . . . discrimination in violation of Title VII only if that remedy exhibits such indifference as to indicate an attitude of permissiveness that amounts to discrimination. McCombs v. Meijer.
>
> For an employer to take corrective action is not enough to avoid liability for hostile environment. . .harassment; an employer has an affirmative duty to prevent . . .harassment by supervisors. Civil Rights Act of 1964, § 701 et seq., 42 U.S.C .A. § 2000e et seq. Williams v. General Motors Corp., 187 F.3d 553 (6th Cir. Ohio, 1999)

167. An investigation into this instant Charge will support how W&L subjected Newsome to discriminatory practices as a direct and proximate result of her complaints regarding employment violations/violations to its policies and procedures. W&L's response to Newsome's complaints manifests in differences or unreasonableness in light of the facts W&L knew and/or should have known of. W&L did not handle Newsome's complaints as it did those of white employees subjected to such harassment and/or discriminatory treatment – i.e. W&L was going to force Newsome to continue to work with Gillan although it having knowledge of how his harassment and discriminatory practices affected her work. While W&L terminated the employment of Peter Newman for committing such harassment against a white employee (Kathy Ritchey). W&L subjecting Newsome to strict and oppressive supervision in its efforts to engage in acts that it thought would be a defense to their covering up/masking their discriminatory practices. W&L repeatedly created situations discriminatory in nature for purposes of providing them with proffered reasons for Newsome's termination should she bring legal action against it. W&L denying Newsome benefits afforded to white employees and/or those similarly situated. W&L engaging in unlawful/illegal practices with third-parties to provide third-parties with undue/illegal/unlawful advantage in legal matters that would be sought against Newsome and/or to which Newsome was presently engaged and/or would be engaged in. Therefore, W&L is to be held liable for the harassment and discriminatory practices addressed herein.

> When employer responds to charges of coworker. . .harassment, employer can be liable under Title VII, only if its response manifests indifference or unreasonableness in light of facts employer knew or should have known. Blankenship v. Parke Care Centers, Inc., 123 F.3d 868 (6th Cir. Ohio, 1997)
> When employer implements remedy after complaint of coworker harassment, it can be liable for . . . discrimination in violation of Title VII only if that remedy exhibits such indifference as to indicate attitude of permissiveness that amounts to discrimination. Blankenship v. Parke.

168. An investigation into this instant Charge will support that W&L is liable under Title VII and other statutes/laws governing said matters because it knew and/or should have known of discriminatory practices complained of. W&L's removal and destruction of evidence from Newsome's desk (Newsome kept her desk locked) further supports knowledge that it was engaging in Title VII violations and/or discriminatory practices. Moreover, W&L failed to implement prompt and corrective action (i.e. as it did with Peter Newman) when an African-American employee complained of harassment that it afforded to white employees complaining of harassment. Because of the well-established pattern of Gillan, Gillan's harassment and discriminatory practices were foreseeable or fell within scope of his employment. Nevertheless, W&L failed to respond (as it did with Peter Newman) adequately and effectively to negate liability because said harassment involved an African-American employee. An African-American employee W&L knew was engaged in protected activities. Rather than take remedial action to deter the discriminatory practices rendered Newsome, W&L made a conscious decision to try and cover-up/mask such unlawful/ illegal wrong doings.

> For purposes of determining whether employer is liable under Title VII for . . . harassment of employee by co-workers, test is whether employer knew or should have known of charged . . .harassment and

Ohio R.C. § 4112.02. Courtney v. Landair Transport, Inc., 227 F.3d 559 (6th Cir. Ohio, 2000)

169. While W&L assigned Gillan to another person, it failed to correct and/or deter such discriminatory practices of Gillan and allowed him to remain in its employment although such practices were in violation of Wood & Lamping LLP Policies and Procedures. The taking away of Newsome's job duties and giving them to white employee is pretext; as well as support W&L's creation of discriminatory/hostile/harassing work environment. Further supporting at what lengths W&L went to cover-up/mask such discriminatory practices.

170. W&L failed to implement prompt and appropriate corrective action and merely attempted to hide such discriminatory practices that later manifested itself and resulted in Newsome's termination, its monitoring of Newsome and waiting for opportunities to terminate her employment – i.e. believing upon learning of SMR&S intent to file a lawsuit on behalf of Stor-All was the opportunity it was waiting on and W&L's duty to eliminate the CONFLICT OF INTEREST that would arise should Newsome remain in the employment of W&L – the taking away of Newsome's job duties to give to white employees shortly after her complaint regarding the discriminatory/harassing practices of Gillan.

171. Tort Measure of Damages Applicable to Theories of Recovery. It is the law that every person who suffers detriment from the unlawful act or omission of another arising out of tort or breach of duty may recover compensation in money from the person in fault which is called damages. Detriment means any loss or harm suffered in person or property. Damages also may be awarded for detriment which the evidence proves is reasonably certain to result in the person injured, in the future. With regard to Newsome's theories of recovery which has been explained based upon race/sex discrimination, breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, and Newsome's claims of deceit, the measure of damages for breach of such duties which gives rise to recovery in tort is the amount which will compensate Newsome for all detriment proximately caused by the breach, whether it could have been anticipated or not. See 31 Am Jur Trials 317 § 60, pp. 510-511.

172. The record evidence will support how W&L conspired with third-parties and have gone to great lengths to deprive Newsome equal employment opportunities, equal protection of the laws and efforts taken to keep Newsome from working. It is illegal/unlawful for the EEOC/OCRC to allow the discriminatory practices and criminal/civil wrongs addressed herein to go unaddressed and unpunished. Both the EEOC/OCRC has a duty and obligation to deter and prevent such discriminatory practices as set forth herein and brought to its attention. Pursuant to 42 USC § 1986, the EEOC/OCRC has a duty to enforce the statutes/laws within its jurisdiction as well as deter and prevent such civil rights violations brought to its attention.

Power/Failure to Prevent (42 USC § 1986):

> Every person who, having knowledge that any of the wrongs conspired to be done, and mentioned in section 1985 of this title, are about to be committed, and having power to prevent or aid in preventing the commission of the same, neglects or refuses so to do, if such wrongful act be committed, shall be liable to the party injured, or his legal representatives, for all damages caused by such wrongful act, which such person by reasonable diligence could have prevented; and such damages may be recovered in an action on the case; and any number of persons guilty of such wrongful neglect or refusal may be joined as defendants in the action; . . .

173. Compensatory Damages in Tort: Newsome would be entitled to a finding against W&L, on any of her tort theories of race/sex discrimination, breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing, and Newsome's claims of deceit, and an award to Newsome for damages in an amount that will reasonably compensate her for each of the following elements of claimed loss or harm, provided it is found such harm or loss suffered by her and was proximately caused by the act or omission upon which it is found liability. The amount of such award shall include:

- The reasonable value of medical care, services and supplies reasonably required and actually given in the treatment of Newsome.
- The loss of wages and fringe benefits to date.
- Reasonable compensation for any pain, discomfort, fears, anxiety or other mental and emotional distress suffered by Newsome and of which she or her injury was a proximate cause.

No definite method of calculation is prescribed by law by which to fix reasonable compensation for pain and suffering. Nor is the opinion of any witness required as to the amount of such reasonable compensation. In making an award for pain in suffering the factfinder shall exercise authority with common reasonable judgment and the damages fixed shall be just and reasonable in light of the evidence. See 31 Am Jur Trials 317 § 60 pp. 511-512.

174. Punitive Damages. In the unlawful discharge of Newsome, W&L has acted maliciously, abusively and in wanton disregard of Newsome's rights, therefore, Newsome may be entitled to punitive damages to the trier of fact. In every state where punitive damages are allowed, the jurisdiction will have defined for itself the character of conduct that warrants the imposition of punitive damages. . . . Another consideration is the evidence upon which the factfinder measures the award. Most jurisdictions permit evidence of employer's wealth in a punitive damages case to be used as a sort of yardstick to assess the amount of damages which reasonably ought to be imposed. See 31 Am Jur Trials 317 § 62 pp. 513-514.

The majority of cases to date have allowed recovery of punitive damages in a wrongful discharge case. In assessing punitive damages, the factfinder may be allowed to consider evidence of the W&L's wealth and financial affairs. The rationale is that the award should be in an amount sufficient to have an impact on W&L's attitudes and conduct in the future, so as to act as a deterrent to future wrongful conduct of the type under attack. In other words, the wealthier W&L, the larger should be the assessment of punitive damages. Accordingly, where punitive damages are claimed, Newsome may be allowed to conduct some discovery into the subject of the W&L's financial affairs in most jurisdictions. . . . Newsome should anticipate that discovery into the subject of W&L's financial affairs will be strenuously resisted by it. Accordingly, the discovery plan in a wrongful discharge case should include an effective method of obtaining as much information on the subject of W&L's wealth as the situation will permit in an expedient and efficacious manner. Thus, where liberal or unrestricted discovery into the subject of W&L's wealth is allowed, Newsome should consider seeking the disclosure of the following items of information:

- W&L's current net worth
- W&L's total annual sales or gross income for the last fiscal year and one or more prior fiscal years
- W&L's net annual income for the past fiscal year and one or more prior fiscal years
- The identity and values of all W&L's capital assets
- The nature and amount of W&L's liabilities and obligations
- Copies of the W&L's tax returns whenever such discovery is permitted by the court.

See 31 Am Jur Trials 317 § 31 pp. 437, 438.

175. Through this instant Charge Newsome request an investigation and seeks any and all applicable relief to which she is entitled as a direct and proximate result of Title VII violations and discriminatory practices rendered her.

> 48 Am. Jur. Proof of Facts 2d 240 – 241 – Testimony as to the following elements of damages, among others, should be elicited, when applicable, . . . in an action for bad faith wrongful discharge. (Am. Jur Trials: Wrongful Discharge of At-Will Employee, 31 Am. Jur. Trials 317, §§ 10-11.

Damages:

54. The Commission has the authority to order W&L to pay equitable damages, which include but are not limited to, back pay and reinstatement when there is a finding of discrimination pursuant to R.C. 4112. However, " in instances in which it has been decided that an effective employment relationship could not be reestablished, the courts have excluded reinstatement from the forms of relief granted. *EEOC v. 55. It has also been recognized by the courts that it would be unjust to deny reinstatement without offering some quantum of monetary relief or "front pay" as a substitute.

56. This alternative relief has been deemed necessary not only to grant discharged employees a reasonable opportunity to find comparable employment, but also to deter future improper employer action. *EEOC v. XVII. RELIEF SOUGHT

a) Investigation into the allegations/claims addressed in this instant Charge, the United States Secretary of Labor's/Hilda L. Solis' findings, evidence and legal conclusions it relied upon to render the EEOC's findings and/or conclusion;

Moreover, that during her employment she was subjected to discriminatory and retaliatory treatment for exercising rights secured/guaranteed to her under the applicable statutes/laws of the State of Ohio and/or United States. Newsome does not believe given the facts evidence and legal conclusions set forth here in and that to be determined through an investigation, that a reasonable mind may conclude that it would be in her best interest (mentally or physically) to return to the employment of Wood & Lamping, LLP.* Therefore, Newsome is to be awarded such equitable relief as may be appropriate; including salary of approximately ten (10) years – in that Newsome believes an investigation into this matter will yield the acts of W&L and/or its representatives and employees was done with malicious intent; moreover, was done in that it knew and/or should have known the difficulty Newsome would face in obtaining other employment and W&L's role in a conspiracy to deprive Newsome equal employment opportunities based upon information they have obtained on Newsome; moreover, its acts being to interfere with Newsome's exercise of protected rights guaranteed and/or secured under the United States Constitution, Civil Rights Act and/or any and all applicable statutes laws governing the protected activities in which Newsome has engaged and/or participated in. Moreover, be required maintain any COBRA benefits for a period of three (3) years if it does not want to cover the Plaintiff under its group health coverage and paying any and all over insurance premium coverage to which Newsome became accustomed during her employment with W&L;

i) As a direct and proximate result of Wood & Lamping, LLP's unlawful/illegal actions rendered Newsome she has suffered and continues to suffer injury, including past and future loss of income and other employment benefits, severe emotional pain and suffering, mental anguish, humiliation, loss of enjoyment of life, costs associated with obtaining reemployment, embarrassment, damage to her reputation, and other past and future pecuniary losses. Therefore, Newsome seeks the appropriate relief afforded by laws for such injury/harm and to deter Wood & Lamping, LLP from continuing to practice in such violation of laws.

j) Award Newsome reasonable costs associated with the bringing of this Complaint;[28]

k) Grant Newsome such other and further relief – injunction, etc. – which the Secretary of Labor may deem appropriate to correct the injury/harm sustained by Newsome.

l) If the facts, evidence and legal conclusion sustain, that a finding of and against W&L that probable cause has been found to support its engagement in unlawful discrimination in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, O.R.C. 4112 and/or the applicable statutes/laws governing said matters.

m) That the EEOC/OCRC pursue the applicable legal action to deter discriminatory practices. Providing Newsome with the proper representation as it has done for other citizens when violations are found.

n) That the EEOC/OCRC enforce the applicable statutes/laws correcting and governing discriminatory practices/employment violations.

o) That the EEOC/OCRC seek any and all applicable relief to which Newsome is entitled and is allowed under the applicable statutes/laws governing said matters.

Retention

At this time, the computer system does not automatically delete saved electronic mail, but individual users are encouraged to regularly delete saved messages.

DRESS CODE/CASUAL (FRI)DAY

Clients, visitors, and other attorneys are in the office every day, so employees should dress professionally. Professional dress is defined for men as slacks, shirts with collars, and ties. For women, professional dress is defined as dresses, suits, or dress slacks and blouses.

On casual Fridays, clothing is relaxed to slacks and shirts with collars for men and casual slacks and tops for women. Because clients expect us to maintain a professional image and environment even on casual days, tee-shirts, tank or halter tops, blue jeans, leggings, stirrup pants, sweat shirts, sweat pants, jogging suits, shorts, skorts, capri pants, tennis shoes, and causal sandals are not considered appropriate attire to wear. Individuals wearing inappropriate attire will be admonished to adapt their dress to the above guidelines.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

The firm is an equal opportunity employer, and as such, is firmly committed to treating all employees and applicants equally without regard to race, color, sex, religion, national origin, age, disability, marital status, veteran status, or other protected classes. We will endeavor to make reasonable accommodations for known physical or mental limitations of otherwise qualified employees and applicants with disabilities unless the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of our business. Our employment decisions, including, but not limited to, hiring, compensation, benefits, training, and promotions are based on the principles of equal employment opportunity. Discrimination by any member of the firm will not be tolerated. Suspected violations of this policy must be reported promptly to a member of management or to a partner. Violators will receive discipline appropriate to the offense, up to an including termination. This policy also prohibits retaliation against anyone who has filed a compliant of discrimination or harassment.

FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT (FMLA)

Eligibility

On October 16, 2000, the firm became subject to the Family and Medical Leave Act ("FMLA"). (Should the firm ever drop below 50 employees, it will remain covered by the Act until the future point when it has no longer employed 50 or more employees for 20 or more weeks in the current or preceding calendar year.) Family and Medical Leave is unpaid leave unless the employee has paid leave available.

Employees who have been listed on payroll for at least 52 weeks and have actually worked 1,250 hours during the twelve-month period prior to the date of the leave are eligible for unpaid family and medical leave under the law. Employees who are not eligible for family and medical leave may request leave, but the firm will have to review business considerations and the individual circumstances involved before deciding whether or not to grant the employee's request.

Amount of FMLA Leave Available

Typically, a FMLA leave occurs in continuous uninterrupted blocks of time, up to 12 weeks. However, if the leave is medically necessary, employees may take FMLA leave intermittently or by reducing their normal weekly or daily work schedule. Intermittent leave is measured in no less than 15-minute increments. The employee's weekly average of hours worked over the prior 12 weeks is used to calculate the total number of FMLA hours available. For example, a 40 hour-per-week employee will have 480 hours of leave available; a 37.50 hour–per-week employee will have 450 hours of leave available; a 30 hour-per-week employee will have 360 hours of leave available; and a 25 hour-per-week employee will have 300 hours of leave available, etc.

The twelve-week period is measured backward from each date that the employee commences FMLA leave ("the rolling 12 months method"). The twelve-week annual allotment is for all FMLA covered purposes. In other words, employees are not entitled to take twelve weeks of leave for each qualifying condition.

Reasons for Requesting Leave

Under the FMLA, an eligible employee may take unpaid leave for:

1) the birth of the employee's child and/or in order to care for the child (leave entitlement expires 12 months from the date of birth);
2) the placement of a foster or adopted child with the employee (leave entitlement expires 12 months from the date of placement);
3) to care for the "serious health condition" of an employee's spouse, child, or parent (FMLA does not cover the care of in-laws); or

4) to care for the employee's own "serious health condition," which makes the employee unable to perform the essential functions of his or her job.

The firm will need to carefully analyze each situation to determine if the leave qualifies as FMLA leave. In general, the intent of FMLA is to provide leave for medical conditions that require ongoing, continuous care and treatment. The Act is not intended to cover short-term conditions where treatment and recovery are brief.

Definition of Serious Health Condition

A "serious health condition" is defined as an illness, injury, impairment, or physical or mental condition that may fall into one of the following six categories:

1) a period of incapacity or treatment in a hospital or medical care facility or any subsequent leave needed for the condition; OR
2) a period of incapacity of more than three consecutive calendar days and any subsequent treatment or period of incapacity relating to the same condition that involves:
    i) treatment two or more times by a health care provider, nurse, or physician's assistant under the direct supervision of a health care provider or by a provider of health care services (e.g. physical therapist) under orders of, or on referral by, a health care provider; or
    ii) treatment by a health care provider on at least one occasion which results in a regimen of continuing treatment under the supervision of the health care provider. OR
3) any period of incapacity due to pregnancy or for prenatal care; OR
4) any period of incapacity or treatment due to a chronic serious health condition that requires periodic visits for treatment by a health care provider, continues over an extended period of time, and may cause episodic rather than a continuing period of incapacity (e.g. asthma, diabetes, epilepsy, etc.); OR
5) any period of incapacity due to a condition that is long-term or permanent for which treatment may not be effective (e.g. stroke, terminal diseases, Alzheimer's, etc.); OR
6) any absence to receive multiple treatments by a health care provider for restorative surgery after an accident or injury, or for a condition that, if untreated, would likely result in a period of incapacity of more than three consecutive days (e.g. kidney disease, cancer treatments, etc.).

Unless complications arise, common colds, upset stomachs, flu, ear aches, non-migraine headaches, routine dental or orthodontia problems and periodontal disease do not ordinarily meet the definition of serious health condition. Absences due to the abuse of substances are not covered by the FMLA, but leave taken for the treatment of substance abuse is covered.

Procedure for Requesting Leave

An employee intending to take family or medical leave because of an expected birth or placement, or because of a planned medical treatment, must submit a request at least 30 days before the leave is to begin. If leave is to begin within 30 days, an employee must give notice to the firm as soon as the necessity for leave arises. If an employee is incapacitated, the next of kin is responsible to notify the firm.

In all cases, an employee requesting leave must complete the "Request for Family and Medical Leave" and return it to the firm. (The form is available in the brown forms file cabinet or from Human Resources.) Based on information provided by the employee, the firm will determine if an employee's leave counts as FMLA leave. The firm's notice may be given orally, but will be confirmed in writing.

If an employee exhausts all 12 weeks of FMLA leave, and needs a further extension of some other type of leave, he or she must make written application to the firm. This written request should be made as soon as the employee realizes that he or she will not be able to return at the expiration of the leave period. The firm will consider each extension request separately based upon business considerations and the individual circumstances of each situation.

Medical Certification

A request for leave based on the serious health condition of the employee or the employee's spouse, child or parent must also be accompanied by a "Medical Certification" completed by the applicable health provider. (The form is available in the brown forms file cabinet or from Human Resources.) The firm may require a second or third opinion (at the firm's expense). The firm can ask the employee to provide updated certification no sooner than every 30 days. Employees are permitted at least 15 calendar days to get the medical certification completed and returned after it has been requested by the firm. Depending on the type of FMLA leave, a medical re-certification may be required every 30 days.

Pay During Leave

The employee must use all available paid leave (e.g. paid vacation or sick time, short-term disability, worker's comp., etc.) concurrent with FMLA leave. If available paid leave runs out during the twelve-week period, the remainder of the leave will be unpaid.

Benefits during Leave

Employees will be retained on the firm's health plan(s) under the same conditions that applied before the leave commenced if employees make their contributions to the plan(s). Employees can either pre-pay the amount that would have been collected during the leave or make payments as the leave commences. Failure of the employee to pay his or her share of the insurance premium(s) within the grace period of the due date may result in the loss of coverage. If the employee fails to return to work after the expiration of the leave, the employee may be required to reimburse the firm for payment of insurance premium(s) during the leave, unless the reason the employee fails to return is the presence of a serious health condition that prevents the employee from performing his or her job or because of other circumstances beyond the employee's control.

Employees who take family or medical leave will not lose any earned seniority or employment benefits, but they are not be entitled to accrue any seniority or paid leave that would have accrued if not for the taking of leave. Cash-out payments taken in lieu of group health coverage(s) under the Section 125 plan are not accrued once paid leave is exhausted.

Return to Work

Employees on leave must complete a "Notice of Intention to Return from Family or Medical Leave" and have their health care provider certify that they are fit to return to work before an employee be returned to active status. (The form is available in the brown forms file cabinet or from Human Resources.)

An employee who is certified to return to work will be restored to his or her old position, or to a position with equivalent pay, benefits, and other terms and conditions of employment. The firm cannot guarantee that an employee will be returned to his or her original assignment. The firm will determine whether a position is considered to be an equivalent position.

Employees who need to return to work on an intermittent basis, or who are not able to perform the essential functions of their prior position, may be transferred to a position that is better suited to intermittent periods of leave or reduced work schedules. The firm may deny job restoration to "key" salaried employees.

Failure to Return to Work

The failure of an employee to return to work upon the expiration of a family or medical leave of absence may subject the employee to immediate termination unless an extension is granted or the employee is legally entitled to some other type of leave.

If the employee fails to return to work after the expiration of the leave, the employee may be required to reimburse the firm for payment of insurance premium(s) during the leave, unless the reason the employee fails to return is the presence of a serious health condition that prevents the employee from performing his or her job or to circumstances beyond the employee's control.

J.C. PENNEY TO PAY $50,000 TO SETTLE EEOC RACE DISCRIMINATION SUIT

African American Greeter Targeted With Racial Slurs and Fired Due to Race, Federal Agency Charged

NEW YORK -- J.C. Penney Corporation, Inc. will pay $50,000 to settle a race discrimination lawsuit brought by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the agency announced today.

The EEOC had charged that J.C. Penney discriminated against Reinell Singh, an African American who worked as a greeter welcoming customers into Penney's Staten Island store at the Staten Island Mall on 140 Marsh Avenue. The EEOC's lawsuit says that Singh's supervisor referred to her several times using racially offensive names and subsequently fired her for racial reasons.

In addition to the $50,000 in compensatory damages to be paid to Singh, the three-year consent decree resolving the case (EEOC v. J.C. Penney Corporation, Inc., Civil Action No.06 5192 in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York) includes injunctive relief enjoining J.C. Penney from race discrimination or retaliation; requiring the adoption of a non-discrimination policy and complaint procedures; anti-discrimination training; posting of a notice about the EEOC and the lawsuit; a memorandum setting forth the requirements of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to all store employees; monitoring and reporting.

"In spite of advances since Title VII of the Civil Rights Act was enacted 44 years ago, race discrimination still remains one of the most pervasive problems in today's workplace," said Spencer H. Lewis, director of the EEOC's New York District Office. "Racial slurs must simply not be tolerated, and the EEOC will fight to eradicate any such discrimination from the workplace."

Konrad Batog, the EEOC's trial attorney assigned to the case, added, "All employees have a right to be judged by their work performance and not their race. This consent decree will help make sure that what happened to Ms. Singh does not happen to any other J.C. Penney employee."

On February 28, 2007, the Commission launched its E-RACE Initiative (Eradicating Racism and Colorism from Employment), a national outreach, and education and enforcement campaign focusing on new and emerging race and color issues in the 21st century workplace. WASHINGTON GROUP INTERNATIONAL TO PAY $1.5 MILLION TO BLACK WORKERS WHO WERE RACIALLY HARASSED

EEOC Settles Suit Against Global Employer in the Construction Industry

BOSTON — The U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) today announced a litigation settlement with Washington Group International, Inc. (WGI) for $1.5 million dollars, as well as significant injunctive relief, on behalf of African American workers who were racially harassed and then retaliated against for complaining about it.

WGI is a provider of planning, engineering, design, construction, technical, management, and operations and maintenance services to public and private sector clients worldwide.

The EEOC charged in its lawsuit that WGI created a racially hostile work environment for black employees and failed to take appropriate action to remedy the discriminatory conduct at the Sithe Mystic Power Plant construction project in Everett, Mass. -- which the company managed as general contractor from approximately December 2001 through June 2003. WGI not only subjected black employees to racial graffiti and other forms of harassment, the EEOC said, but retaliated against them for complaining.

“Employers must remain vigilant in protecting all employees from racial harassment, especially in today’s increasingly diverse labor force,” said EEOC’s New York District Director Spencer H. Lewis, Jr. “In this case, rather than swiftly taking corrective action to remedy the racially hostile workplace, WGI targeted the victims for retaliatory measures, including termination.”

The EEOC filed suit against WGI in 2004 under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Case No. 04-12097-GAO in the U.S. District Court of Massachusetts). The consent decree resolving the case was submitted to U.S. District Court Magistrate Judge Marianne B. Bowler for approval.

Under the decree, WGI will pay $1.3 million to be shared among six African American former employees, and $200,000 will be apportioned among eleven similarly situated individuals identified during the litigation. Injunctive relief includes requiring WGI to conduct anti-discrimination training and implement an anti-graffiti policy; revise its equal employment opportunity policies and procedures; post a notice about the settlement for all Power Unit construction sites for the next two years; and monitoring by the EEOC for a period of two years.

R. Liliana Palacios-Baldwin, senior trial attorney in the EEOC’s Boston Area Office, said: “Even though a construction site may be viewed by some as a ‘rough and tumble’ workplace, discrimination is unlawful regardless of the job site – it doesn’t matter whether employees work behind a computer or behind a forklift.”

On Feb. 28, 2007, EEOC Chair Naomi C. Earp launched the Commission's E-RACE Initiative (Eradicating Racism And Colorism from Employment), a national outreach, education, and enforcement campaign focusing on new and emerging race and color issues in the 21st century workplace. Further information about the E-RACE Initiative is available on the EEOC's web site at http://www.eeoc.gov/initiatives/e-race/index.html.

MARJAM SUPPLY COMPANY TO PAY $495,000 TO SETTLE EEOC RACE DISCRIMINATION SUIT

Black Employees Targeted With Racial Slurs, Fired for Complaining, EEOC Says

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. – Marjam Supply Company, Inc., a building materials supplier, will pay $495,000 to five former employees to settle a race discrimination lawsuit brought by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the federal agency announced today.

The EEOC's lawsuit (Civil Action No. 03-cv-5413-SCR in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, White Plains Division) charged that Marjam discriminated against African American employees in its Newburgh warehouse facility on the basis of their race by subjecting them to differential discipline and termination, creating a hostile work environment, and retaliating against employees who objected to the discrimination.

The EEOC charged that a Marjam supervisor and other Marjam employees made unwelcome racial slurs and comments. The racially hostile workplace included repeatedly calling an employee the N-word, talking about the Ku Klux Klan and referring to burning crosses in front of African American employees. An employee who complained was fired, the EEOC's lawsuit charged. Such alleged conduct violates Title VII of the Civil Rights Act.

"Egregious racial harassment still occurs in the 21st century workplace, even though some people may think such discrimination can only be found in history books," said EEOC Acting Chairman Stuart J. Ishimaru. "Hostile work environments are unacceptable. The EEOC is committed to vigorous enforcement of the employment anti-discrimination laws to ensure that every worker has an equal opportunity to reach his or her full potential."

The consent decree was submitted to the district court judge for approval after the parties reached a settlement agreement in mediation. In addition to the $495,000 in back pay and compensatory damages to be paid to five former employees, the three-year consent decree includes the following injunctive relief:

- Adopting non-discrimination and complaint procedures;
- Appointing an Equal Employment Office Coordinator;
- Establishing a toll-free number for reporting discrimination complaints;
- Providing anti-discrimination training;
- Issuing a memorandum to all employees on Marjam's commitment to abide by all federal laws prohibiting employment discrimination;
- Posting a notice about the EEOC, the lawsuit, and Marjam's non-discrimination and complaint procedures; and
- Monitoring and reporting on carrying out the settlement terms.

"Employers must recognize that they have a responsibility to prevent racial harassment in their workplace and to take swift action to correct any discrimination when it occurs," said Spencer H. Lewis, director of the EEOC's New York District Office. "In addition, retaliating against employees for complaining about discrimination is unlawful and taken very seriously by the Commission."

During Fiscal Year 2008, the EEOC received 33,937 race discrimination charge filings, up 11% from the prior year. Of the total, approximately 8,600 race charges alleged racial harassment, up 23 percent from nearly 7,000 such filings in FY 2007.

Federal Express to Pay over $3.2 Million to Female Truck Driver for Sex Discrimination, Retaliation

EEOC and Plaintiff's counsel score trial Victory 'for every woman' at Fedex

PHILADELPHIA - A federal jury late yesterday returned a multi-million dollar verdict in favor of the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and Marion Shaub of Wrightstown, Pa., in their lawsuit against Memphis, Tenn.-based shipping giant Federal Express Corporation for violations of Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and the intentional infliction of emotional distress to Ms. Shaub.

The jury found Federal Express liable for a sex-based hostile work environment and retaliation and awarded Ms. Shaub $391,400 in back pay and front pay, $350,000 in compensatory damages for emotional pain and distress, and $2.5 million dollars in punitive damages.

"I always believed the truth would prevail and it has," said Shaub after the verdict was announced. "This is a victory for every woman who works at Federal Express and those who will work there in the future."

The lawsuit (Case 02-cv-1194, Middle District Pennsylvania) filed in February 2002, alleged that the company violated Title VII when it subjected Shaub, at the time the only female tractor-trailer driver at the company's Middletown facility, to a hostile work environment based on her sex and retaliated against her when she complained about the treatment.

According to the lawsuit, prior to her termination in October 2000, Shaub was constantly subjected to anti-female remarks and threats from male co-workers. EEOC and Shaub further alleged that, after she made numerous complaints about the gender-based hostility in her work environment, her truck brakes were sabotaged and she was refused help with the loading of her truck in retaliation for her complaints.

"This verdict sends employers a loud and clear message that sex discrimination and retaliation are simply unacceptable," said EEOC Philadelphia Regional Attorney Jacqueline McNair. "The EEOC, as well as the U.S. Supreme Court, have consistently pointed out to employers the benefits of adopting and enforcing an effective policy opposing harassment in the workplace. It is the employer's responsibility to demonstrate that such conduct is inappropriate and will not be tolerated."

Private counsel Martha Spurling who, along with attorney Ralph Lamar, joined with EEOC to represent Ms. Shaub's interests in this matter, said: "Ms. Shaub is pleased with this verdict and hopes that she is the last Federal Express worker male or female who has to go through this kind of horrific, perilous ordeal."

Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act requires that employers provide each employee a working environment free of harassment based on their race, color, sex, religion or national origin. It also prohibits an employer from taking adverse action against an individual for exercising his or her right to complain about behavior reasonably believed to violate Title VII.

In addition to enforcing Title VII, the EEOC enforces the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, which protects workers age 40 and older from discrimination based on age; the Equal Pay Act of 1963, which prohibits sex-based wage discrimination; the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, which prohibits employment discrimination against people with disabilities in the federal sector; Title I of the Americans with Disabilities Act, which prohibits employment discrimination against people with disabilities in the private sector and state and local governments; and sections of the Civil Rights Act of 1991. Creative Networks Settles EEOC Retaliation Lawsuit for $110,000

Disability Services Company Fired Employee Over Discrimination Charge and Threatened Witness, Federal Agency Charged

PHOENIX – Creative Networks, LLC, a company which provides services to the disabled, has agreed to pay $110,000 to settle a lawsuit filed by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the agency announced today. The EEOC charged that two coordinators at the company were unlawfully retaliated against on the same day for complaining about national origin and race discrimination and participating in an investigation about it.

According to the EEOC(s suit, Case No. 05-CV-03032-PHX-SMM, filed in U.S. District Court for the District of Arizona, on May 16, 2003, Rhonda Encinas-Castro went to the EEOC to file a charge of discrimination based on national origin and race. About 14 days later, the EEOC said, Encinas-Castro was fired by the company's executive director for filing the charge. Further, the agency charged, the executive director threatened to fire Kathryn Allen, who had never been disciplined for anything before, because she had been named as a witness in Encinas-Castro's discrimination charge.

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 protects from retaliation both employees who complain about discrimination and those who serve as witnesses to it.

As part of the agreement, besides the $110,000 in monetary relief, Creative Networks must adopt an anti-retaliation policy and provide anti-retaliation training to its employees. Creative Networks is also prohibited from engaging in any further retaliation.

Mary Jo O(Neill, regional attorney for the Phoenix District Office, said, "We will continue to vigorously protect employees who complain about discrimination or serve as witnesses to it because they are the lifeblood to effective enforcement. These civil rights statutes only mean something when people are free to tell the truth about discrimination in the workplace. We have seen an alarming increase in retaliation charges, and we are very concerned that employees know that they can report discrimination without repercussions."

Rayford O. Irvin, acting district director of the Phoenix District Office, added, "As the United States Supreme Court recently reiterated in the Burlington Northern case, the primary purpose of the retaliation statutes is to maintain 'unfettered access' to complaint processes. We will ensure that all employees are protected from retaliation whether they are the filer of a charge or have assisted other employees in their complaints."

Creative Networks, an Arizona corporation with more than 1,000 employees, provides medical, psychological, and educational services to individuals with mental and physical disabilities.

Retaliation charges with the EEOC have risen from 18,198 in Fiscal Year 1997, comprising 22.6 percent of all charges, to 33,613 in FY 2009, accounting for 36 percent of all charges.

MCEA To Pay $80,000 To Settle EEOC Retaliation Suit

Agency Said Local Union Discriminated Against Workers Because They Protested Discrimination at Workplace

BALTIMORE – The Maryland Classified Employees Association (MCEA) union will pay $80,000 to settle a retaliation discrimination lawsuit brought by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the agency announced today.

In its lawsuit, the EEOC charged that MCEA fired employee Gail Tate-Buntin in 2007 for her perceived involvement in an EEOC investigation of her employer's alleged unlawful employment practices, her opposition to practices she believed to be discriminatory, and her association with Michele Handy, another MCEA employee who had filed a discrimination charge. The EEOC also charged that MCEA denied a promotion to Handy and subjected her to discriminatory terms and conditions of employment because she filed a discrimination charge with the EEOC against MCEA.

Retaliation against an employee for protesting employment discrimination or participating in a discrimination charge investigation violates Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The EEOC filed suit (Case No. WDQ-10-CV-00762 in U.S. District Court for the District of Maryland, Northern Division) after first attempting to reach a pre-litigation settlement.

In addition to the monetary payment to Tate-Buntin and Handy, the EEOC's settlement requires MCEA to provide significant remedial relief during the two-year consent decree. MCEA will:

- refrain from further engaging in retaliation against any person because he or she opposed any practice made unlawful under Title VII or participated in a Title VII-related proceeding;
- submit written notification to EEOC regarding any and all reports of retaliatory harassment or retaliatory discrimination;
- adhere to an anti-harassment/anti-discrimination policy and distribute a copy of said policy to all current and future officers, managers, employees and independent contractors;
- require all current and former managers and persons designated to receive and investigate complaints of harassment and discrimination to attend four hours of training regarding all requirements of Title VII;
- post notices at all its facilities affirming its commitment to maintaining a work environment free of discrimination and retaliation under all federal equal employment opportunity laws; and
- submit other compliance reports to EEOC for the duration of the decree.

"Title VII depends for its enforcement upon the cooperation of employees who are willing to oppose or report employment discrimination," said EEOC Acting Regional Attorney Debra M. Lawrence. "This settlement achieves the EEOC's objectives by providing relief to the victims while implementing measures to prevent future retaliation."

The most frequently filed charges with the EEOC in FY 2009 were charges of discrimination based on race (36 percent), retaliation (36 percent) and sex-based discrimination (30 percent).

Yates Construction To Pay $30,000 To Settle EEOC Racial Harassment And Retaliation Suit

Black Employees Subjected to Racial Insults, Federal Agency Charged

GREENSBORO, N.C. – Stokesdale, N.C.-based Yates Construction Company, Inc. will pay $30,000 to settle a racial harassment and retaliation lawsuit filed by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the agency announced today. The EEOC had charged that Yates subjected an African-American employee to racial harassment and discharged him in retaliation for complaining about it. The settlement also includes one other person who was allegedly subjected to racial harassment.

According to the EEOC's suit, Rodney McCants and at least one other black employee were repeatedly subjected to the use of racial slurs such as the "N" word, and to racially offensive jokes about African-Americans. The suit further charged that McCants complained about the harassment on at least two occasions in late 2007 and early 2008, but the company failed to stop the harassment. The suit also asserted that McCants was discharged in April 2008 in retaliation for his complaints.

Racial harassment and retaliation violate Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The EEOC filed suit in U.S. District Court for the Middle District of North Carolina (Equal Employment Opportunity Commission v. Yates Construction Company, Inc., Civil Action No. 1:09-cv-00687) after first attempting to reach a voluntary settlement out of court through its conciliation process.

In addition to monetary damages, the consent decree resolving the case provides for injunctive relief to prevent Yates Construction from further maintaining a racially hostile work environment or engaging in retaliation. The decree also requires the company to post its policy against racial harassment in the workplace; distribute the policy to employees; provide annual, company-wide training on racial harassment to its owners and supervisors; and report future verbal or written complaints of racial harassment or retaliation to the EEOC.

“The EEOC is glad that it was able to resolve this case in favor of Mr. McCants and the other African-American employee who testified that he was subjected to racial harassment,” Lynette A. Barnes, regional attorney of the EEOC's Charlotte District Office said. “Also, the injunctive relief that the EEOC obtained will help to ensure that there are no incidents of racial harassment at Yates Construction in the future.”

Tina Burnside, supervisory trial attorney for the EEOC’s Charlotte District, added, “The EEOC is committed to combating retaliation and ensuring that employees can complain about discrimination in the workplacewithout the fear of being disciplined or fired.”

Elmer W. Davis To Pay $1 Million To Settle EEOC Race Discrimination Lawsuit

Roofing Company Charged with Racial Harassment, Discriminatory Job Assignments, and Failure to Promote African-American Employees

ROCHESTER, N.Y. - Elmer W. Davis, Inc., the largest commercial roofing contractor in New York State and one of the top 40 largest commercial roofing contractors in the United States, will pay $1 million to African-American employees to settle a race discrimination lawsuit brought by the U. S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the federal agency announced today. This is the largest EEOC settlement ever in Rochester.

The EEOC's lawsuit (Civil Action No. 07-CV-06434), filed in U.S. District Court for the Western District of New York in Rochester in 2007, charged that black employees at Elmer Davis were subjected to a pattern of race discrimination, including harassment, unfair work assignments, failure to be promoted, and retaliation for complaining about discrimination from at least 1993 through the present.

According to dozens of African-American employees, they were constantly subjected to racial slurs by their white foremen. Blacks were routinely referred to as "n----r," "lazy n-----rs," "sambo," "slave," and "monkey." Foremen also frequently made comments like, "All n----rs should get on a boat and go back to Africa." They were also exposed to nooses and racially offensive graffiti like "dirty n----r," "KKK" and swastikas written on the walls of the portable toilets at work sites.

The lawsuit also charged the roofing company with subjecting African-American employees to disparate treatment in job assignments, claiming that it generally reserved the most difficult, dirty and less desirable jobs for black workers, including "tear off" and "hot tar" jobs, often referred to as the "bull work," while whites were assigned to detail work and service trucks to conduct repairs.

African-American employees were routinely laid off first at the end of the roofing season and called back last in the beginning of the following season, while whites were laid off later and called back earlier.

The EEOC further charged that the company systematically excluded black employees from promotion opportunities, which it accomplished by using a subjective system of promotions without job announcements or an application process, and actively discouraging black employees from seeking promotions.

The EEOC alleged that Elmer Davis's conduct violated Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex or national origin. The case was investigated by the Buffalo Local Office of the EEOC before it proceeded to court.

Elmer Davis will be bound by a five-year consent decree which, in addition to the $1 Million monetary relief for the victims of discrimination, enjoins the company from engaging in further race discrimination or retaliation. The decree requires Elmer Davis to hire an EEO Coordinator to provide training, monitor race discrimination complaints, and report to the EEOC on hiring, layoff and promotion. The decree has been submitted to U. S. District Court Judge Siragusa for approval.

"This settlement marks the end of decades of ugly and unlawful discrimination against African-American employees at Elmer Davis," said Spencer Lewis, district director for the EEOC's New York District Office. "No employee should have to endure slurs and other harassment in order to do his job. The EEOC will remain vigilant to protect workers from these types of abuses."

Trial Attorney Judith Biltekoff added, "This consent decree will not only right the wrongs perpetrated against the African-American employees at Elmer Davis, but also promote a race-neutral work environment for all employees going forward."

Mobile Community Action Sued by EEOC for Retaliation

Mobile Area Non-Profit Corporation Unlawfully Fired Male Employee for Complaining About Sexual Harassment, Federal Agency Charged

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. – Management of a Mobile County, Ala., non-profit corporation unlawfully retaliated against a male employee because he complained about being sexually harassed by a female supervisor, according to a lawsuit filed on July 30 by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC).

According to the EEOC's lawsuit (Case No. CV-10-403) in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Alabama, Mobile Community Action, Inc., fired Donte Bumpers when he resisted sexually harassing behavior by a female supervisor. Bumpers was fired after he reported the sexual harassment and requested a transfer in a letter to Executive Director Jimmy Knight.

The EEOC filed suit after first attempting to reach a voluntary settlement. The agency is seeking back pay, compensatory and punitive damages as well as other relief, including a permanent injunction to prevent Mobile Community Action from retaliating against any employee for reporting harassment or discrimination.

"Unfortunately, we see allegations of retaliation far too often," said EEOC Birmingham District Director Delner Franklin-Thomas. "We will continue our efforts to let employers know that retaliation for complaining about discrimination violates the law."

C. Emanuel Smith, Regional Attorney for the EEOC's Birmingham District Office, said, "The Commission supports employees being able to complain about conduct believed to be discriminatory without fear of reprisal. Retaliation is illegal."

Mobile Community Action, Inc. operates a Head Start program and provides other community services to qualifying families in the Mobile area.

Mike Enyart & Sons Sued by EEOC for Racial Harassment and Retaliation

Construction Company Fired Black Employee Because He Complained About Racial Harassment, Federal Agency Charged

BECKLEY, W.V. – A South Point, Ohio-based construction company condoned egregious racial harassment and illegally fired an employee who complained about the abusive treatment, the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) charged in a lawsuit it announced today.

The EEOC charges in its lawsuit that Mike Enyart & Sons, Inc. subjected Mareo R. Allen, who is African-American, to a hostile work environment based on his race, when he worked for the company on a sewer line installation project in White Sulphur Springs, W.V. Co-workers and a foreman repeatedly used racially offensive slurs and epithets to Allen and other black persons, including "n----r," "black boy" "and colored boy," the EEOC said in its lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court for the District of West Virginia, Civil Action No. 5:10-cv-0921. The EEOC alleges that the harassment also included threatening conduct such as cutting Allen's belt with a knife while Allen was wearing it and showing Allen a swastika that had been spray-painted onto company equipment.

The company failed to take effective action to stop the pervasive harassment, the EEOC said. Instead, a company official told Allen that he could only remain employed if he agreed not to pursue his discrimination claims. When Allen refused to withdraw them, the company terminated him in retaliation for his opposition to the racial harassment, the EEOC charged in its lawsuit.

Such alleged conduct violates Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits harassment based on race. Title VII also prohibits employers from retaliating against an employee who opposes racial harassment or discrimination. The EEOC attempted to reach a voluntary settlement before filing suit.

"It is appalling that the company not only condoned the vile and offensive racial epithets made to Mr. Allen, but actually warned him that he had to drop his complaints about the racial harassment in order to keep his job," said EEOC Regional Attorney Debra Lawrence of the EEOC's Philadelphia District Office, which oversees Pennsylvania, Delaware, West Virginia, Maryland and parts of New Jersey and Ohio. "No employee should have to endure racial slurs and threatening behavior as a condition of remaining employed."

In Fiscal Year 2009, the EEOC received 33,579 charge filings alleging race-based discrimination. Historically, race discrimination has accounted for the most frequent type of charge filing with EEOC offices nationwide. In Fiscal Year 2009, the number of retaliation charges filed with the EEOC surged to a record-high level of 33,613.

Silgan Containers Required to Pay $45,000 to Settle EEOC Race Discrimination Suit

North America's Largest Metal Food Can Supplier Fired Man Because of Race, Federal Agency Charged

CHICAGO – Silgan Containers Manufacturing Corporation, the largest manufacturer of metal food containers in North America, will pay $45,000 to settle a race discrimination lawsuit filed by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the agency announced today. The EEOC filed the lawsuit against Silgan on behalf of an African-American man who suffered alleged discriminatory treatment that resulted in his termination from Silgan's Oconomowoc, Wis., facility.

In its lawsuit, the EEOC charged that Silgan violated federal civil rights law by intentionally delaying the hiring of Romardro Henderson and then firing him because of his race. According to the EEOC, after Henderson was finally hired, his immediate supervisor – who no longer works for Silgan – subjected Henderson to disparate and discriminatory treatment such as holding him to a higher standard on his work than non-black employees. Finally, the EEOC charged, Silgan fired Henderson for racial reasons after less than one month on the job.

Race discrimination violates Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The EEOC filed suit, EEOC v. Silgan Containers Manufacturing Corporation, No. 09-C-782, in U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Wisconsin in Milwaukee, after first attempting to reach a voluntary settlement out of court through its conciliation process.

U.S. Magistrate Judge William E. Callahan entered the consent decree resolving the lawsuit on July 1, 2010. In addition to providing monetary compensation to Henderson, the two-year decree resolving the lawsuit requires Silgan to notify the EEOC of any complaints of discrimination at its Oconomowoc plant for the next two years. Silgan must report to the EEOC information about its hiring practices at the Oconomowoc facility for the duration of the decree. The company must also train its managers, supervisors and human resources employees in Oconomowoc about their responsibilities under Title VII.

"This case demonstrates that racial discrimination in the American workplace is a serious and ongoing concern," said John Rowe, EEOC district director in Chicago. "Employment discrimination has a devastating effect on workers. Fortunately, we were able to alleviate that effect in this instance because Mr. Henderson took action on his own behalf by filing a charge with the EEOC."

EEOC Regional Attorney John Hendrickson said, "Once the EEOC filed its lawsuit and the trial team began to litigate this case, Silgan was quick to determine that accepting a meaningful settlement resolution was its best option. The consent decree entered by the court will help to ensure that all Silgan's employees enjoy equal access to employment opportunities."

The government's litigation effort was led by EEOC Supervisory Trial Attorney Gregory M. Gochanour and Trial Attorney Bradley S. Fiorito.

According to its website, Silgan is the largest manufacturer of metal food containers in North America, with net sales of $1.92 billion in 2009 and over 30 manufacturing facilities nationwide. Silgan is owned by Silgan Containers Corporation, which is a wholly owned subsidiary of Silgan Holdings Inc. of Stamford, Conn.

The EEOC is responsible for enforcing federal laws against employment discrimination. Further information is available at www.eeoc.gov.

Cullman Company To Pay $100,000 To Settle EEOC Race Discrimination Lawsuit

Racially Hostile Work Environment Offends Black and White Employees at McGriff's Truck Facility

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. – McGriff Industries, Inc. and its subsidiary McGriff Transportation, Inc., which operated a truck transportation facility in Cullman, Ala., will pay $100,000 and furnish other relief to settle a racial harassment and retaliation lawsuit filed by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the agency announced today.

According to the EEOC, certain employees and managers in the Cullman facility routinely used racially derogatory comments, slurs, and insults directed at or about African-Americans. The racial misconduct escalated to threats and intimidation, including a derogatory threat to cut one of the black employees. White and black employees were offended by the racial misconduct, but were rebuffed and retaliated against -- one employee was terminated and another had his work assignments changed -- when they complained.

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 protects employees from employment discrimination because of their race, sex, religion or national origin and from retaliation for complaining about it. The EEOC filed suit in U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Alabama Northeastern Division (Civil Action 5:09-CV-01952-IPJ) after first attempting to reach a pre-litigation settlement.

The settlement, by consent decree entered by the court on June 22, 2010, provides for a total payment of $100,000 to Todd A. Roseborough, Sr., Paul Hogan and Aaron Greenwood. The decree also includes injunctive terms applicable to each of McGriff's offices, facilities and retail establishments in the state of Alabama. Among other requirements, McGriff must develop and implement effective anti-discrimination policies and procedures, and train its employees, supervisors and managers on the prohibitions against racial misconduct in the workplace. The company will develop a system for reporting, investigating and addressing complaints of workplace racial misconduct; hold all employees accountable for engaging in it; and hold supervisors and managers accountable for tolerating or failing to address such misconduct.

"This case is important because no employee should be subject to racism in the workplace and every employee can be offended by a racially hostile work environment," said EEOC Birmingham District Director Delner Franklin-Thomas. "We are pleased that McGriff's senior management is now taking an active role in promoting compliance with federal civil rights law."

EEOC Birmingham District Office Regional Attorney C. Emanuel Smith added, "The Commission will continue to litigate cases involving allegations of a racially hostile work environment. We encourage employers to be proactive and responsive to employee complaints about workplace derogatory conduct or comments."

The EEOC's Birmingham District Office is responsible for processing charges of discrimination, administrative enforcement, and the conduct of agency litigation in Alabama, Mississippi and Northern Florida, with Area Offices in Jackson, Miss., and Mobile, Ala.

The EEOC enforces federal laws prohibiting employment discrimination. Further information about the EEOC is available on its web site at www.eeoc.gov.

Justice Department Files Lawsuit Challenging Conditions at Two Erie County, New York, Correctional Facilities

WASHINGTON – The United States has filed a lawsuit alleging that conditions at the Erie County Holding Center, a pre-trial detention center in Buffalo, N.Y., and the Erie County Correctional Facility, a correctional facility in Alden, N.Y, routinely and systematically deprive inmates of constitutional rights, the Justice Department announced. The lawsuit was filed in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of New York.

The lawsuit follows a nearly two year investigation, the findings of which were detailed in a letter sent to Erie County Executive Chris Collins on July 15, 2009. That letter documented evidence of numerous constitutional violations, including staff-on-inmate violence; inmate-on-inmate violence; sexual misconduct between staff and inmates; sexual misconduct among inmates; an inadequate system to prevent suicide and self-injurious behavior; inadequate medical and mental health care; and serious deficiencies in environmental health and safety.

The department's investigation revealed evidence of a number of serious violations of constitutional rights at the jail. For example, Erie County fails to protect inmates against known suicide risks and to provide constitutionally required mental health care. Since 2003, nine inmates have committed suicide, and at least 15 inmates have attempted to commit suicide or have taken steps that demonstrated suicidal ideation. Between 2007 and 2008, there were three suicides and at least 10 attempted suicides.

"Jails must provide for the basic medical and mental health needs of inmates and must keep them safe from attacks by other inmates and excessive force by staff. We have repeatedly sought the county's cooperation in working toward an amicable resolution in this matter, and we regret that the county's failure to cooperate compels us to litigate," said Loretta King, Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division. "In light of the severity of the conditions, including multiple suicides and beatings, we must take action to ensure that the constitutional rights of those persons detained at the facilities, many of whom have not been convicted of any crime, are protected."

Kathleen M. Mehltretter, U.S. Attorney for the Western District of New York, stated, "Our purpose in bringing this action is to ensure that the facilities consistently maintain policies, procedures and practices that protect the well being and health of the inmates. Due to the county's lack of cooperation, we must seek court intervention to resolve these issues."

The Civil Rights Division is authorized to conduct such investigations under the Civil Rights of Institutionalized Persons Act of 1980 (CRIPA). This statute allows the federal government to identify and root out systemic abuses such as those discovered in Erie County. Under CRIPA, the Justice Department has investigated the conditions at nursing homes, mental health facilities, residences for persons with developmental disabilities, and juvenile justice facilities, as well as similar institutions.

The United States' findings letter to Erie County Executive Chris Collins is available at http://www.usdoj.gov/crt/split/documents/Erie_findlet_redact_07-15-09.pdf. Additional information about the Special Litigation Section of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division can be found at www.usdoj.gov/crt/split/index.html.

Salt Lake City-based Teleperformance USA pays almost $2 million in back overtime wages following US Department of Labor investigation

Settlement covers workers in Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, New Mexico, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas and Utah

SALT LAKE CITY — Teleperformance USA, a Salt Lake City-based call center, has paid $1,978,147 in back wages to 15,862 workers for overtime violations under the Fair Labor Standards Act. The settlement followed a nationwide investigation conducted by the U.S. Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division in Salt Lake City.

"The Labor Department will not hesitate to enforce federal law to the fullest extent possible when employers do not pay their employees all of the wages to which they are entitled," said Secretary of Labor Hilda L. Solis. "These workers received the back wages they earned and deserved."

The company, which provides over-the-telephone customer service for clients including Sprint Communications, Verizon Wireless and Dell Computers, has branches in Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, New Mexico, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas and Utah.

The overtime violations occurred primarily because employees were not compensated for all hours worked when the company failed to pay for breaks that were less than 30 minutes in length, or for time spent by employees waiting for work areas to become available even though their shifts already had started. A small percentage of the employees for whom back wages were computed were misclassified as salaried exempt under the FLSA. Teleperformance USA cooperated fully and worked quickly and effectively to resolve all issues identified.

The FLSA requires that covered employees be paid no less than the federal minimum wage, currently $7.25 per hour, for all hours worked. It also requires that workers are paid time and one-half their regular rates of pay for hours worked over 40 in a single week and that employers maintain adequate and accurate records of employees' wages, hours and other conditions of employment.

For more information about the FLSA, call the Wage and Hour Division's toll-free helpline at 866-4US-WAGE (487-9243) or contact the division's Salt Lake City office at 801-524-5706. Information is also available on the Internet at http://www.dol.gov/whd.

Houston-based construction company and subcontractors pay nearly $137,000 in back wages to 140 workers after US Labor Department investigation

DALLAS — Following an investigation by the U.S. Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division, prime contractor Williams Brothers Construction in Houston and subcontractors Cimolai USA and Cosme have agreed to collectively pay $136,679 in back wages to 140 current and former construction employees for violations of the Fair Labor Standards Act, the Davis-Bacon Act and the Contract Work Hours and Safety Standards Act. The workers were performing work on the Margaret Hunt Hill bridge project over the Trinity River in Dallas.

"The Department of Labor is committed to vigorous enforcement of the law to ensure that all workers are paid their full wages and any accrued overtime pay," said Cynthia Watson, regional administrator for the Wage and Hour Division in the Southwest. "We are pleased that these employees have been paid the back wages they are entitled to receive."

The investigation by the division's Dallas District Office determined that Williams Brothers failed to properly pay overtime to its employees who worked on Texas Department of Transportation contracts receiving federal funding. Additionally, the company violated the FLSA by failing to include overtime pay for safety bonuses. As a result, Williams Brothers agreed and has paid a total of $101,650 to 122 employees.

The investigation of Cimolai USA found that the company failed to pay two salaried non-exempt employees overtime compensation totaling $952 in violation of FLSA. An investigation of Cosme found 16 workers were owed $34,077. They were paid less than DBA prevailing wage rates, and at time and one-quarter for hours worked over 40 in a workweek, instead of time and one-half as required by the CWHSSA. Back wages owed by both subcontractors have been paid in full.

Under the CWHSSA, employees working on federal contracts must receive time and one-half their regular rates of pay when they work more than 40 hours in a workweek and receive the mandatory health and welfare benefits they are entitled to receive. Under the DBA, employers are required to pay a minimum hourly wage plus an additional amount in health and welfare benefits that is stipulated in the work contract. Generally, the employer is required to pay the health and welfare benefits for the first 40 hours worked by the employees in a week.

The FLSA requires that covered employees be paid at least the federal minimum wage of $7.25 for all hours worked, plus time and one-half their regular rates of pay, including commissions, bonuses and incentive pay, for hours worked beyond 40 per week. Employers must also maintain accurate time and payroll records.

For more information about the DBA, CWHSSA or FLSA, call the Department of Labor's toll-free helpline at 866-4US-WAGE (487-9243) or the Wage and Hour Division's Dallas District Office at 817-861-2150. Information is also available on the Internet at http://www.dol.gov/whd.

US Labor Department investigation nets more than $1.3 million in back wages for 187 employees of GeoPharma in Largo, Fla.

Company missed 14 payroll periods, violated FLSA

TAMPA, Fla. — Following an investigation by the U.S. Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division, GeoPharma Inc. has agreed to pay $1,360,098 in back wages to 187 employees for violations of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

"Employees have the right to expect that they will receive full pay on time for their work, and the Labor Department will not sit by while employers attempt to evade their responsibilities," said Secretary of Labor Hilda L. Solis.

The investigation, conducted by the Wage and Hour Division's district office in Tampa, determined that the company missed or was in arrears for 14 payroll periods from late 2009 through 2010. The FLSA requires that covered employers pay employees at least equal to the federal minimum wage for each hour worked, and wages are due on the regular payday for the pay period. In this case, the investigation revealed that the employer broke both provisions of the law at different times by not paying some wages at all and by not paying employees on time.

The dietary supplements and pharmaceutical manufacturing company operates six facilities in Largo, Fla. Employees affected by this investigation were involved in production, inventory control and shipping.

The FLSA requires that covered employees be paid at least the federal minimum wage of $7.25 for all hours worked, plus time and one-half their regular rates of pay, including commissions, bonuses and incentive pay, for hours worked beyond 40 per week. Employers must also maintain accurate time and payroll records.

US Labor Department recovers more than $868,000 in back wages for Florida-based timeshare company employees

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The U.S. Department of Labor has recovered $868,443 in back wages for 1,065 employees of Central Florida Investments, based in Orlando, Fla., following an investigation by the department's Wage and Hour Division.

Central Florida Investments operates timeshare resorts in Arizona, Florida, Mississippi, Missouri, Nevada, South Carolina, Tennessee, Utah and Virginia under the name Westgate Resorts. The investigation included all locations of the company.

"Employers should know that when workers are deprived of their rightful wages, the Labor Department will not hesitate to take action to recover those wages," said Secretary of Labor Hilda L. Solis. "It's not just the right thing to do, it's the law."

The investigation, conducted by the Wage and Hour Division's Jacksonville District Office, determined that employees who scheduled tours of timeshare properties for the company were not paid at least the federal minimum wage for all the hours they worked. Additionally, premium pay for the workers did not include commissions, and overtime work was incorrectly computed. The company also failed to keep accurate timecard records.

As a result of the investigation, the company agreed to correct the errors, make back payments and institute new recordkeeping procedures to ensure employees now are paid correctly according to federal law.

The Fair Labor Standards Act requires that covered employees be paid at least the federal minimum wage of $7.25 for all hours worked, plus time and one-half their regular rates of pay, including commissions, bonuses and incentive pay, for hours worked beyond 40 per week. Employers must also maintain accurate time and payroll records.

BRIEF OF THE SECRETARY OF LABOR AS AMICUS CURIAE
IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO RECONSIDER THE AUGUST 30, 2006 ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS AND/OR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

The Secretary of Labor ("Secretary") submits this brief as amicus curiae in support of Defendant's Motion to Reconsider this Court's August 30, 2006 Order ("Order") denying Defendant's Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings and/or Summary Judgment.[1] The Department respectfully submits that this Court should reconsider its Order denying Defendant TEVA Pharmaceuticals' ("TEVA") Motion and, based upon the reasons set forth below, should hold that the Department's regulation at 29 C.F.R. 825.220(d) does not bar Plaintiff Barbara Dougherty ("Dougherty") from settling her claims for past violations of the Family and Medical Leave Act ("FMLA" or the "Act"), 29 U.S.C. 2601 et seq., pursuant to a valid release of claims.[2]

The Secretary's interest in participating in this action arises from her responsibility for administering the FMLA, including promulgating legislative rules under the Act. See 29 U.S.C. 2654. Pursuant to her statutory authority, the Secretary has promulgated regulations at 29 C.F.R. Part 825. The Secretary has a paramount interest in the correct interpretation of these regulations.[3]

ISSUE PRESENTED

The Secretary's regulation at 29 C.F.R. 825.220(d) states, in part, that "[e]mployees cannot waive, nor may employers induce employees to waive, their rights under FMLA." The question presented is whether this legislative rule barring waivers of FMLA rights by employees also prohibits settlements of FMLA claims based on past employer actions.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

TEVA initially filed a Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings and/or Summary Judgment ("motion"), with an accompanying memorandum, on August 9, 2005. In May 2006, following this Court's appointment of counsel for Dougherty and the filing of an Amended Complaint, TEVA filed a supplement to its memorandum of law in support of the motion. By letter dated August 1, 2006, this Court, sua sponte, raised the issue of the application of the Department's regulation at section 825.220(d) to the release at issue in the case and requested that the parties submit supplemental briefing addressing the regulation. Supplemental briefs were filed by Dougherty and TEVA on August 9 and 15, 2006, respectively.

This Court ruled on TEVA's motion on August 30, 2006, noting that "the question of whether an employee can, as part of the severance agreement, waive his or her right to sue for violations of the FMLA appears to be a matter of first impression in this circuit." Slip op. at 10.[4] The Court began its analysis of the issue by noting that the FMLA is silent as to the waiver of claims under the Act, and that the Secretary has the authority to promulgate regulations under the FMLA. Id.; see 29 U.S.C. 2654.

This Court then analyzed the only two federal appellate court decisions that address this issue, Faris v. Williams WPC-1, Inc., 332 F.3d 316 (5th Cir. 2003), and Taylor v. Progress Energy, Inc., 415 F.3d 364 (4th Cir. 2005), vacated June 14, 2006. Slip op. at 11-14.[5] It rejected the distinction drawn by the Fifth Circuit in Faris between the application of section 220(d) to waiver of substantive rights and its application to proscriptive rights under the FMLA. Id. at 15-16; see Faris, 332 F.3d at 320-21.[6] This Court instead adopted the overly broad reading of both the first sentence of the regulatory text and the preamble discussion of the regulation set forth in the vacated decision in Taylor, holding that section 220(d) "prohibits an employee from waiving the right to sue for FMLA violations through a severance agreement." Slip op. at 17.

ARGUMENT

SECTION 220(d) PROHIBITS ONLY THE PROSPECTIVE WAIVER OF FMLA RIGHTS

This Court's ruling, which would prohibit all settlements of FMLA claims that are not first approved by either a court or the Department, is erroneous as a matter of law.[7] It directly conflicts with the regulation itself, as well as with the Department's reasonable interpretation of its own regulation and its consistent practice since the Act's implementation. It also disregards longstanding case law construing virtually every other federal employment statute to encourage private settlements of claims, but to prohibit prospective waivers of statutory rights. Requiring federal court or Department supervision for the release of claims would prevent employers from settling claims with finality, and employees from obtaining the compensation due to them without the inevitable delay of filing a lawsuit or seeking Department "supervision."

A. Section 220(d) by its Terms Bars only Prospective Waivers

This Court's Order, following the Fourth Circuit's vacated opinion in Taylor, focused on the first sentence of section 220(d). By its terms, however, that first sentence regulates only the prospective waiver of FMLA rights and makes no mention of the settlement or release of claims. These terms are shorthand for a very important and well-understood dichotomy: the ability of an employee to settle disputes based on past employer misconduct versus the inability of an employee to agree to permit his employer to engage in future misconduct. As the Third Circuit recognized in DiBiase v. SmithKline Beecham Corp., 48 F.3d 719 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 916 (1995), waiver of a claim of employment discrimination is based upon past conduct and is distinct from waiving the right to be free from discrimination in the future. See 48 F.3d at 729 (The district court's error was "in large part due to the conflation of the notion of a 'right' with the notion of an accrued 'claim.' A right to be free prospectively from certain forms of discrimination always is worth something; however, whether a person has accrued a claim based on a right depends entirely on what previously has occurred.").

This Court also followed the vacated Taylor opinion in focusing on the word "waiver" instead of on the word "rights" in the first sentence of the regulation. Slip op. at 16 n.10. It agreed with the mistaken conclusion in Taylor that the word "waiver" indicates that the regulation applies both prospectively and retrospectively. Id. The operative term in the regulation, however, is not "waiver" but "rights," which, as made clear by the remaining sentences in section 220(d), refers to an employee's future FMLA rights and not to claims based on past employer actions.[8]

The second sentence of section 220(d) clearly indicates that the regulation is intended to bar the bargaining away of employees' future FMLA rights, stating: "For example, employees (or their collective bargaining representatives) cannot 'trade off' the right to take FMLA leave against some other benefit offered by the employer." 29 C.F.R. 825.220(d). The regulation makes clear, therefore, that an employer could not, for example, offer a new employee six weeks of paid maternity leave in exchange for waiving her right to 12 weeks of unpaid FMLA-protected leave.

The final two sentences of the regulation set forth the only exception to the bar on waiving future FMLA rights. They begin, "This [bar] does not prevent an employee's voluntary and uncoerced acceptance . . . of a 'light duty' assignment while recovering from a serious health condition . . . ." 29 C.F.R. 825.220(d). Without this "carve out," the regulation would have prevented employees who were on FMLA leave from returning to work by voluntarily accepting a light-duty job, because the offer of such a position could be viewed as an inducement to waive their right to return to the same or an equivalent position. See 29 U.S.C. 2614(a)(1). The regulation goes on to make clear that when employees voluntarily accept offers of "light duty" positions, their right to restoration to the same or an equivalent position continues to run during the time that they fill the modified position. When read in its entirety, therefore, it is clear that section 220(d) addresses only prospective FMLA rights. See Sekula v. FDIC, 39 F.3d 448, 454 (3d Cir. 1994) (in interpreting a regulation, "[o]ne must look at the entire provision, rather than seize on one part in isolation").[9]

Section 220(d)'s prohibition against the prospective waiver of rights, but not the retrospective settlement of claims, is consistent with the established precedent in employment law disfavoring prospective waivers of rights, but encouraging settlement of claims. See Alexander v. Gardner-Denver Co., 415 U.S. 36, 51-52 (1974) ("Although presumably an employee may waive his cause of action under Title VII as part of a voluntary settlement, . . . an employee's rights under Title VII are not susceptible of prospective waiver."); Eisenberg v. Advance Relocation & Storage, Inc., 237 F.3d 111, 116-17 (2d Cir. 2000) ("Accordingly, a firm cannot buy from a worker an exemption from the substantive protections of the anti-discrimination laws because workers do not have such an exemption to sell, and any contractual term that purports to confer such an exemption is invalid."); Adams v. Philip Morris, Inc., 67 F.3d 580, 584 (6th Cir. 1995) ("It is the general rule in this circuit that an employee may not prospectively waive his or her rights under either Title VII or the ADEA."); Kendall v. Watkins, 998 F.2d 848, 851 (10th Cir. 1993) ("In other words, an employee may agree to waive Title VII rights that have accrued, but cannot waive rights that have not yet accrued."), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1120 (1994).

Accordingly, section 220(d) is a reasonable interpretation of the FMLA. As such, it is entitled to controlling deference. See United States v. Mead Corp., 533 U.S. 218, 229 (2001) (when considering whether an agency's interpretation of the statute is permissible, "a reviewing court . . . is oblig[ated] to accept the agency's position if . . . the agency's interpretation is reasonable); Chevron U.S.A. Inc. v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 844 (1984) (an agency's interpretation must be upheld unless it is "arbitrary, capricious, or manifestly contrary to the statute"); Sommer v. The Vanguard Group, 461 F.3d 397, 399 n.2 (3d Cir. 2006) (Department's FMLA regulations entitled to controlling deference); Harrell v. United States Postal Serv., 445 F.3d 913, 927 (7th Cir. 2006) (controlling Chevron deference accorded to Department's reasonable interpretation of the FMLA's return-to-work medical certification provision as contained in a legislative rule), petition for cert. filed, 75 U.S.L.W. 3066 (U.S. Aug. 2, 2006) (No. 06-192).

B. The Department's Reasonable Interpretation of Section 220(d) Is Entitled to Controlling Deference

Even if, contrary to the plain meaning of section 220(d), the regulation is deemed ambiguous, the Secretary's permissible interpretation of the regulation is entitled to controlling deference. See Auer v. Robbins, 519 U.S. 452 (1997); see also Barnhart v. Walton, 535 U.S. 212, 217 (2002) ("Courts grant an agency's interpretation of its own regulations considerable legal leeway."); Facchiano Constr. Co. v. United States Dep't of Labor, 987 F.2d 206, 213 (3d Cir.) ("[A]n administrative agency's interpretation of its own regulations receives even greater deference than that accorded to its interpretation of a statute."), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 820 (1993).[10] The regulation was never intended to restrict, nor has the Department ever interpreted it as restricting, the retrospective settlement of FMLA claims.[11] Rather, the Secretary, based on longstanding judicial precedent encouraging settlement of employment claims, see, e.g., Carson v. Am. Brands, Inc., 450 U.S. 79, 88 n.14 (1981), has consistently interpreted section 220(d) to bar only the prospective waiver of FMLA rights and not the settlement of FMLA claims.

In this regard, this Court erred in concluding that the general reference in the preamble discussion of section 220(d) to the Fair Labor Standards Act ("FLSA") indicated the Department's intention to bar the private settlement of claims under the FMLA. See Slip op. at 16. Section 107(b)(1) of the FMLA authorizes the Secretary to "receive, investigate, and attempt to resolve complaints of violations of section 105 in the same manner that the Secretary receives, investigates, and attempts to resolve complaints of violations of sections 6 and 7 of the Fair Labor Standards Act." 29 U.S.C. 2617(b)(1). This provision provides the Secretary the authority to establish the same administrative complaint procedure that she utilizes under the minimum wage and overtime provisions of the FLSA. It clearly does not, however, require the Secretary to supervise all FMLA settlements -- a unique, judicially-imposed requirement under the FLSA.

Consistent with the authorization in section 107(b)(1) of the FMLA, the Secretary has established an administrative process pursuant to which the Wage and Hour Division investigates and attempts to resolve FMLA complaints in the same way that FLSA complaints are handled. When FMLA complaints are settled in the administrative process, the Secretary supervises those settlements in the same manner as she does settlements under section 16(c) of the FLSA. See 29 U.S.C. 216(c). Thus, where the FMLA and FLSA differ is not in the manner in which the Secretary supervises settlements, but rather in the scope of settlements that must be supervised.

The judicial doctrine establishing that FLSA rights cannot be waived or settled without federal court or Department approval is based on policy considerations unique to the FLSA, and the Department's general reference in the preamble to "other labor standards statutes such as the FLSA," 60 Fed. Reg. 2180, 2218 (Jan. 6, 1995), was by no means intended to engraft this unique aspect of FLSA law onto the FMLA.[12] Indeed, if the Department had wanted to link the FMLA and the FLSA in this regard, it would have referred only to the FLSA (and, more specifically, to its "supervised" settlement provision), as opposed to referring to "other labor standards statutes."

The FLSA is a broad remedial statute setting the floor for minimum wage and overtime pay. See Barrentine v. Arkansas-Best Freight Sys., Inc., 450 U.S. 728, 740 (1981); D.A. Schulte, Inc. v. Gangi, 328 U.S. 108, 114-15 (1946); Brooklyn Sav. Bank v. O'Neil, 324 U.S. 697, 706-07 (1945); Walton v. United Consumers Club, Inc., 786 F.2d 303, 306 (7th Cir. 1986); Lynn's Food Stores, Inc. v. United States, 679 F.2d 1350, 1353-54 (11th Cir. 1982). It was intended to protect the most vulnerable workers who lacked the bargaining power to negotiate a fair wage or reasonable work hours with their employers. See Brooklyn Sav. Bank, 324 U.S. at 706-07. Based on the courts' perception of the characteristics of the workers protected by the FLSA, it is virtually alone among federal employment statutes in its restriction on settlements.

Indeed, courts have rejected attempts to apply a "supervision" requirement to other employment statutes, including the Age Discrimination in Employment Act ("ADEA"), 29 U.S.C. 621 et seq., which also includes an enforcement provision that is expressly based on the FLSA. See 29 U.S.C. 626(b) ("The provisions of this chapter shall be enforced in accordance with the powers, remedies, and procedures provided in sections 211(b), 216 (except for subsection (a) thereof), and 217 of [the FLSA] . . . ."). Courts consistently have refused to apply to ADEA claims the requirement that settlements must be approved by a court or supervised by an administrative agency. See Coventry v. United States Steel Corp., 856 F.2d 514, 521 n.8 (3d Cir. 1988) ("We are unpersuaded, however, that the policy concerns of the FLSA that the Supreme Court sought to advance by its decisions in Gangi and O'Neil are present in ADEA cases such that a per se rule against releases is necessary."); Runyan v. Nat'l Cash Register Corp., 787 F.2d 1039, 1043 (6th Cir.) (en banc) (noting that purpose of the FLSA was "to secure 'the lowest paid segment . . . a subsistence wage,'" whereas the ADEA was aimed at protecting "an entirely different segment of employees, many of whom were highly paid and capable of securing legal assistance without difficulty") (quoting Gangi, 328 U.S. at 116), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 850 (1986).[13] As the Supreme Court noted in Gilmer v. Interstate/Johnson Lane Corp., 500 U.S. 20 (1991), "[N]othing in the ADEA indicates that Congress intended that the EEOC be involved in all employment disputes. Such disputes can be settled, for example, without any EEOC involvement." Id. at 28. Indeed, when Congress did intend to regulate ADEA settlements, it enacted a specific statutory provision for that purpose.[14] The FMLA, which was enacted after the OWBPA amended the ADEA, is notably devoid of any statutory provision restricting the voluntary settlement of claims.

The policy considerations underlying the FMLA are more akin to those underlying the ADEA and Title VII than the FLSA. The FMLA protects all segments of the workforce, from low wage workers to highly paid professionals. Also, unlike the FLSA, almost all claims under the FMLA are individual claims, generally brought by employees who have been terminated or denied reinstatement and are seeking damages and equitable relief. Thus, in these significant respects, the FMLA is more like Title VII and the ADEA, both of which permit unsupervised settlement of claims, than the FLSA. See United States v. N.C., 180 F.3d 574, 581 (4th Cir. 1999) (in entering a consent decree under Title VII, "a district court should be guided by the general principle that settlements are encouraged"); Rivera-Flores v. Bristol-Myers Squibb Caribbean, 112 F.3d 9, 11 (1st Cir. 1997) ("Courts have, in the employment law context, commonly upheld releases given in exchange for additional benefits. Such releases provide a means of voluntary resolution of potential and actual legal disputes, and mete out a type of industrial justice. Thus, releases of past claims have been honored under [Title VII and the ADEA].") (emphasis added); Gormin v. Brown-Forman Corp., 963 F.2d 323 (11th Cir. 1992) (collecting cases holding unsupervised settlement of ADEA claims to be valid).

This Court also erred when it concluded that the Department's preamble discussion of section 220(d) indicated that the Department "appeared to acknowledge that § 825.220(d) would prohibit soon-to-be-former employees from waiving their right to recover for violations of the FMLA that occurred during their employment." Slip op. at 15-16. Indeed, the Department's preamble discussion of section 220(d), like the regulation itself, focuses solely on the impact of the regulation on the prospective waiver of the rights to leave and reinstatement under the FMLA. See Senger, 2006 WL 2787852, at *3 (controlling deference to the Department's consistent interpretation of its own regulation as contained in the preamble, a Wage and Hour opinion letter, and the Department's amicus brief). The Department's silence as to the specific comments regarding the impact of the regulation on the settlement of FMLA claims in a severance agreement is properly viewed not as an acknowledgment that such agreements are barred by the regulation, but instead as an indication that the Department viewed such agreements as being beyond the scope of section 220(d).

As the examples in the preamble make clear, the Department viewed section 220(d) as barring only the prospective waiver of rights. The first example (also included in the regulatory provision) is that of an employee who waives her FMLA right to return to her original position by accepting a light duty assignment. 60 Fed. Reg. at 2118-19. As discussed above, this is an explicit "carve out" to the bar on the prospective waiver of FMLA rights.

The second example, which involves early-out retirement programs, was added in direct response to a concern about the impact of section 220(d) on such programs, specifically a concern about the regulation's bar on the prospective waiver of rights. The Department made clear in the preamble that an employee may be required to waive her right to continue on FMLA leave (and to return to her position at the end of the leave) as the condition for participation in an early-out program. See 60 Fed. Reg. at 2219 ("[A]n employee on FMLA leave may be required to give up his or her remaining FMLA leave entitlement to take an early-out offer from the employer.").[15] This, however, presents no obstacle because, as the preamble notes, if an employee participates in such a program, the employee's "FMLA rights would cease because the employment relationship ceases, and the employee would not otherwise have continued employment." Id.[16]

Finally, the Department's consistent and long standing interpretation of section 220(d) as barring only the prospective waiver of FMLA rights is borne out by its actions. Since the passage of the FMLA, the Department has supervised only the settlement of FMLA claims arising in connection with complaints filed with the Wage and Hour Division. Cf. Sekula, 39 F.3d at 457 (deferring to an agency's consistent application of an ambiguous regulatory provision). The Department has never established a system for reviewing FMLA settlements in which no administrative complaint has been filed, something it clearly would have done had it intended section 220(d) to require such supervision.

In order to comply with such a requirement, the Department would have to allocate significant resources to establish a process for reviewing settlement of all FMLA disputes (including severance agreements) that are not pending in court. Adding the requirement of Department or court supervision will harm employees by delaying resolution of their cases. Moreover, the shifting of resources from complaint investigation to private party settlement supervision will result in delays for those employees who have filed complaints with, and are relying on, the Department to protect their rights under the FMLA. Such a reallocation would also lessen the resources available to pursue FLSA investigations, which would directly affect the Department's ability to protect the rights of vulnerable low-wage workers.

In sum, section 220(d) bars only the prospective waiver of FMLA rights and not the settlement of FMLA claims based on past employer actions. Even if this legislative rule is deemed to be ambiguous, however, the Department's permissible interpretation of its own regulation is entitled to controlling deference. See Auer, 519 U.S. at 462.

Footnotes

[1] On September 27, 2006, the Department of Labor ("Department") submitted a letter to this Court requesting permission to file an amicus brief by October 27, 2006, in support of Defendant's motion for reconsideration. The Court granted the Department's request via telephone on October 4, 2006 and, on October 25, 2006, granted the Department's request for additional time in which to file the brief up to, and including, November 3, 2006.

[2] The Department expresses no opinion on whether the release at issue in this case is valid under applicable state law.

[3] This Court, of course, has the inherent power to reconsider its August 30, 2006 Order in the interest of justice at any time prior to entry of a final judgment. See United States v. Jerry, 487 F.2d 600, 604-06 (3d Cir. 1973); Deily v. Waste Mgmt., No. 00-1100, 2000 WL 1858717, at *1 (E.D. Pa. 2000); Philadelphia Reserve Supply Co. v. Nowalk & Assocs., Inc., 864 F. Supp. 1456, 1460-61 (E.D. Pa. 1994). The interests of justice are served by reconsideration in this case because this Court based its order on an erroneous understanding of the Department's waiver regulation at 29 C.F.R. 825.220(d). In reaching its conclusion, this Court did not have the benefit of a full explication of the Department's interpretation of section 220(d) as set forth below.

[4] Whether a waiver of FMLA claims is barred by section 220(d) does not turn on whether it takes the form of a general release in a severance agreement or the settlement of a specific FMLA claim.

[5] This Court was aware of the Fourth Circuit's order vacating its opinion in Taylor. The Fourth Circuit did not give any reasons for the vacature. However, the sole basis for Progress Energy's petition for rehearing in Taylor was the panel's erroneous application of section 220 (d) to void the release in that case. The Department filed a brief as amicus curiae in support of Progress Energy's petition for rehearing on the ground that the Fourth Circuit misinterpreted the Department's waiver regulation when it held that an employee could not release in a separation agreement claims for violations of the FMLA that took place during the course of the employee's employment. Oral argument pursuant to the Fourth Circuit's grant of panel rehearing in Taylor took place on October 25, 2006, with the Department presenting argument as amicus.

[6] The Department agrees with the Fifth Circuit's decision in Faris to the extent that the court held that section 220(d) prohibits only the prospective waiver of FMLA rights. The court in Faris erred, however, in concluding that the prospective bar on waiver applied only to the waiver of substantive rights and not the waiver of proscriptive rights under the FMLA. See 332 F.3d at 320-21. Under the Fifth Circuit's reasoning, while an employee could not prospectively waive her right to take FMLA leave (a substantive right under the Act), she could prospectively waive her right to sue for discrimination for having taken such leave (a proscriptive right). The Department construes the regulation as barring the prospective waiver of any right under the FMLA.

[7] Contrary to the only appellate ruling on this issue (Faris), three other district courts have concluded that the regulation prohibits both the prospective waiver of FMLA rights and the settlement of FMLA claims. See Brizzee v. Fred Meyer Stores, Inc., No. 04-1566, 2006 WL 2045857 (D. Or. July 17, 2006), appeal docketed, No. 06-35757 (9th Cir. Sep. 6, 2006); Dierlam v. Wesley Jessen Corp., 222 F. Supp. 2d 1052 (N.D. Ill. 2002); Bluitt v. EVAL Co. of Am., Inc., 3 F. Supp. 2d 761 (S.D. Tex. 1998). Other courts at both the appellate and district court level, however, have approved the validity of private settlements of FMLA claims without referring to the regulation. See, e.g., Halvorson v. Boy Scouts of Am., 215 F.3d 1326 (6th Cir. 2000) (unpublished table decision); Schoenwald v. ARCO Alaska, Inc., 191 F.3d 461 (9th Cir. 1999) (unpublished table decision); Kujawski v. U.S. Filter Wastewater Group, Inc., No. 00-1151, 2001 WL 893918 (D. Minn. Aug. 7, 2001).

[8] Indeed, even the definitions of waiver cited by the court in Taylor implicitly acknowledge a distinction between 'claim' and 'right' by referring to them separately. See Taylor, 415 F.3d at 370 (citing definition of "waive" in Webster's Third New International Dictionary as reading, in part, "to relinquish voluntarily (as a legal right) . . . to refrain from pressing or enforcing (as a claim or rule)").

[9] The Fourth Circuit in its vacated opinion in Taylor did not refer to any portion of the regulatory text other than the first sentence. See 415 F.3d at 369-71.

[10] Indeed, as the Supreme Court noted in Auer, where the Secretary's position reflects "the agency's fair and considered judgment on the matter in question," the fact that it is first articulated in a legal brief does not lessen the deference it should be accorded. 519 U.S. at 462; see also Senger v. City of Aberdeen, S.D., ___ F.3d ___, 2006 WL 2787852, at *3 (8th Cir. 2006); Belt v. EmCare, Inc., 444 F.3d 403, 415-17 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, No. 05-1658, 2006 WL 2795157 (Oct. 2, 2006); United States v. Occidental Chem. Corp., 200 F.3d 143, 151-52 (3d Cir. 1999). Accordingly, the Department's interpretation as set out in this brief also is entitled to controlling deference.

[11] The Department has not issued any opinion letters directly addressing section 220(d). Two opinion letters issued under the interim regulations did, however, address the regulation. Both letters involved situations in which employees sought prospectively to waive their right to FMLA-protected leave. The Department's responses in each case made clear that the employees may not prospectively waive their FMLA rights. See Wage and Hour Division Opinion Letters FMLA-43 (Aug. 24, 1994) and FMLA-49 (Oct. 27, 1994), available at http://www.dol.gov/whd/opinion/fmlana_prior2002.htm.

[12] This Court specifically declined to determine whether court approval was required to settle an FMLA claim in litigation, noting that such a requirement was beyond the plain language of section 220(d). See Slip op. at 16 n.11.

[13] It should be noted that the ADEA enforcement provision specifically references section 216 of the FLSA, which provides the Department with authority to supervise settlements. See 29 U.S.C. 626(b). The FMLA enforcement provision lacks any reference to the FLSA "supervised" settlement provision. See 29 U.S.C. 2617(b)(1).

[14] By enacting the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act ("OWBPA"), Pub. L. No. 101-433, § 201, 104 Stat. 978, 983-84 (1990) (codified at 29 U.S.C. 626(f)), Congress regulated the settlement of ADEA claims by delimiting the elements necessary to establish a knowing and voluntary settlement under the statute. Even after the OWBPA, however, ADEA claims are still subject to unsupervised settlement, so long as the conditions set forth in 29 U.S.C. 626(f) are met.

[15] It should be noted that such early-out retirement programs normally require employees to execute a general release of claims related to their employment as a condition of participation in the program. The fact that the Department did not address the impact of the waiver bar on such releases in its preamble discussion of these programs is further indication that it viewed the settlement of FMLA claims as beyond the scope of the regulation.

[16] The problem with equating the waiver of FMLA rights with the settlement of FMLA claims in applying section 220(d) is made apparent in this statement. If, as is implicit in this Court's reasoning, the term "FMLA rights" encompasses the assertion of an FMLA claim based on past employer actions, then, by stating that FMLA rights cease with the employment relationship, the Department would have been indicating that an employee's ability to assert an FMLA claim also ends with the termination of her employment. Clearly, the Department never intended such a result; rather, it was referring only to an employee's future rights to continue on FMLA leave and return to her position, and not her right to file a claim based on past employer actions.

EEOC Sues Cognis Corporation For Retaliation

CHICAGO – Cognis Corporation, a worldwide supplier of chemicals and nutritional ingredients, violated federal law when it retaliated against employees at the company's Kankakee, Ill. plant, the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) charged in a lawsuit it filed yesterday.

The EEOC alleged that Cognis terminated longtime employee Steven Whitlow after he refused to enter into a "last chance agreement." That agreement allegedly waived Whitlow's right to file a charge with any civil rights commission or other government agency. It also prospectively waived his right to pursue relief in any forum if Cognis decided to discharge him in the future, according to Chicago District Director John Rowe, who supervised the EEOC's administrative investigation.

Although Whitlow had at first signed the agreement, he later rescinded it because, as he explained to Cognis, he did not wish to waive his civil rights. Whitlow was immediately fired, the investigation indicated.. According to Rowe, other employees were also asked to sign last chance agreements that purported to waive their rights as a condition for keeping their jobs.

Retaliation violates Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The EEOC filed suit after first attempting to reach a voluntary conciliation agreement out of court. The agency seeks compensatory and punitive damages for Whitlow in addition to an order barring future retaliation and other relief. The suit, captioned EEOC v. Cognis Corporation, C.D. Illinois No. 10-C-2182, was filed in federal district court in Urbana, Ill. and assigned to U.S. District Court Judge Michael P. McCuskey.

Rowe said, "We are always concerned when employers take measures which appear designed to prevent employees from making use of their rights under federal employment discrimination law. That problem is compounded when employees who resist these efforts face retaliation, including termination. That is sure to get our attention."

EEOC Chicago Regional Attorney John Hendrickson added, "Some employers seem not to have gotten the message embedded in today's suit filing: No one can stop employees from filing charges of discrimination with EEOC or take away rights to challenge future discrimination. Those who penalize employees for resisting such schemes are engaged in retaliation, pure and simple. The EEOC is vigilant about contesting any diminution of employees' right to complain of discrimination."

According to its website, Cognis Corporation, with headquarters in Cincinnati, Ohio, is owned by Cognis Group, which is headquartered in Monheim, Germany and employs over 5,000 people in approximately 30 countries, including seven U.S. states. Its operations in Illinois include the Cognis Corporation Kankakee Manufacturing Plant in Kankakee, Ill., and the Cognis Corporation LaGrange Nutrition & Health facility in LaGrange, Ill.

The EEOC enforces federal laws prohibiting discrimination in employment. Further information about the Commission is available on its web site at www.eeoc.gov.

The EEOC Chicago District Office is responsible for processing charges of discrimination, administrative enforcement, and the conduct of agency litigation in Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, and North and South Dakota, with Area Offices in Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

steer clear of addressing such issues. That the March 8, 2008 speech may have been given for political purposes/hype/damage control ONLY and there was NEVER any intent to make good on trying to address such issues. America is aware that Barack Obama is the President of the United States and is not for one particular race; however, they are not IGNORANT of the fact that African-Americans and/or people of color are repeatedly being deprived Human/Civil Rights, Constitutional Rights, Equal Protection of the Laws, Due Process of Laws, Employment Opportunities, etc. IT IS OBVIOUS THAT THE MEDIA/PRESS ARE STEERING CLEAR OF THIS SUBJECT – April's question at the June 23, 2009 Press Conference was ignored in the post coverage on the major network stations. Why? Because our media want to distract from such sensitive topics and cover up such issues as it has done for years. AGAIN – Foreign countries are not ignorant of these things. We need to handle our business over here first before we begin meddling in another country's affairs.

President Barack Obama and U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder acknowledge the need to deal with such RACIAL issues.

Here we go. Now will Obama and Holder deal with the issues provided herein as well as in the Complaints submitted to their attention?

President Barack Obama ENCOURAGES the public to keep him abreast of what is going on and to feel free to contact him. The question now, is HOW IS HIS ADMINISTRATION GOING TO DEAL WITH THE SUCH CRIMINAL AND RACIST ISSUES TIMELY BROUGHT TO HIS ATTENTION?????

Respectfully submitted this 24th day of June, 2009.

This is my comments to the Jon Lewis Investigation. This is my story and letter to the Hinds County Board of Supervisors. I know Jon Lewis has been taking money his whole terms in office because his stolen money and property from me. I feel he should have criminal charges filed against him for his criminal behavior. No one wants to help me and every Law enforcement agency and offical have not done their jobs.

My name is Frank D. Baltimore Sr., Sr., I am a African American citizen who resided in Jackson Mississippi and was run out by threats made and Constitutional rights violations performed by Constable Jon Lewis against me. I currently reside in Los Angeles CA. I have experienced the racism of the south that I read about in history books and watched about of TV. I contacted the board of supervisors and the board's attorney back in 2004, 2005, and 2006. I have asked you to help me on numerous occasions to no avail from any board member. I am prepared to file a 1983 civil rights lawsuite for violations of my constitutional rights by Jon Lewis, and I will include the County of Hinds, and Hinds County Board of Supervisors also as defendants because I put you on notice of the violations caused by Jon Lewis and you having the power to investigate or inquire in to the matter and because the County funds apart of his training and that he was not properly trained to. I want to try to settle this in good faith before I file in the US Federal Courts. I am asking you to call for and add my complaint to your already internal investigation presently going on against Jon Lewis. He took my badges, stun gun, diamond earring, and $100 dollars in cash money from me, and never returned them to me to his present date.
Hinds County Constable Refutes Allegations
I have sent certified letter to him demanding him to return my property and money. He has refused, not responded, and sent the some of the certified letters back. This is one example of one I sent:
February04
Dear Jon E. Lewis, Hinds County Constable:
On October 30, 2003, while you were enforcing a simple eviction at 23 N. Hill Pkwy, Apt. F, Jackson, MS 39206, you willfully and deliberately without probable cause and without a search warrant illegally searched and seized the Personal Business property owned by Frank D. Baltimore, Sr., Damon Baltimore, and Baltimore Enterprises, who had and has a lawful legal right to the said property illegally seized.
This letter is a demand for you to return all said property seized by you on October 30, 2003, November 1, 2003, and November 2, 2003 dates. Please be advised that if the said property is not returned within 5 days, a civil lawsuit is prepared and will be filed against you in your official and individual capacities, the County of Hinds, and the County of Hinds Board of Supervisors for constitutional and civil rights violations of my 1st, 4th , 5th , 6th, and 14th amendments, discrimination, and other Federal and State amendments not mentioned herein.
Furthermore, criminal charges will also be filed against you for the violations of the Federal and State laws you committed. This letter is sent in good faith to settle the situation before legal action is taken. The following is a list of the items you searched, seized, and demanded:

- 1 Badge (Baltimore Enterprises- Fugitive Recovery Agent)
- 1 Stunner (Baltimore Enterprises)
- 1 $100 dollar bill
- 1 Diamond Earring

Daily Horoscope for January 7

Virgo

If you're a typical Virgo you're usually fairly patient, but that isn't the case today. It's one of those days when people have an uncanny knack of getting under your skin and irritating the life out of you. What's more, the better you know them the more annoying you'll find them. It's a case of familiarity breeding contempt, so count to ten before going off pop. Then, if you're still angry, you can say so.

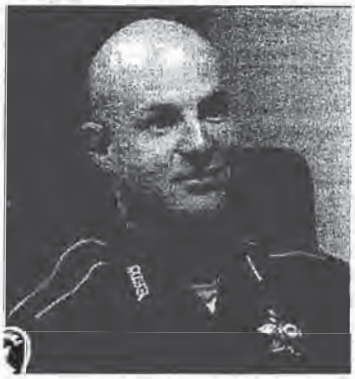
Supervisors Looking Into Constable's Methods



By Andrew Hasbun
andrew@wlbt.net

The Hinds County Board of Supervisor's is looking into the methods used by the county's constable. At issue, is how he collects his fees. The constable says he has done nothing wrong.

In a letter to the county administrator, Justice Court Clerk Patricia Woods accused Constable John Lewis of using questionable tactics.

"There is absolutely nothing criminal here, nothing wrong," said Constable Jon Lewis.

The clerk said Friday, April 7th, several defendants appeared at justice court to pay fines, but a judge wasn't present. A Utica man received a letter telling him to appear, but the man had already paid his speeding ticket in January.

After learning that, the clerk told her staff not to collect any fees from defendants who did not have outstanding warrants.

"I refuse to be a part of his collection process," said Woods in her letter to County Administrator Anthony Brister. "I cannot imagine how many letters were mailed or payments received at his home address."

"I am welcoming an investigation from the auditor's office. I would like it to be looked into very thoroughly," said Lewis.

Constable Lewis says the letter to the defendant about the speeding ticket was a mistake on his part, but he makes no apologies for using tough methods.

In one letter to a defendant, Lewis advised the man not to talk to anyone but him. He told the man not to call the court. Lewis tells defendants that because he says it helps ensure he collects his $35 service fee, which keeps the constable's operation running.

"I've learned that if you are weak, and you see weaknesses in the officer, they don't listen," said Lewis.

That $35 fee is tacked on if someone doesn't pay their fine and the constable has to serve a warrant. Lewis says he has lost thousands of dollars because of mishandled fees, and he won't let that continue.

The Board of Supervisors held an executive session meeting Monday to discuss the matter. Since justice court falls under the board's jurisdiction, the board's attorney will be investigating.

Hinds County Constable Refutes Allegations

POSTED: 11:32 am CDT April 18, 2006
UPDATED: 9:18 am CDT April 19, 2006

JACKSON, Miss. -- Hinds County Constable Jon Lewis is firing back over allegations that he illegally collected a fee for his services.

The Hinds County Board of Supervisors called for an internal investigation into accusations that Lewis collected an unauthorized $35 fee for serving criminal and civil warrants.

Board president Doug Anderson said those fees are being collected without board approval.

But Lewis argues that accepting a fee is legal and said serving warrants is the way constables earn money.

"The investigation needs to go forward. I welcome a thorough investigation from the State Auditor's Office. I want them to do this. They need to come in and look. I want everyone of my filed looked at," said Lewis.

Anderson said no action will be taken until after the internal investigation is complete.

Controversy in Constable Special Election

Posted: Sep 30, 2008 05:03 PM EDT

Updated: Oct 13, 2008 10:11 AM EDT

By Julie Straw
Julie@wlbt.net

It's a crowded race in the special election for Hinds County's District 3 Constable. Now there's allegations that four of the seven candidates are not eligible to run.

The Hinds County Election Commission is looking into allegations that four men vying for the job of District 3 Constable may not qualify.

"It's just very frustrating," said Connie Cochran, Election Commissioner for District 4. She says there are questions on whether the candidates live in the district they are running for. State law requires that they do. Joe Coleman, Chris Gray, Canera Jelks, and Clifton Page have all been asked to show proof of residency.

"But we can't just run people down to find out where they actually live. So there's still some questions about their residency," said Cochran.

County constable is a desirable position. For every warrant and summons the constable serves he makes $35. In a large county like Hinds the job can be quite lucrative. Constables also act as bailiffs in justice court and take on other law enforcement duties.

"You would hope that if somebody is running for an office in law enforcement that they would have the fortitude to speak honestly and declare where they live," said Cochran.

Coleman, Gray, Jelks, and Page's names are on the absentee ballots, but the voting machines have not yet been programmed. There's plenty of time before the November 4th election to change the ballot if new information comes to light.

"If there is some proof that they do not live in the third supervisor district their names will not appear on the machine ballots," said Cochran.

We tried contacting all seven candidates for District 3 constable. WLBT received only one statement from Canera Jelk's lawyer. Attorney Precious Martin gave us this statement: "He is homesteaded and legally resides in the district. There is no reason for his name not to be on the ballot. He lives in the district."

Magnolia State has share of corruption

JERRY MITCHELL • JMITCHELL@CLARIONLEDGER.COM • DECEMBER 28, 2008

The recent indictment of Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich has resurrected that state's stereotype as the ultimate place for backroom deals, bribes and corruption.

But in the past decade, Mississippi has had nearly twice the per capita rate of public officials convicted than Illinois.

Between 1998 and 2007, Mississippi saw the federal convictions of 212 public officials, causing the state to rank fourth nationally per capita in public corruption cases, trailing only North Dakota, Alaska and Louisiana.

The number of Mississippi's corruption convictions is substantial, but only tells part of the story, said Assistant U.S. Attorney John Dowdy of Jackson, who heads the criminal division for the Southern District of Mississippi.

"You take into account the number of cases prosecuted by the local district attorneys and the state attorney general, and you see there is a pattern of corruption with all levels of public office, from city to federal," he said.

The Corporate Crime Reporter puts Mississippi in second place in public corruption, just behind Louisiana.

The high rankings don't surprise Dowdy. "I do believe that is a fair representation of the true nature of corruption within public office in this state," he said. "It is a problem, and it has been historically."

Corruption has plagued Mississippi since the beginning, said David Sansing, professor emeritus of history at the University of Mississippi.

The only reason the state isn't ranked higher nationally in corruption is because most people get away with it, he said.

"The possibility of corruption is endemic to our system of government," he said. "We dare people to be crooked, we make it so easy for them. When the people govern, the people are given to take for themselves and cut corners, it's just endemic to our system of government."

What amazes Sansing most is not the amount of corruption but the "millions of honest, hard-working public servants who don't corrupt the system. Our system has endured wars, depressions and natural disasters. It has endured because millions of public servants do it honestly and do it well. They don't get enough credit."

The fact Mississippi suffers from poverty and a lack of education "exposes our system to even more corruption," he said. "We don't pay our public officials enough money to live. Because we have always had corruption, the smart ones are able to get away with more than they might otherwise."

Because most Mississippians share the same political views "people don't run on issues," he said. "Even now, the politicians in Mississippi who get elected are those with strong dominant personalities like Theodore Bilbo."

The bombastic politician symbolized the corruption that has plagued Mississippi throughout the decades, repeatedly accused of taking bribes but never convicted.

He once announced his candidacy for governor after being released from jail for contempt for refusing to testify in a scandal.

"These strong-willed personalities can sweet-talk their way into public office," Sansing said. "And some of them who get there say, 'Now that I'm here, I can take what I can get.' "

Despite repeated scandals, voters kept re-electing Bilbo to office, first to the state Senate, next as lieutenant governor, then as governor and finally as a U.S. senator. In 1947, fellow senators barred him from taking his U.S. Senate seat after he supposedly took bribes for military contracts.

In the mid-1980s, Mississippi saw its most pervasive sweep of corruption prosecutions with the FBI's Operation Pretense, resulting in the convictions of 43 county supervisors and 11 vendors.

In Pontotoc County, the entire Board of Supervisors had to resign after pleading guilty to corruption charges.

In recent decades, the state has also seen the successful prosecutions of members of the Mississippi Senate, the Highway Commission, the Public Service Commission and the Jackson City Council.

Veteran journalist Bill Minor called then-federal prosecutor James Tucker a true hero for making sure authorities shone the light on the criminal deeds by public officials for three decades.

As a district attorney in southwest Mississippi, Dunn Lampton brought his share of public corruption charges. Seventeen of those public officials were removed from office.

"If the evidence is good, citizens will vote to convict corrupt officials," Lampton said.

When Lampton became U.S. attorney in 2001, "one of the first things he implemented in this office was a policy of zero tolerance for public corruption," Dowdy said. "We have stayed consistent throughout his term, and if a public corruption case was brought to this office, if in fact the evidence was there, we prosecuted it."

REPORT RANKS STATES FROM MOST CORRUPT TO LEAST CORRUPT

Mississippi is the most corrupt state in the United States, and Nebraska is the least corrupt, according to a first-ever ranking of the states released last week by Corporate Crime Reporter.

According to the report, Public Corruption in the United States, the ten most corrupt states in the country are:

Mississippi, North Dakota, Louisiana, Alaska, Illinois, Montana, South Dakota, Kentucky, Florida, and New York.

The ten least corrupt states in the country are:

Nebraska, Oregon, New Hampshire, Iowa, Colorado, Utah, Minnesota, Arizona, Arkansas, and Wisconsin.

The 50 states were ranked by corruption rate -- the number of public corruption convictions in the state over a ten-year period (1993 to 2002) per 100,000 population.

The report is being released at a time when public corruption scandals are breaking out all over the country.

The former Governor of Illinois, George Ryan, has been charged with taking money, gifts and loans in exchange for handing out state contracts to his donors.

In Connecticut, three mayors and the state treasurer are in jail or heading to jail.

And the Governor of Connecticut is under siege in a soap opera of a corruption scandal.

The last three insurance commissioners in Louisiana have gone to jail for corruption.

"We need not just strong economies, but strong political economies -- reporters, citizen groups, prosecutors, judges, religious leaders -- who are willing to speak out about the rampant corruption in our midst," said Russell Mokhiber, editor of Corporate Crime Reporter and author of the report. "Connecticut, for example, has a strong economy and an educated citizenry. But its political economy has historically been weak, with little public debate about the level of corruption around it -- until federal prosecutors at the U.S. Attorney,s office in Hartford decided to force the issue out into the open."

Mokhiber called on Attorney General John Ashcroft to stop muzzling his line attorneys at the Public Integrity Section, which is in charge of combating public corruption.

"They want to speak out on the issue, to shed some light, but they are being muzzled in an election year," Mokhiber charged. (See At a Glance, Page 12)

JUAN GONZALEZ: We're joined by "Corporate Crime Reporter" editor, Russell Mokhiber.

RUSSELL MOKHIBER: Good morning.

JUAN GONZALEZ: Good morning, Russell. Could you tell me what you found. What are the most corrupt states in the union and how did you arrive on it?

RUSSELL MOKHIBER: Well, actually the AP did a story this morning based on the report. The title is, "Image Problem, Louisiana, Not Number One in Corruption Anymore". And that's what we found. You know, the states that have the reputation of being the most corrupt, New Jersey, Louisiana, Illinois, Rhode Island, that's based on reputation, but we got a hold of a document from the Justice Department that has a statistical breakdown of public corruption convictions by state over the last ten years. So, no one has ever actually tried to rank the states to make a determination which is actually the most corrupt, reputation aside. And what we did was, we came up with a corruption rate by looking at the number of convictions over ten years for each state, per 100,000 population. And the most corrupt state in the union, according to our survey, is Mississippi, followed by North Dakota, Louisiana, Alaska and Illinois. New York comes in number ten--the tenth most corrupt.

The cleanest states in the union, the least corrupt, are Nebraska, Oregon, New Hampshire and Iowa, and Colorado. Those are the least corrupt five states. The other least corrupt fives from six through ten are Utah, Minnesota, Arizona, Arkansas, and Wisconsin. But two caveats on this; one is that these were convictions of public officials, state, federal and local in the states over ten years from 1993 to 2002, but not including 2003. The other thing is that--

JUAN GONZALEZ: It would depend in large measure also on how uncorrupt the prosecutors are who are conducting these cases.

RUSSELL MOKHIBER: One of the things the people at the Justice Department tell us is you can have an absolutely corrupt state, state-wide, through and through corrupt, and if there's not a US Attorney who wants to prosecute it, it's not going to show up. For example, in Hartford the whole corruption scandal was exposed by Governor Roland's opponent, Bill Curry, in the last election. But the press didn't pick up on it. And it took a couple of young assistant US Attorneys after the US Attorney in Hartford recused himself to go after the governor. The other thing is in Connecticut you have tens of millions of dollars of graft and illegal contracts and so forth that never create an uproar. What created the uproar was that the governor had a hot tub and cathedral ceilings put in his cottage in Litchfield, Connecticut and told everyone that he actually went and bought the hot tub and he paid for it. He lied to the public. So, you can get away with millions of dollars in corruption, but if you say you went and bought the hot tub and put it in and lie about it, then you are going to be impeached.

JUAN GONZALEZ: Any reaction from the state of Mississippi as to the most corrupt state in the union?

RUSSELL MOKHIBER: No, but we're waiting for Haley Barber and Trent Lott to weigh in. They're not happy. The AP Reporter in Mississippi is doing a story. Bill Curry, who lost twice to Roland after trying to expose the corruption says now that he thinks Connecticut is the most corrupt state in the union, but our survey shows them coming in at 31. So, maybe they're gaining ground. He calls Connecticut, "Louisiana with foliage". But the people in Louisiana are not at all happy. They admit they have a problem. The last three insurance commissioners in Louisiana have gone to jail. The agricultural commissioner is under indictment. They know they have a reputational problem, but they think they, too, have foliage, so they're upset with Curry's analysis. But seriously, one of the problems is, "Why did this happen in Connecticut?" Connecticut has a strong economy but a weak political economy. Politics in Connecticut are not very active. People pay attention to the economy, but not to the politics. One of the problems is we don't discuss public corruption. We discuss it when it blows up, but not as a generic problem. If you type in corruption into like a Google news engine, what comes up are a lot of stories from overseas.

JUAN GONZALEZ: Okay, well Russell, on that note, we thank you for being with us, and we'll keep—

RUSSELL MOKHIBER: The report is on www.corporatecrimereporter.com.

AMY GOODMAN: And you are holding a news conference today.

RUSSELL MOKHIBER: At 10:00 a.m.

AMY GOODMAN: At the National Press Club in Washington. Thanks for being with us. Russell Mokhiber of the "Corporate Crime Reporter."

Supreme Court of the United States
Michael A. HADDLE, Petitioner, v.
Jeanette G. GARRISON et al.
No. 97-1472.

Argued Nov. 10, 1998.
Decided Dec. 14, 1998.

At-will employee brought action against his employer and two of its officers for alleged violation of civil rights conspiracy statute, claiming that employer and officers conspired to have him fired from his job in retaliation for obeying federal grand jury subpoena and to deter him from testifying at federal criminal trial. The United States District Court for the Southern District of Georgia granted defendants' motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. On appeal, the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit affirmed. After granting certiorari, the Supreme Court, Chief Justice Rehnquist, held that employee was "injured in his person or property" and, thus, could state claim for damages under civil rights conspiracy statute.

Reversed and remanded.

489 *121 Syllabus FN*

FN* The syllabus constitutes no part of the opinion of the Court but has been prepared by the Reporter of Decisions for the convenience of the reader. See United States v. Detroit Timber & Lumber Co., 200 U.S. 321, 337, 26 S.Ct. 282, 50 L.Ed. 499.

Petitioner, an at-will employee, filed this action for damages against respondents alleging, inter alia, that they conspired to have him fired in retaliation for obeying a federal grand jury subpoena and to deter him from testifying at their upcoming criminal trial for Medicare fraud, and that their acts had "injured [him] in his person or property" in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1985(2). In dismissing the suit for failure to state a claim, the District Court relied on Circuit precedent holding that an at-will employee discharged pursuant to a conspiracy proscribed by § 1985(2) has suffered no actual injury because he has no constitutionally protected interest in continued employment. The Eleventh Circuit affirmed.

Held: The sort of the harm alleged by petitioner-essentially third-party interference with at-will employment relationships-states a claim for damages under § 1985(2). *490 In relevant part, the statute proscribes conspiracies to "deter, by force, intimidation, or threat, any ... witness in any [federal] court ... from attending such court, or from testifying to any matter pending therein, ... or to injure [him] in his person or property on account of his having so attended or testified," § 1985(2), and provides that if conspirators "do ... any act in furtherance of ... such conspiracy, whereby another is injured in his person or property, ... the party so injured ... may" recover damages, § 1985(3). The Eleventh Circuit erred in concluding that petitioner must suffer an injury to a "constitutionally protected property interest" to state a claim. Nothing in the language or purpose of the proscriptions in the first clause of § 1985(2), nor in its attendant remedial provisions, establishes such a requirement. The gist of the wrong at which § 1985(2) is directed is not deprivation of property, but intimidation or retaliation against witnesses in federal-court proceedings. The terms "injured in his person or property" define the harm that the victim may suffer as a result of the conspiracy to intimidate or retaliate. Thus, the fact that employment at will is not "property" for purposes of the Due Process Clause, see Bishop v. Wood, 426 U.S. 341, 345-347, 96 S.Ct. 2074, 48 L.Ed.2d 684, does not mean that loss of at-will employment may not "injur[e] [petitioner] in his person or property" for § 1985(2)'s purposes. Such harm has long been, and remains, a compensable injury under tort law, and there is no reason to 122 ignore this tradition here. To the extent that the terms "injured in his person or property" refer to such tort principles, there is ample support for the Court's holding. Pp. 491-493.

REHNQUIST, C.J., delivered the opinion for a unanimous Court.

Phillip A. Bradley, Atlanta, GA, for respondents.

Chief Justice REHNQUIST delivered the opinion of the Court.

Petitioner Michael A. Haddle, an at-will employee, alleges that respondents conspired to have him fired from his job in retaliation for obeying a federal grand jury subpoena and to deter him from testifying at a federal criminal trial. We hold that such interference with at-will employment may give rise to a claim for damages under the Civil Rights Act of 1871, Rev.Stat. § 1980, 42 U.S.C. § 1985(2).

According to petitioner's complaint, a federal grand jury indictment in March 1995 charged petitioner's employer, 123 Healthmaster, Inc., and respondents Jeanette Garrison and Dennis Kelly, officers of Healthmaster, with Medicare fraud. Petitioner cooperated with the federal agents in the investigation that preceded the indictment. He also appeared to testify before the grand jury pursuant to a subpoena, but did not testify due to the press of time. Petitioner was also expected to appear as a witness in the criminal trial resulting from the indictment.

Although Garrison and Kelly were barred by the Bankruptcy Court from participating in the affairs of Healthmaster, they conspired with G. Peter Molloy, Jr., one of the remaining officers of Healthmaster, to bring about petitioner's termination. They did this both to intimidate petitioner and to retaliate against him for his attendance at the federal-court proceedings.

Petitioner sued for damages in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Georgia, asserting a federal claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1985(2) and various state-law claims. Petitioner stated two grounds for relief under § 1985(2): one for conspiracy *491 to deter him from testifying in the upcoming criminal trial and one for conspiracy to retaliate against him for attending the grand jury proceedings. As § 1985 demands, he also alleged that he had been "injured in his person or property" by the acts of respondents in violation of § 1985(2) and that he was entitled to recover his damages occasioned by such injury against respondents jointly and severally.

Respondents moved to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Because petitioner conceded that he was an at-will employee, the District Court granted the motion on the authority of Morast v. Lance, 807 F.2d 926 (1987). In Morast, the Eleventh Circuit held that an at-will employee who is dismissed pursuant to a conspiracy proscribed by § 1985(2) has no cause of action. The Morast court explained: "[T]o make out a cause of action under § 1985(2) the plaintiff must have suffered an actual injury.124 Because Morast was an at will employee, ... he had no constitutionally protected interest in continued employment. Therefore, Morast's discharge did not constitute an actual injury under this statute." Id., at 930. Relying on its decision in Morast, the Court of Appeals affirmed. Judgt. order reported at 132 F.3d 46 (1997).

[1] The Eleventh Circuit's rule in Morast conflicts with the holdings of the First and Ninth Circuits. See Irizarry v. Quiros, 722 F.2d 869, 871 (1st Cir.1983), and Portman v. County of Santa Clara, 995 F.2d 898, 909-910 (C.A.9 1993). We therefore granted certiorari, 523 U.S. 1136, 118 S.Ct. 1838, 140 L.Ed.2d 1089 (1998), to decide whether petitioner was "injured in his property or person" when respondents induced his employer to terminate petitioner's at-will employment as part of a conspiracy prohibited by § 1985(2).

Section 1985(2), in relevant part, proscribes conspiracies to "deter, by force, intimidation, or threat, any party or witness in any court of the United States from attending such court, or from testifying to any matter pending therein, freely, fully, and truthfully, or to injure such party or witness in his person or property on account of his having so attended or testified." [FN1] The statute provides that if one 125 or more persons engaged in such a conspiracy "do, or cause to be done, any act in furtherance of the object of such conspiracy, whereby another is injured in his person or property, ... the party so injured ... may have an action for the recovery of damages occasioned by such injury ... against any one or more of the conspirators." § 1985(3).[FN2]

> FN1. Section 1985(2) proscribes the following conspiracies: "If two or more persons in any State or Territory conspire to deter, by force, intimidation, or threat, any party or witness in any court of the United States from attending such court, or from testifying to any matter pending therein, freely, fully, and truthfully, or to injure such party or witness in his person or property on account of his having so attended or testified, or to influence the verdict, presentment, or indictment of any grand or petit juror in any such court, or to injure such juror in his person or property on account of any verdict, presentment, or indictment lawfully assented to by him, or of his being or having been such juror; or if two or more persons conspire for the purpose of impeding, hindering, obstructing, or defeating, in any manner, the due course of justice in any State or Territory, with intent to deny to any citizen the equal protection of the laws, or to injure him or his property for lawfully enforcing, or attempting to enforce, the right of any person, or class of persons, to the equal protection of the laws."
> FN2. Section 1985(3) contains the remedial provision granting a cause of action for damages to those harmed by any of the conspiracies prohibited in § 1985. See Kush v. Rutledge, 460 U.S. 719, 724-725, 103 S.Ct. 1483, 75 L.Ed.2d 413 (1983) (listing the various conspiracies that § 1985 prohibits).

Petitioner's action was dismissed pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) because, in the Eleventh Circuit's view, he had not suffered an injury that could give rise to a claim for damages under § 1985(2). We must, of course, assume that the facts as alleged in petitioner's complaint are true and that respondents engaged in a conspiracy prohibited by § 1985(2). Our review in this case is accordingly confined to one question: Can petitioner state a claim for damages by alleging that a conspiracy proscribed by § 1985(2) induced his employer to terminate his at-will employment? FN3

> FN3. We express no opinion regarding respondents' argument that intimidation claims under § 1985(2) are limited to conduct involving force or threat of force, or their argument that only litigants, and not witnesses, may bring § 1985(2) claims. We leave those issues for the courts below to resolve on re- mand.

*492 [2][3] We disagree with the Eleventh Circuit's conclusion that petitioner must suffer an injury to a "constitutionally protected property interest" to state a claim for damages under § 1985(2). Nothing in the language or purpose of the proscriptions in the first clause of § 1985(2), nor in its attendant remedial provisions, establishes such a requirement. The gist of the wrong at which § 1985(2) is directed is not deprivation of property, but intimidation or retaliation against witnesses in federal-court proceedings. The terms "injured in his person or property" define the harm that the victim may suffer as a result of the conspiracy to intimidate or retaliate. Thus, the fact that employment at will is not "property"for 126 purposes of the Due Process Clause, see Bishop v. Wood, 426 U.S. 341, 345-347, 96 S.Ct. 2074, 48 L.Ed.2d 684 (1976), does not mean that loss of at-will employment may not "injur[e] [petitioner] in his person or property" for purposes of § 1985(2).

[4] We hold that the sort of harm alleged by petitioner here-essentially third-party interference with at-will employment relationships-states a claim for relief under § 1985(2). Such harm has long been a compensable injury under tort law, and we see no reason to ignore this tradition in this case. As Thomas Cooley recognized:

> "One who maliciously and without justifiable cause, induces an employer to discharge an employee, by means of false statements, threats or putting in fear, or perhaps by means of malevolent advice and persuasion, is liable in an action of tort to the employee for the damages thereby sustained. And it makes no difference whether the employment was for a fixed term not yet expired or is terminable at the will of the employer. " 2 Law of Torts 589-591 (3d ed.1906) (emphasis added).

This Court also recognized in Truax v. Raich, 239 U.S. 33, 36 S.Ct. 7, 60 L.Ed. 131 (1915):

> "The fact that the employment is at the will of the parties, respectively, does not make it one at the will of others. The employe has manifest interest in the freedom of the employer to exercise his judgment without illegal interference or compulsion and, by the weight of authority, the unjustified interference of third persons is actionable although the employment is at will." Id., at 38, 36 S.Ct. 7 (citing cases).

The kind of interference with at-will employment relations alleged here is merely a species of the traditional torts of intentional interference with contractual relations and intentional interference with prospective contractual relations. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 766, Comment127 g, pp. 10-11 (1977); see also id., § 766B, Comment c, at 22. This protection against third-party interference with at-will employment relations is still afforded by state law today. See W. Keeton, D. Dobbs, R. Keeton, & D. Owen, Prosser and Keaton on Law of Torts § 129, pp. 995-996, and n. 83 (5th ed.1984) (citing cases). For example, the State of Georgia, where the acts underlying the complaint in this case took place, provides a cause of action against third parties for wrongful interference with employment relations. See Georgia Power Co. v. Busbin, 242 Ga. 612, 613, 250 S.E.2d 442, 444 (1978) ("[E]ven though a person's employment contract is at will, he has a valuable contract right which may not be unlawfully interfered with by a third person"); see also Troy v. Interfinancial, Inc., 171 Ga.App. 763, 766-769, 320 S.E.2d 872, 877-879 (1984) (directed verdict inappropriate against defendant who procured plaintiff's termination for failure to lie at a deposition hearing).[FN4] Thus, to the extent that the terms "injured in his person or property" in § 1985 refer to principles of tort law, see 3 W. Blackstone, Commentaries on *493 the Laws of England 118 (1768) (describing the universe of common-law torts as "all private wrongs, or civil injuries, which may be offered to the rights of either a man's person or his property"), we find ample support for our holding that the harm occasioned by the conspiracy here may give rise to a claim for damages under § 1985(2).

> FN4. Petitioner did bring a claim for tortious interference with his employment relation against respondents in Georgia state court, but that claim was dismissed on summary judgment and the dismissal affirmed on appeal. The ultimate course of petitioner's state-law claim, however, has no bearing on whether he can state a claim for damages under § 1985(2) in federal court.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals is reversed, and the case is remanded for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

It is so ordered.

COMES NOW Plaintiff, Denise Newsome ("Plaintiff") and without waiving any claims and/or relief sought in her timely filed pleadings (i.e. Recusal pleading, Motions for Findings, etc.) presently before this Court and files this her Notice of Intent to Bring Legal Actions Against (1) the State of Kentucky; (2) County of Kenton, Kentucky; (3) Applicable Judge(s) exceeding without jurisdictional authority and/or abuse of powers; (4) and any/all Applicable Parties, in the applicable

[1] Boldface, Italics, Underline, etc. in this pleading has been added for emphasis. Plaintiff relied upon research and materials obtained from Westlaw, and other legal sources in preparation of this pleading.

Court of law pursuant to the United States Constitution, Kentucky Constitution, Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1985; 42 U.S.C. 1986; 42 U.S.C. 1988; and any/all applicable statutes/laws governing the claims and relief permissible to be sought. In support thereof, the Plaintiff states:

1. This instant pleading is submitted in good faith and is not provided for purposes of delay, hindering proceedings, obstructing the administration of justice, increasing the cost of litigation or depriving parties of protected rights governed under the Constitution, Civil Rights Act, and/or statutes/laws governing proceedings before this Court.

2. Due to the URGENT and present duress, oppression, hardships, etc. encountered, and presently suffered by the Plaintiff, she is submitting this instant pleading for filing in good faith and reserves the right to amend said pleading.

3. On October 9, 2008, one of Defendants attorney, Gailen W. Bridges, contacted the Plaintiff at her place of employment and advised her that she needed to return to her residence in that her belongings were being placed on the street. Plaintiff immediately left her place of employment to attend to this emergency. Defendants counsel, as well as those noticed through this instant pleading were aware and/or should have known that Defendants and their attorney(s) along with the assistance of court Judges would act in such criminal manner which violated the Constitutional and Civil Rights of the Plaintiff wherein the Plaintiff has been injured and/or harmed and property and possessions subject to theft. Moreover, the Defendants and their counsel engaged in unlawful entry, trespassing, unlawful invasion, burglary, theft, deprivation of protected rights, and many other unlawful actions in the carrying out of such deeds.

4. Gailen W. Bridges advised the Plaintiff that he and his clients were acting no behalf of an Order obtained by Judge Ruttle. Defendants, Bridges, Judge Ruttle and others knew and/or should have known that Judge Ruttle had no jurisdiction to grant any such order or unlawful removal and/or eviction of the Plaintiff's property, neither did she have the jurisdiction and/or power to execute such Order and the Defendants, Kenton County Sheriff's Department, Bridges or any other cohorts having no power to exercise and/or act upon any such Order they assert was rendered by Judge Rutte.

5. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on October 9, 2008, Plaintiff spoke with Officer Craig (sp?) of the Covington Police Department who refused to take a criminal report requested by the Plaintiff. Plaintiff notifying that she would seek additional information from his superior and again request that her report be taken. As a matter of law and her rights, Plaintiff believes she is entitled to file criminal report. It was brought to Plaintiff's attention by said Officer, that the Covington Police Department was contacted and Plaintiff was advised by Officer Craig that he was not to take her report. Plaintiff made known concerns of such conspiracy and Defendants counsel and others engaging in actions with the Covington Police Department to keep her from filing her Complaint.

6. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that Defendants, their counsel, Judge Ruttle, the Kenton County Sheriff's Department and their cohorts knew and or should have known that any such actions to execute and/or act upon any Order by Judge Ruttle and/or any Judge lacking jurisdiction was clearly criminally and civilly wrong and opened those participating in such wrongs liable for legal damages rendered the Plaintiff. There lies no immunity for any persons who engaged in such criminal acts committed against the Plaintiff:

KENTUCKY COURTS:

> Lynch v. Johnson, 420 F.2d 818 (C.A.6.Ky.,1970) - Defense of judicial immunity is a very broad one but it does not afford any protection to judge acting in clear absence of jurisdiction nor does it protect him in nonjudicial activities.
>
> Morgan v. Dudley, 57 Ky. 693 (Ky.,1858) - A judicial officer, acting within the jurisdiction conferred on him by law, is not liable for errors of judgment, unless the result of malice or corruption.
> Hollon v. Lilly, 38 S.W. 878 (Ky.,1897) - A judge acting within his jurisdiction, is not liable to a suit for damages, however illegal or erroneous his acts may be, in the absence of a malicious or corrupt motive.

Pepper v. Mayes, 81 Ky. 673 (Ky.,1884) - No person is liable in a civil action for what he has done as a judge while acting within the limits of his jurisdiction.

Sparks v. Character and Fitness Committee of Kentucky, 818 F.2d 541 (C.A.6.Ky.,1987) - Except for acts in "clear absence" of jurisdiction, judicial immunity is absolute.

Reed v. Taylor, 78 S.W. 892 (Ky.,1904) - While a judicial officer will be protected against suits for damages resulting from erroneous judgment, yet where he acts maliciously, or beyond his jurisdiction, his office is no protection.

Allsup v. Knox, 508 F.Supp. 57 (E.D.Ky.,1980) - A judge will not be deprived of immunity because action he took was in error, was done maliciously, or was in excess of his authority; rather, he will be subject to liability only when he has acted in a clear absence of all jurisdiction.

Revill v. Pettit, 60 Ky. 314 (Ky.,1861) - One holding a judicial office may be prosecuted in damages for any acts done by him in excess of his proper jurisdiction.

King v. Cawood, 3 S.W.2d 616 (Ky.,1928) - Judge acting illegally and without jurisdiction becomes trespasser and is liable.

OTHER COURTS:

Stump v. Sparkman, 98 S.Ct. 1099 (U.S.Ind.,1978) - Judge will not be deprived of immunity because action he took was in error, was done maliciously, or was in excess of his authority; rather, he will be subject to liability only when he has acted in clear absence of all jurisdiction.

7. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that Defendants, their Counsel, Judge Ruttle, the Kenton County Sheriff's Department and other willing participants and/or cohorts in the criminal and wrongs rendered the Plaintiff knew that Judge(s) were acting without jurisdiction to execute such Order. Plaintiff filed this instant lawsuit prior to any action Defendants may assert they filed in the District Court before Judge Ruttle. Therefore, jurisdiction was only invested in this instant lawsuit and the Kenton County District lawsuit was void and/or null. Defendants, their counsel, Judge Ruttle and others involved in this instant lawsuit and or the proceedings involving the Plaintiff in this State, knew and/or should have known that the Kenton County District Court lacked jurisdiction. However, failed to deter any such unlawful/illegal and criminal acts of said Judge(s), Defendants, their counsel, the Kenton County Sheriff's Department and any other willing participants and/or cohorts:

JURISDICTIONAL ISSUES

Exclusive Jurisdiction Vested in Another Court.

> 63C Am.Jur2d Prohibition ~43: Exclusive Jurisdiction Vested in Another Court - A court may be restrained by prohibition from interfering with the exclusive jurisdiction acquired by another court by reason of its being the first court to assume and exercise such jurisdiction in the particular case[2] if both cases are predicated on the same cause of action, between the same parties, and brought in courts of competent jurisdiction of the same state[3]. . . In jurisdictions in which this view prevails, the aggrieved party must raise the defense of former suit pending by an appropriate pleading in the second suit and by an appeal from the decision of the court in that suit, rather than a writ of prohibition.[4]

KENTUCKY LAW:

> Hawes v. Orr, 73 Ky. 431 (1874) - The court first acquiring jurisdiction has a right to go on until it has performed its office in reference to the subject-matter in litigation, and will not allow itself to be ousted of its jurisdiction or permit the thing in litigation to be wrested from it, so that it cannot execute its judgment.
>
> Akers v. Stephenson, 469 S.W.2d 704 (Ky.,1970) - Where parties and subject matter are the same, once court of concurrent jurisdiction has begun exercise of jurisdiction over case, its authority to deal with action is exclusive and no other court of concurrent jurisdiction may interfere with pending proceedings.
> Riddle v. Howard, 357 S.W.2d 705 (Ky.,1962) - When a court of competent jurisdiction acquires jurisdiction of subject matter of a case, its authority and control continue until final disposition, and, as a matter of principle and comity, another court of concurrent jurisdiction will recognize the prior jurisdiction and will not interfere by taking over the same case; but to apply such rule it is essential that the first action shall afford the parties in the second action an adequate and complete opportunity for the adjudication of their rights.

Delaney v. Alcorn, 193 S.W.2d 404 (Ky.,1946) - Where two actions between the same parties, on the same subject, and to test the same rights, are brought in different courts having concurrent jurisdiction, the court which first acquires jurisdiction, its power being adequate to the administration of complete justice, retains jurisdiction and may dispose of the whole controversy without interference by any court of coordinate power.

OTHER COURTS:

State ex rel. Phillips v. Polcar, 50 Ohio St.2d 279, 364 N.E.2d 33 (Ohio 1977) - (n. 3) As between courts of concurrent jurisdiction, tribunal whose power is first invoked by institution of proper proceedings acquires jurisdiction, to the exclusion of all other tribunals, to adjudicate upon whole issue and to settle rights of the parties.

Buck v. Colbath, 70 U.S. 334 (U.S.Minn.,1865) - The rule that, among courts of concurrent jurisdiction, that one which first obtains jurisdiction of a case has the exclusive right to decide every question arising in the case, is subject to some limitations, and is confined to suits between the same parties or privies seeking the same relief or remedy, and to such questions or propositions as arise ordinarily and properly in the progress of the suit first brought, and does not extend to all matters which may by possibility become involved in it.

8. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Plaintiff had a legal and binding Injunction and Restraining Order executed by this Court in the above action as well as an Order to pay her rent into escrow in which she did. Plaintiff was not delinquent in any such rental payments and was complying with the laws of the State of Kentucky as well as those under the Constitution (Kentucky and United States), Civil Rights Act and any and applicable laws governing said matters. Defendants Counsel being provided with a copy of Plaintiff's October rent payment. See EXHIBIT "I" attached hereto and incorporated by reference.

9. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN the Plaintiff believes the acts of Defendants, their Counsel, Judge(s) and other cohorts is driven by racial prejudices, conspiracies, discrimination, etc. – in which the evidence will show that those in the position to deter such actions and or condoned such acts were influenced by a white majority. Plaintiff is African-American.

10. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Plaintiff prior to the October 9, 2008, criminal acts of Defendants, their counsel, the Kenton County Sheriff's Department and any/all other will participants and/or cohorts failed to serve and notify the Plaintiff that any such actions were about to take place against her. Thus, deprive the Plaintiff of equal protection of the laws, due process of laws and rights secured/guaranteed under the Kentucky Constitution, United States Constitution and any all applicable laws governing said matters.

11. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that prior to the October 9, 2008, criminal actions rendered against the Plaintiff, she was not served with any papers or required to attend any court hearing regarding the criminal acts the Defendants, their counsel, Kenton County Sheriff's Department and any other cohorts that engaged in the CONSPIRACY to infringe upon the protected rights of Plaintiff.

12. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that as a direct and proximate result of the October 9, 2008, Plaintiff has sustained additional injury/harm.

13. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Plaintiff has been heavily prejudiced in this lawsuit and deprived of rights secured and/or guaranteed under the Constitution (Kentucky and United States), Civil Rights Act and other statutes/laws governing said matters which warrants the United States Legislature/Congress' intervention in that this Court is either ignorant and/or attempting to play ignorant in its understanding of the statutes/laws governing the Plaintiff's rights and legal actions.

14. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Plaintiff is in receipt of this Court's Order executed on October 1, 2008, in the above referenced matter; however, Plaintiff will not waive any such rights secured to her under the United States Constitution, Kentucky Constitution, Civil Rights Act and/or the applicable statutes/laws in responding to said Order in that the laws are clear that she is not required to do so since this Court clearly lacks jurisdiction in that the Plaintiff has filed a Complaint with the United States Legislature/Congress seeking its intervention as guaranteed to her under the Constitution.

15. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN through this instant pleading that this shall serve as additional and sufficient notice that those noticed herein are those in the position having power to prevent or aid in preventing the wrongs complained of in this instant lawsuit as well as their knowledge (or should have known) of conspiracy to deprive the Plaintiff rights secured to her under the Constitution (Kentucky and U.S.), Civil Rights Act and other governing statututes/laws; however, neglected or refused to prevent or aid in the preventing of such wrongs pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1986, which states in part:

> Every person who, having knowledge that any of the wrongs conspired to be done, and mentioned in section 1985 of this title, are about to be committed, and having power to prevent or aid in preventing the commission of the same, neglects or refuses so to do, if such wrongful act be committed, shall be liable to the party injured, or his legal representatives, for all damages caused by such wrongful act, which such person by reasonable diligence could have prevented; and such damages may be recovered in an action on the case; and any number of persons guilty of such wrongful neglect or refusal may be joined as defendants in the action; . . .

16. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN through this instant pleading that the record evidence in this instant lawsuit supports a conspiracy by parties to deprive the Plaintiff of her Constitutional rights, Civil Rights as well as rights secured to her under the statutes/laws governing this instant lawsuit. Therefore being in violation of Plaintiff's Constitutional (Kentucky and U.S.) as well as 42 U.S.C. § 1985 (Conspiracy to Interfere With Civil Rights) which states in part:

> (2) Obstructing justice; intimidating party, witness, or juror
> . . . or if two or more persons conspire for the purpose of impeding, hindering, obstructing, or defeating, in any manner, the due course of justice in any State or Territory, with intent to deny to any citizen the equal protection of the laws, or to injure him or his property for lawfully enforcing, or attempting to enforce, the right of any person, or class of persons, to the equal protection of the laws;

> (3) Depriving persons of rights or privileges
> If two or more persons in any State or Territory conspire . . . for the purpose of depriving, either directly or indirectly, any person or class of persons of the equal protection of the laws, or of equal privileges and immunities under the laws; or for the purpose of preventing or hindering the constituted authorities of any State or Territory from giving or securing to all persons within such State or Territory the equal protection of the laws; . . in any case of conspiracy set forth in this section, if one or more persons engaged therein do, or cause to be done, any act in furtherance of the object of such conspiracy, whereby another is injured in his person or property, or deprived of having and exercising any right or privilege of a citizen of the United States, the party so injured or deprived may have an action for the recovery of damages occasioned by such injury or deprivation, against any one or more of the conspirators.

17. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN through this instant pleading that the above referenced persons noticed have been timely, properly and adequately placed on notice that the Plaintiff will seek file the applicable lawsuit in vindication of her rights being violated pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1988 (Proceedings in Vindication of Civil Rights) which states in part:

> (a) Applicability of statutory and common law
> The jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters conferred on the district courts by the provisions of titles 13, 24, and 70 of the Revised Statutes for the protection of all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and for their vindication, shall be exercised and enforced in conformity with the laws of the United States, so far as such laws are suitable to carry the same into effect; but in all cases where they are not adapted to the object, or are deficient in the provisions necessary to furnish suitable remedies and punish offenses against law, the common law, as modified and changed by the constitution and statutes of the State wherein the court having jurisdiction of such civil or criminal cause is held, so far as the same is not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, shall be extended to and govern the said courts in the trial and disposition of the cause, and, if it is of a criminal nature, in the infliction of punishment on the party found guilty.

18. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the record evidence in this instant lawsuit will support that this Court has been placed on notice that the Plaintiff has filed an Official Complaint with the United States Legislature/Congress; therefore, this Court lacks any jurisdiction to continue to act until the U.S. Legislature/Congress has rendered its findings and/or conclusions:

> Clark v. Board of Ed. of Shelbyville, Ky., 350 F.Supp. 149 (E.D.Ky.,1972) - Courts may not invade the domain of the legislature; where a plaintiff is asking for legislative relief or relief which would encroach on the legislative process the courts are without power to act.
>
> Avey Drilling Mach. Co. v. Lukowsky, 261 S.W.2d 432 (Ky.,1953) - Court has no constitutional authority to sit in judgment on proposed legislation, when legislative body is proceeding within scope of its governmental or corporate power, as no justiciable question arises until after enactment or passage of such ordinance or resolution.
>
> State of Ohio ex rel. Erkenbrecher v. Cox, 257 F. 334 (S.D.Ohio.W.Div.,1919) - The judicial department of the government cannot interfere with the proceedings of either the executive department or the legislative department with respect to matters committed by the Constitution to their charge.
>
> Berry v. American Express Pub., Corp., 381 F.Supp. 2d 1118 (2005) – Where source of legal authority is statutory and not constitutional, Congress retains ability to create and direct law, so long as it is consistent with constitutional principles, and it is particularly important for court to follow that directive.
>
> Nixon v. Administrator of General Services, 408 F.Supp. 321 (1976) – Congressional power to investigate, although limited to areas in which Congress possesses legislative authority, is both broad and integral to the legislative process.
>
> McGrain v. Daugherty, 47 S.Ct. 319 (U.S. Ohio 1927) – Congress may inquire into private affairs and compel disclosures only in so far as to make express powers effective.
>
> Marcello v. U.S., 196 F.2d 437 (1952) – A congressional inquiry may be as broad as the legislative purpose requires.
> Taylor v. Com. Ex rel. Dummit, 202 S.W.2d 992 (Ky. 1947) – The Legislature may enact any statute it deems necessary for the public interest, unless prohibited by constitutional provisions and in exercise of that authority may frame its enactments and express its intention and purpose as it sees proper.

19. Judge Gregory M. Bartlett in his October 1, 2008 Order clearly states, "On August 18, 2008, the Plaintiff filed a written Response to the Motion to Dismiss. In that Response, she objected to the hearing and stated that she had filed an official complaint with the United States Congress. Moreover, the Plaintiff stated in her Response that she would not be attending the Motion Docket on August 18, 2008."

Clearly the actions of Judge Bartlett is unconstitutional and clearly infringes upon the Plaintiff's Constitutional and Civil Rights. Moreover, encroaches on the legislative powers of the United States Legislature/Congress which is clearly prohibited under the laws of Kentucky and/or applicable statutes/laws governing said matters:

> Manning v. Sims, 213 S.W.2d 577 (Ky.,1948) - The sharp separation of powers of government must be preserved carefully by the courts, and judicial powers must not be permitted to encroach upon legislative powers. Const. § 27.
> Sidell v. Hill, 357 S.W.2d 318 (Ky.,1962) - Judicial encroachment upon other branches of government is unconstitutional.
> Sullivan v. Brawner, 36 S.W.2d 364 (Ky.,1931) - Court may not assume legislative function.

Neither does Judge Bartlett has the jurisdictional powers to overstep, oversee or continue to move this case forward because he is not happy and/or patient to await the rulings/findings of the United States Legislature/Congress in his efforts to help his friend and colleague who represent the Defendants in this instant lawsuit. His actions to clearly ignore and deprive the Plaintiff rights secured under the Constitution and Civil Rights Act is clearly prohibited by statutes/laws. Judge Bartlett lacks the power to control and usurp authority over the United States Legislature/Congress' handling of this matter because he is not satisfied with the pace at which it is going. He is clearly out of line and clearly in violation of judicial powers afforded him under the Constitution of the State of Kentucky as well as the United States Constitution.

> Smith v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 104 S.W.2d 961 (Ky.,1937) - Courts cannot compel or control exercise of legislative functions within constitutional limits.

> Doe v. McMillan, 93 S.Ct. 2018 (U.S.D.C.,1973) - A court has no authority to oversee judgment of a congressional committee in regard to what matter to include in reports prepared within the legislative sphere or to impose liability on its members if the court disagrees with their legislative judgment. U.S.C.A.Const. art. 1, § 6, cl. 1.
> Conrad v. Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government, 659 S.W.2d 190 (Ky.,1983) - Legislative action of any governing body is subject to very limited judicial review.

20. Judge Bartlett's haste may also be contributed to his knowledge that the United States Legislature/Congress will not knowingly permit the unconstitutional and civil rights violations rendered the Plaintiff:

> Raney v. Stovall, 361 S.W.2d 518 (Ky.,1962) - That legislature may make wrong decision is no reason for invasion by judiciary of exclusive domain of legislature; and court must assume that Senate will not knowingly permit violations of constitutional provisions.
> Rivers v. Roadway Exp., Inc., 114 S.Ct. 1510 (U.S. Ohio 1994) – Congress has the power to amend the statute it believes the Supreme Court has misconstrued and may, within broad constitutional bounds, make that change retroactive and thereby under perceived undesirable past consequences of misinterpretation of its work product, but such change must be implemented through legislation to have force of law.

Thus, any actions by Judge Bartlett to usurp authority and speed the process along and take control of this lawsuit by continuing to enter sham/frivolous Orders in which he is aware he lacks jurisdiction and in further efforts of depriving the Plaintiff justice as well as the applicable investigations in which she seeks is clearly erroneous, unconstitutional and in violation of Plaintiff's Constitutional and Civil Rights guaranteed her.

> Smith v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 104 S.W.2d 961 (Ky.,1937) - Courts cannot compel or control exercise of legislative functions within constitutional limits.

21. Neither this Court nor the Defendants in this instant lawsuit has been prejudiced by the Plaintiff's pursuit of justice and exercise of her rights under the Constitution to have the United States Legislature/Congress intervene in this lawsuit and neither does Judge Bartlett or the Defendants to this lawsuit has asserted and/or provided any facts, evidence or legal conclusions to sustain that they would be prejudice by the United States Legislature/Congress' intervention in this matter. Moreover, neither Judge Bartlett or the Defendants in this instant lawsuit contest the fact that Plaintiff is entitled to seek the relief she has sought with the United States Legislature/Congress.

> Manning v. Sims, 213 S.W.2d 577 (Ky.,1948) - The sharp separation of powers of government must be preserved carefully by the courts, and judicial powers must not be permitted to encroach upon legislative powers. Const. § 27.
> Dalton v. State Property and Buildings Commission, 304 S.W.2d 342 (Ky.,1957) - State constitution is not a grant of power but is a limitation on legislative power, and such department of government possesses and may exercise within constitutional limits all legislative powers as it sees fit and may enact any law not expressly or impliedly prohibited by the state or federal constitutions.

22. This Court has exceeded its jurisdiction, is acting without jurisdiction over this matter and may not assume the legislative function in this matter over the United States Legislature/Congress:

> Sullivan v. Brawner, 36 S.W.2d 364 (Ky.,1931) - Court may not assume legislative function.
> Raney v. Stovall, 361 S.W.2d 518 (Ky.,1962) - That legislature may make wrong decision is no reason for invasion by judiciary of exclusive domain of legislature; and court must assume that Senate will not knowingly permit violations of constitutional provisions.

23. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the proper pleading requesting the recusal of Judge Bartlett is presently pending before this Court; moreover, the Kentucky Court of Appeal issued the proper ruling to support that a ruling by this Court on Plaintiff's pending motions is warranted. Timely appeals were brought and the applicable pleadings filed; to no avail. Therefore, due to Judge Bartlett's ignorance and/or defiance of the laws, the Plaintiff has moved the United States Legislature/Congress for intervention as afforded to her under the Constitution and/or governing statutes/laws. Plaintiff need not reargue the Kentucky Court of Appeals' ruling because any intelligent person and/or lawmaking/legislative body will be able to conclude that she is entitled to the findings/facts/evidence/conclusions sought through her pending motions. Moreover, that Plaintiff is not required to waive any protected rights she has entertain the "kangaroo" hearings Defendants, Defendants' counsel and Judge Bartlett has attempted to get her to appear before in efforts of getting her to waive rights secured/guaranteed under the Kentucky Constitution as well as the United States Constitution and Civil Rights Act.

> Dean v. Bondurant, 2005-SC-000872-D , SUPREME COURT OF KENTUCKY, 193 S.W.3d 744; 2006 Ky. LEXIS 163, June 7, 2006 - An attorney's contribution to a judge's campaign was not alone a basis for judicial recusal, but state supreme court justice recused himself; he received numerous contributions from attorneys in firm that was a party, contributions in aggregate were not minimal, and his impartiality could be reasonably questioned under Ky. Sup. Ct. R. 3.130, 4.300.

24. Neither this Court nor the Defendants to this action would be prejudice by the United States Legislature/Congress' intervention and initiating an investigation to determine whether or not Plaintiff's Constitutional and Civil Rights have been violated; moreover, whether there have been criminal and civil wrongs rendered the Plaintiff in the handling of matters before this Court which infringes upon the protected rights of Plaintiff.

25. With no disrespect to this Court, a reasonable mind may conclude from Judge Bartlett's actions that he is using the judicial process to enhance is personal ego, insecurities and inadequacies and suffers from the "god complex" that so many judges fall victim to in placing themselves above the laws of this State of Kentucky and the United States.

26. This actions of this instant Court and/or Judge Bartlett is an embarrassment and a disgrace to the legal/judicial profession and clearly such unconstitutional actions by said Court does not only impact the Plaintiff, but the public at large because such uncensored actions by Judge

Bartlett clearly sends the message that he can infringe upon and/or make a mockery of the Constitution and Civil Rights that the public relies upon.

> In Hargis v. Parker, Ky., 85 S.W. 704 (1905), a case decided only fourteen years after the adoption of Section 110 of the 1891 Constitution, our predecessor court wrote:
> If it be true that the . . . court is proceeding without jurisdiction*, it is not substantial justice that it should be allowed. . . as it might do at its discretion, subject the parties* to enormous expense in defending the case, even if it went no further than a trial of the question of jurisdiction, and say to them, "Your remedy is solely by appeal if you have been wronged." We think [Section 110] of the Constitution, though it be deemed only declaratory of the common law on the subject, confers the power and jurisdiction on this court to intervene by the writ of prohibition to stay the inferior courts of the state from proceeding out of their jurisdiction. It may issue whether or not there is an appeal.

27. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that Judge Bartlett continues to commit both civil and criminal wrongs in the handling of the above referenced matter (i.e. a) acting beyond jurisdiction; b) abuse of authority/power; and c) his conduct is actuated by malice, corrupt, illegal, unethical motives, etc.). Therefore, any such defense that would frivolously assert under "immunity" is null and/or void. The record evidence in this instant action will sustain the actions of Judge Bartlett has opened this Court, the State of Kentucky, County of Kenton and others to liability.

> Bryant v. Crossland, 182 Ky. 556, 1918 Ky. LEXIS 403 - HN3 - . . . This principle, however, does not extend to make a judicial officer immune from damages for illegal acts, which result in injuries to others or deprive them of their legal rights, when his acts are without the scope and limits of his jurisdiction. It follows that if his illegal acts are without the scope and limits of his jurisdiction, he is liable, if damages result to others from such acts, whether he is actuated by malice, corrupt and impure motives or not. In the last state of case, the fact that his motives are impure and bad are considered, only, as aggravating the damages. When the judge acts illegally, without the limits of his jurisdiction, he becomes a trespasser, and is liable in damages as such. Also see, Cox v. Perkins, 299 Ky. 470, 1945 Ky. LEXIS 449 at HN4; King v. Cawood, 223 Ky. 291, 1928 Ky. LEXIS 317 at HN1.

Liability of Judges:

Pepper v. Mayes, 81 Ky. 673, 1884 Ky. LEXIS 29 – HN 2: Where a judicial officer has jurisdiction of the person and of the subject-matter he is exempt from suit by a private individuals for damages so long as he acts within his jurisdiction and in a judicial capacity. HN3 - Whenever the State of Kentucky confers judicial powers upon an individual, it confers them with full immunity from private suits. In effect, the State says to the officer that these duties are confided to his judgment; that he is to exercise his judgment fully, freely, and without favor, and he may exercise it without fear; that the duties concern individuals, but they concern more especially the welfare of the State and the peace and happiness of society; that if he shall fail in a faithful discharge of them he shall be called to account as a criminal. . . Also see McBurnie v. Sullivan, 152 Ky. 686, 1913 Ky. LEXIS 698 at HN4.

McBurnie v. Sullivan, 152 Ky. 686, 1913 Ky. LEXIS 698 at HN5: There are two distinct classes of cases to which the principle of judicial protection does not apply: First, where a person having special or limited judicial authority does any act beyond the scope of his authority. Second, where, although acting within the limits of his jurisdiction, he is actuated by malice or corrupt motives. The rule not only applies to the highest judge in the state or nation, but it also applies to the lowest officer who sits as a court and tries petty causes, and it applies not in respect to their judgments merely, but to all processes awarded by them for carrying their judgments into effect.

Ayars v. Cox, 73 Ky. 201, 1874 Ky. LEXIS 30 -HN4 - . . .There are two distinct classes of cases to which that principle of judicial protection does not apply: first, where a person having a special or limited judicial authority does any act beyond the scope of his authority; and secondly, where, although acting within the limits of his jurisdiction, he is actuated by malicious or corrupt motives. In either case the judge or magistrate renders himself liable as a trespasser to the party injured. Also see, Revill v. Pettit, 60 Ky. 314, 1860 Ky. LEXIS 82 at HN6.

Henry v. Commonwealth, 126 Ky. 357, 1907 Ky. LEXIS 52 - HN9 - A judicial officer, from the highest to the lowest grade, . . .an officer exercising . . . power is not punishable for any honest mistake of judgment in the exercise of that power, but only for an abuse of his power in proceeding from a corrupt or other improper motive.

> Stephens v. Wilson, 115 Ky. 27, 1903 Ky. LEXIS 67 - HN5 - If an officer executes a warrant of arrest, invalid on its face, he is liable in damages for false imprisonment. Where, therefore, it appears on the face of the process that the magistrate issuing it has not jurisdiction of the person of the plaintiff or the subject-matter of the suit, the officer executing it is a trespasser, and is liable in action for damage for false imprisonment. It has been said, indeed, that an officer is bound, or will be presumed, to know the jurisdiction of the court, whose officer he is, and that, if he acts in obedience to a precept which the court has no jurisdiction to issue, he will not be protected in false imprisonment. HN6 - Where an inferior court has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter, or, having it, has not jurisdiction of the person of the defendant, all its proceedings are absolutely void. Neither the members of the court nor the plaintiff (if he procured or assented to the proceedings) can derive any protection from them, when prosecuted by a party aggrieved thereby. If a mere ministerial officer executes any process, upon the face of which it appears that the court which issued it had not jurisdiction of the subject-matter, or of the person against whom it is directed, such process will afford him no protection for acts done under it.

28. The record evidence will sustain that neither the October 1, 2008 Order of this Court nor the Defendants Motion(s)/Pleadings filed in this instant lawsuit can be sustain by evidence, facts or legal conclusions to support the relief sought and/or granted. The record is silence as to the evidence, facts and legal conclusions relied upon by this Court and Defendants. Moreover, clearly fails to rebut the evidence, facts and legal conclusions presented by the Plaintiff. The record evidence will support and sustain that the Plaintiff timely, properly and adequately filed objections to Defendants' Motion to Amend Answer and to Compel her Deposition. See EXHIBIT "II" – Plaintiff's Response/Objection to Defendants' Motion to Amend Answer and to Compel Plaintiff's Deposition - attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

29. The record evidence will sustain that Plaintiff timely, properly and adequately presented rebuttal pleadings to those of Defendants in which she sought to preserve her rights secured under the Constitution (Kentucky and United States) and the Civil Rights Act. Moreover, said rebuttal pleadings provided sufficient arguments and issues to sustain her argument and/or defense to the Defendants' pleadings and/or this Court's rulings and/or handling of this matter. For instance see EXHIBIT "III" – Plaintiff's Response to Defendants' Amended Notice of Motion for Dismissal for Failure to Comply With Order of Court ("PRDANOMFD")– attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. Said pleading which clearly provided rulings form the Supreme Court of Kentucky clearly showing that "FINAL JUDGMENT" (at Exhibit A of PRDANOMFD) by this Court is required; as well as the Kentucky Court of Appeals acknowledging that "Neither order finally adjudicated any rights of the parties and we are of the opinion that it is immaterial that the order would also address appellant's motion for findings pursuant to CR 52. . . ." (at Exhibit B of PRDANOMFD). On June 5, 2007, Plaintiff took the time to file a timely Request for Entry of Final Judgment With Findings of the Court (see at Exhibit C of PRDANOMFD). To no avail. To date – WELL OVER A YEAR and Judge Bartlett has done nothing but allow the Defendants and their counsel, in whom he is good friends and a former colleague of his, continue to file pleadings in violation of Rule 11 and the Code of Professional Conduct, etc. governing attorneys for the purposes of subjecting the Plaintiff to harassment, annoyance, oppression, delay, hindering proceedings, obstructing the administration of justice, deprivation of Civil and Constitutional Rights, needless increase in the costs of litigation, etc.

30. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the record evidence will support that the Plaintiff filed a timely, proper and adequate pleading, notifying this Court of her right to a jury trial on the issues. However, this Court has deprive the Plaintiff of this Constitutional Right as well. A right secured under the Kentucky Constitution as well as the United States Constitution.

31. A reasonable mind given the facts, evidence and legal conclusions provided herein as well as in Plaintiff's pleadings filed in this instant lawsuit, may conclude that she would suffer irreparable injury/harm had she not sought the intervention of the United States Legislature/Congress. Moreover, the Plaintiff believes that an investigation into this matter will yield criminal and civil violations on behalf of all of the Defendants, their counsel and others (such as Judge Bartlett) to support conspiracy leveled against the Plaintiff to deprive her rights secured under the Constitution as well as the Civil Rights Act.

> Hodge v. Coleman, 244 S.W.3d 102 (Ky. 2008) – (n. 7) – A court may grant a writ of mandamus without showing of irreparable harm, provided a substantial miscarriage of justice will result if the lower court is proceeding erroneously, and correction of the error is necessary and appropriate in the interest of orderly judicial administration; it may be observed that in such a situation the court is recognizing that if it fails to act the administration of justice generally will suffer the great and irreparable injury.

32. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Plaintiff is protected under the statutes/laws governing deposition/discovery when the evidence, facts and legal conclusions presented sustains that such demand made by party seeking deposition is made in bad faith, malicious, oppressive, etc. Plaintiff had a duty to protect her well being and not subject herself to addition malicious activities and/or criminal and civil wrongs the Defendants had initiated against her, and thus has acted in her best interest sought to protect herself from any additional injury/harm the Defendants and their counsel were seeking:

> Pendleton Bros. Vending, Inc. v. Commonwealth Finance & Admin. C..., 758 S.W.2d 24 -HN 6: The deposition discovery rules are to be accorded broad and liberal treatment. The limitations on fishing expeditions relate only to discovery being conducted in bad faith or in such a manner to needlessly annoy, embarrass, or oppress the person subject to the inquiry. The limitations are those defined by relevancy, privilege, and similar legal considerations, and not by any requirement that a party must be prepared to prove his case at the time when he files suit. The limitations on filing suit are those imposed upon an attorney by Fed. R. Civ. P. 11 which requires a belief formed after reasonable inquiry that the pleading is well-grounded in fact and is warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification or reversal of existing law. A summary judgment is only proper after a party has been given ample opportunity to complete discovery, and then fails to offer controverting evidence.

> Volvo Car Corp. v. Hopkins, 860 S.W.2d 777, 1993 Ky. LEXIS 109 - HN3 - A protective order against discovery is appropriate only upon proof that it is being conducted in bad faith or in such manner to annoy, embarrass, or oppress the person subject to the inquiry.

Leasor v. Redmon, 734 S.W.2d 462, 1987 Ky. LEXIS 228 - HN2 - The duty of a lawyer, both to his client and to the legal system, is to represent his client zealously within the bounds of the law, which includes disciplinary rules and enforceable professional regulations. The advocate may urge any permissible construction of the law favorable to his client, without regard to his professional opinion as to the likelihood that the construction will ultimately prevail. His conduct is within the bounds of the law, and therefore permissible, if the position taken is supported by the law or is supportable by a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of the law. However, a lawyer is not justified in asserting a position in litigation that is frivolous.

33. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that she will seek at least:

a) $15,000.00 per day for the time she is deprived her residence (and/or an amount permissible by statutes laws) in damages of and against Judge Ruttle, Judge Bartlett and/or Judges/Justices aware of the criminal and civil wrongs being rendered Plaintiff for each day she is denied access to her residence located at 128 East 5th Street – Apartment 5, Covington, Kentucky 41011, in that she has a right as a matter of laws/statutes and the Constitution (Kentucky and United States) and the Civil Rights Act to reside there and/or a place of her choice free of unlawful/illegal, discriminatory, criminal, etc. actions as that taken against her;

b) $20,000.00 per day for the time she is deprived her residence (and/or an amount permissible by statutes laws) in damages of and against the City of Covington, County of Kenton and/or the State of Kentucky and/or its representatives aware of the criminal and civil wrongs being rendered Plaintiff for each day she is denied access to her residence located at 128 East 5th Street – Apartment 5, Covington, Kentucky 41011, in that she has a right as a matter of laws/statutes and the Constitution (Kentucky and United States) and the Civil Rights Act to reside there and/or a place of her choice free of unlawful/illegal, discriminatory, criminal, etc. actions as that taken against her;

c) $50,000.00 per day for the time she is deprived her residence (and/or an amount permissible by statutes laws) in damages of and against the Defendants, their counsel and/or their representatives aware of the criminal and civil wrongs being rendered Plaintiff for each day she is denied access to her residence located at 128 East 5th Street – Apartment 5, Covington, Kentucky 41011, in that she has a right as a matter of laws/statutes and the Constitution (Kentucky and United States) and the Civil Rights Act to reside there and/or a place of her choice free of unlawful/illegal, discriminatory, criminal, etc. actions as that taken against her;

d) Plaintiff will be seeking punitive damages in excess of $1,000,000.00; injunctive relief, return of her residence and the rights secured under the Fair Housing Act (to live where she chooses and not be threatened, harassed, coerced, unlawfully removed/evicted) and/or other governing laws, equitable relief and any/all other relief permissible by laws. Said relief will be sought of and against persons/parties liable for the criminal and civil wrongs complained of herein. The statutes/laws are clear that the statute of limitation begins to run upon the commission of each overt act.

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, the Plaintiff will seek any and all applicable relief (monetary against the applicable parties which the laws allow) as well as nonmonetary (injunctive relief, etc.) to correct the wrongs and injustices rendered her.

Respectfully submitted this 10th day of October, 2008.

URGENT – URGENT – URGENT RESPONSE REQUESTED

Congressman Davis:

In follow up to my telephone conversation with Ryan (sp?) in your office, the following is pertinent information I believe you need to know regarding what is taking place under your watch:

1. There is a legal and binding Injunction and Restraining Order pending in the Civil Action I filed against the Landlords, their representatives, etc. pending in the Kenton County Circuit Court; Civil Action No. 06-CI-03270. This is for my residence located at :

   128 East 5th Street – Apartment 5
   Covington, Kentucky 41011

2. There is a legal and binding Order instructing me to pay monies into escrow which I have been doing and will continue to do in that this matter is still pending as a matter of law. The October Rent was received and Receipt issued to support payment. I will be paying the November 2008 rent into escrow. While I may not be there, as a matter of law, I am entitled to the residence that was unlawfully/illegally seized. Therefore, in keeping with this Order, I will be paying the November 2008 rent into escrow until my civil lawsuit is resolved.

3. A CRIMINAL COMPLAINT has been filed with the FBI Louisville, Kentucky Office. Copy is attached for your record. (Document No. 1).

4. Judge Ruttle lacked jurisdiction to execute the Eviction Notice: Warrant for Possession used to commit the criminal/civil wrongs rendered me on October 9, 2008. Said Warrant for Possession is NULL and VOID and as a matter of law, cannot be enforced and/or acted upon. Those committing the crime was fully aware of this; however, elected to break the laws anyhow. There was no prior Notice to me notifying of the intent take my apartment prior to the October 9, 2008, invasion, etc. (in violation of my Constitutional Rights, Civil Rights, Fair Housing Act, etc.) I was contacted at me place of employment after the crime had been committed. IMPORTANT TO NOTE: Look at the copy of the Warrant for Possession attached. I obtained a copy from the Sheriff's Department and clearly on the back of the document filed with the Sheriff's Office, the Deputy notes his knowledge of the pending Injunction & Restraining Order in place. (Document No. 2).

5. Kentucky was listed as No. 3 as one of the most corrupt states as it relates to public officials. One can see after the October 9, 2008 incident, why it ranked so high on this list. (Document No. 3 attached).

6. That one of the Landlords' attorney, James West, worked with Judge Bartlett before Bartlett took the bench. Bartlett is the Judge assigned my civil lawsuit. The proper pleadings have been filed seeking his recusal; however, he continues to sit as well as ignore instructions by the Kentucky Court of Appeals which requires him to enter final judgment on pleadings pending before him – pleadings requiring him to produce findings based on facts, evidence and legal conclusions relied upon, as requested through timely pleadings demanding such. To date pleadings are still pending.

7. Due to the Constitutional and Civil Rights violations, a formal Complaint was submitted to the United States Legislature/United States Congress in July 2008, with the original going to Senator Leahy (as Chair of the Judiciary Committee in the Senate), Congressman John Conyers (as Chair of the Judiciary of the House) and others. From my conversation today, this matter is still pending. I sought to bring the action to the United States Legislature/Congress upon my conversation with an attorney with one of the top civil rights organizations in this country in that there were concerns of conspiracies and repeat infringement upon my rights. CLEARLY THE STATE COURTS ARE WITHOUT JURISDICTION TO ACT NOW THAT THE U.S. LEGISLATURE/CONGRESS HAS BEEN REQUESTED TO INTERVENE. No, those crooks thought they were running things, however, to their disappointment, as a party to the action, I had the right to seek intervention and clearly took the ball out of their court WAY/PRIOR to the October 9, 2008 criminal acts.

8. I have contacted the NAACP and others and requesting exposure of the criminal actions rendered me and knowledge of public officials engaging in such criminal actions. I am pushing to bring public exposure to these practices in that I believe they have gone on way too long against African-Americans and/or people of color while those in positions to stop such criminal/civil wrongs do nothing.

9. I cannot see that much of a difference to what O.J. Simpson did and the incident on October 9, 2008, when my residence was unlawfully, illegally seized by force (I'm sure guns/weapons were brought). Who knows what might have happened to my life had I been home. It is obvious they meant to do bodily injury/harm. Definitely a HATE CRIME. Moreover, they knew they had no legal authority to seize my property or residence. Not only that, my property was stolen and then dumped on the street – thieves leaving some of the items they could not get away with. I am CONFIDENT an investigation will find that the methods in which they went about unlawfully/illegally seizing my residence (failing to notify, failing to follow legal requirements/procedures), they knew that they were committing criminal acts. No their just going to come in and take what they want and think that there wouldn't be any legal ramifications – Clear violations under the Fair Housing Act, Constitution, Civil Rights and other governing statutes/laws. From my understanding and feedback received, Mr. Bridges (one of the attorneys for Landlords) has been committing such criminal/civil wrongs for quite a long time. Now his criminal acts has run its course and prison is where he and those who engaged in criminal acts belong.

10. Property/Possessions that could be salvaged has been stored pending the criminal charges I have filed as well as civil lawsuit I am looking to file against the perpetrators of such criminal/civil wrongs. I will be seeking the entire amount of monies that is supposed to be in escrow that Judge Ruttle appears to have ordered be given to the Landlords. Again an Order which is NULL/VOID in that Judge Ruttle had no jurisdiction and/or authority to do so. Any taking and issuing of monies in escrow based on an Order entered by her would be in furtherance of the criminal acts she has engaged in; moreover, acts to willfully, maliciously, etc. commit fraud upon the Court through such deceptive practices – obstruction of justice, conspiracy, etc.

I am demanding justice, arrests of the criminals (Landlords, their attorneys, judges, etc.) involved, the return of my residence IMMEDIATELY – I will work with the NAACP and others who are sharing an interest in getting my keys and my safety. However, I have filed timely and legal charges for this crime and DEMAND IMMEDIATE prosecution thereof. The criminals need to be arrested and given their day in court; however, they should not be allowed to continue to walk the street believing and/or thinking they are above the law.

Should you have any questions, I can be reached at (513) 680-2922 as well as the above mailing address.

Sincerely,

Denise Hensome

RE: GOOD FAITH REQUEST – For The Withdrawal of Complaint Your Clients' Complaint Filed in the District Court of Kenton County, Kentucky: MARTIN, GARY ET AL VS NEWSOME, DENISE ET AL; Case No. 06-C-05059

DATE: December 6, 2006

Dear Mr. Bridges:

I am in receipt of the Complaint (Case No. 06-C-5059) you have filed in the District Court of Kenton County, Kentucky on behalf of your clients, Gary & Bernice Martin and Dennis & Betty Donnellan d/b/a GMM Properties.

At this time, I am in good faith requesting that you file the applicable Motion to Withdraw the Complaint you have filed on behalf of your clients before 2:00 p.m. on Thursday, December 7, 2006. If you have not done so by this time (I will call the District Court to determine whether or not this has been done), I will move the District Court through my Motion to Dismiss to do so.

At the time of your filing your clients' Complaint, there was an action already pending in the Circuit Court of Kenton County, Kentucky (Case No. 06-CI-03270) in which a Notice-Motion for Order to Deposit Money and the supporting applicable Memorandum of Points and Authorities was also filed, which address the issue regarding any rent money your clients may assert is owed them. The relief sought in my Complaint exceeds the jurisdictional limits of the District Court of Kenton County, Kentucky – as you and your clients very well know in that you and your clients were in receipt and/or should have been in receipt of the Complaint that I submitted to the attention of Gary Martin. Moreover, you and your clients were put on notice of my moving forward in filing a Complaint against them.

Therefore, even to file a counter-complaint (which I should not be required to waste the time in doing since my Complaint was filed before your clients' – however, will do so if you refuse to withdraw your clients' Complaint), the District Court would have to dismiss your clients' action because the relief sought through my Complaint in Circuit Court exceeds the jurisdictional limits of the District Court. Through my Motion to Dismiss, if required to file, the Court will require that a consolidation with the Circuit Court be granted (if permissible). By now your client(s) should be in receipt of the Complaint, Notice-Motion for Order to Deposit Money and the Memorandum of Points and Authorities that I filed on Monday, December 4, 2006, at approximately 3:41 p.m. As your clients and you are probably aware by now, that the issue regarding rent payment (nonpayment of rent), is pending before the Circuit Court. Again, further supporting the need for you to withdraw your clients' Complaint.

Please file the applicable pleading to withdraw your clients' Complaint immediately. Otherwise, I will notify the District Court of my pending Complaint in Civil Court that was pending before the filing of your clients' Complaint. Please keep in mind that your clients will have 20 days to answer the Complaint I have filed. Moreover, NOTIFICATION has been served with the Summons to aid them in how their responsive pleading to the Complaint is to be prepared unless they waive such right. If I believe the responsive pleadings are frivolous and presented to hinder, obstruct and delay justice in this matter, I will seek/move for sanctions against both you and your clients. Your clients are also required to file a responsive pleading to my Motion for Order to Deposit Money unless they elect to waive such right.

I will check with the District Court on tomorrow about 2:00 p.m. to determine whether you have filed the applicable pleading to withdraw your clients' Complaint. If not, I will file the applicable Motion to Dismiss on Friday, December 8, 2006, or Monday, December 11, 2006.

While I saw the man claiming to be Gary Martin on Monday, December 4, 2006, on my way to the Courthouse to file my Complaint and other pleadings, I gathered from the time of the filing of your clients' Complaint, he must have rushed to your office after seeing me heading to the Court to tell you of such. Then you all decided to make a mad dash to the Court to try and beat me in filing a Complaint. However, failed in your attempt.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE, that if the applicable pleading is not filed by you or your clients in the District Court of Kenton County, Kentucky withdrawing their Complaint by tomorrow at 2:00 p.m., I will through the applicable pleading request a dismissal of their action and request that the District Court sanction both you and your clients for the such actions in that you and your clients knew that their Complaint was frivolous and that you and your clients were in possession of applicable information to make a fair and informed decision (based on evidence in your possession) as to whether or not legal action should have been filed against me. Moreover, I will provide the applicable documentation to support you and your clients' effort to beat me to the Court and file a Complaint. The date/time stamp – P 3:51 - on the Complaint filed by you on behalf of your clients and the date/time stamp provided on my payment receipt – 3:41 PM - I believe will support this. See copies of your clients' date/time stamp (which I circled on the copy) and the date/time stamp on my payment receipt for the filing of my Complaint (which I have circled on the copy). In a race, timing is important. You and your clients lost out in beating me in filing by approximately 10 minutes – I had been to the Court and out about the time you and/or your client(s) made it.

Furthermore, there is no excuse for the conduct that you have exhibited in trying to get your clients' Complaint filed and other conduct that you have displayed in the handling of this matter. You are supposed to be an attorney and practicing under the Code of Ethics; however, I find that you actions in the handling of this matter are truly an embarrassment to the legal profession. While you are entitled to represent you client, under the Code of Ethics your decisions are supposed to be in good faith, not to impede, delay and/or obstruct the administration of justice by filing such frivolous Complaint or serving frivolous letter notifying of eviction wherein you knew and/or should have known had no legal basis to support issuance and/or filing.

Dear Mr. Bridges:

I am in receipt of the Complaint (Case No. 06-C-5059) you have filed in the District Court of Kenton County, Kentucky on behalf of your clients, Gary & Bernice Martin and Dennis & Betty Donnellan d/b/a GMM Properties.

At this time, I am in good faith requesting that you file the applicable Motion to Withdraw the Complaint you have filed on behalf of your clients before 2:00 p.m. on Thursday, December 7, 2006. If you have not done so by this time (I will call the District Court to determine whether or not this has been done), I will move the District Court through my Motion to Dismiss to do so.

At the time of your filing your clients' Complaint, there was an action already pending in the Circuit Court of Kenton County, Kentucky (Case No. 06-CI 03270) in which a Notice-Motion for Order to Deposit Money and the supporting applicable Memorandum of Points and Authorities was also filed, which address the issue regarding any rent money your clients may assert is owed them. The relief sought in my Complaint exceeds the jurisdictional limits of the District Court of Kenton County, Kentucky – as you and your clients very well know in that you and your clients were in receipt and/or should have been in receipt of the Complaint that I submitted to the attention of Gary Martin. Moreover, you and your clients were put on notice of my moving forward to filing a Complaint against them.

When God opens the doors to EXPOSE injustices (i.e. as Jesus Christ –Matthew 27: 17-35, Christians and many others have had to suffer) and we who claim to be "Children of God/Servants of God/Saints/Christians" do nothing, what does that say about us? Who will God hold accountable for INJUSTICES/DISCRIMINATION/RACISM, etc. – Romans 10:8-13, James 2:1-7 and I Timothy 5:21 that you may know about and/or be aware of? The INJUSTICE in the judicial system and other areas of the government has been a longstanding problem. A problem that God has allowed to be EXPOSED through FACTS and EVIDENCE to clean out the WHITE HOUSE, Senate, House of Representative, Courts, corrupt attorneys, etc. – I Samuel 8:1-3- and other places to assure justice for his people. God WILL HOLD THOSE CLAIMING TO BE HIS SERVANTS/CHILDREN ACCOUNTABLE for allowing such sinful/unlawful/illegal practices and not EXPOSING and ADDRESSING such wickedness/evil works – Ezekiel 3:17-21.

Newsome prays that you find this information "educational," "helpful" "encouraging" and "uplifting."

Nevertheless, Newsome perseveres through such oppositions and attempts to further obstruct justice.* This is information that the United States MEDIA/PRESS will not share with you although they are aware of what is going on. Nevertheless, apparently foreign leaders/foreign nations are taking such matters seriously!!

No the United States Government thought that taking out Leaders such as Martin Luther King Jr., Malcolm X, Medgar Evers, and many more would silence African-Americans and keep them in CAPTIVITY. However, it is finding out that STRONGER *SHOOTS are springing forth and what these Leaders were murdered for (to keep from public knowledge) is* COMING TO THE LIGHT*!!! The TRUTH for what these Leaders were murdered/killed for to keep from being told- is COMING TO LIGHT!!*

United States President Barack Obama, his Administration and those they rely upon for counsel/advice have ALL made a WILLFUL, CONSCIOUS, DELIBERATE and MALICIOUS decision to take on Newsome and destroy her life WITHOUT just cause. In so doing, they have wedge a battle against Newsome and have REFUSED to address and correct the CORRUPTION, CONSPIRACIES, RACIAL INJUSTICES/PREJUDICES/ DISCRIMINATION brought timely, properly and adequately to their attention. RE: REQUEST FOR ARREST REPORT & RETURN OF PERSONAL PROPERTY RETRIEVED BY CONSTABLE JON C. LEWIS
ARREST OF VOGEL NEWSOME BY CONSTABLE JON C. LEWIS ON FEBRUARY 14, 2006
Spring Lake Apartments v. Vogel Newsome; In the Hinds County Justice Court, Hinds County, Mississippi; Docket No. 2150 Page 539

Dear Ms. Woods and Mr. Lewis:

Please accept this correspondence as my request for a copy of the Arrest Report regarding my arrest by Constable Jon C. Lewis on February 14, 2006, that took place at Spring Lake Apartments located at 1434 Hawthorne Cove in Jackson, Mississippi. This incident arose out of unlawful actions initiated by Spring Lake Apartments wherein the County rendered its services and I was subjected to an unjust/unlawful arrest. It has been approximately one (1) month since this arrest took place. Therefore, I believe that an Arrest Report should be on record by now. THEREFORE, PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that I am requesting the Arrest Report be submitted to me within the next five (5) business days at the mailing address provided above.

At the time of my arrest Constable Lewis unlawfully removed and retrieved personal property (a micro cassette recorder) from me and failed to return it to me or turn it in at the Hinds County Detention Center upon my admission. At this time, I am also DEMANDING that Mr. Lewis return my personal property or an explanation as to why it is being kept/retained and/or the reason for the destruction of said property.

Your assistance regarding these requests is greatly appreciated. Please understand that any further delays and/or failure by Mr. Lewis and/or this Court in producing the Arrest Report and any and all supporting documents will be taken as efforts to delay and/or obstruct justice in this matter.

I look forward to working on a resolution to these requests. Should you have further questions or concerns needing to be addressed, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,
Vogel Newsome

RE: REQUEST FOR ARREST REPORT & RETURN OF PERSONAL PROPERTY RETRIEVED BY CONSTABLE JON C. LEWIS
ARREST OF VOGEL NEWSOME BY CONSTABLE JON C. LEWIS ON FEBRUARY 14, 2006
Spring Lake Apartments v. Vogel Newsome; In the Hinds County Justice Court, Hinds County, Mississippi; Docket No. 2150 Page 539

Dear Ms. Woods and Mr. Lewis:

Please accept this correspondence as my request for a copy of the Arrest Report regarding my arrest by Constable Jon C. Lewis on February 14, 2006, that took place at Spring Lake Apartments located at 1434 Hawthorne Cove in Jackson, Mississippi. This incident arose out of unlawful actions initiated by Spring Lake Apartments wherein the County rendered its services and I was subjected to an unjust/unlawful arrest. It has been approximately one (1) month since this arrest took place. Therefore, I believe that an Arrest Report should be on record by now. THEREFORE, PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that I am requesting the Arrest Report be submitted to me within the next five (5) business days at the mailing address provided above.

At the time of my arrest Constable Lewis unlawfully removed and retrieved personal property (a micro cassette recorder) from me and failed to return it to me or turn it in at the Hinds County Detention Center upon my admission. At this time, I am also DEMANDING that Mr. Lewis return my personal property or an explanation as to why it is being kept/retained and/or the reason for the destruction of said property.

Your assistance regarding these requests is greatly appreciated. Please understand that any further delays and/or failure by Mr. Lewis and/or this Court in producing the Arrest Report and any and all supporting documents will be taken as efforts to delay and/or obstruct justice in this matter.

I look forward to working on a resolution to these requests. Should you have further questions or concerns needing to be addressed, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,
Vogel Newsome

Cincinnati Police are investigating after a woman was allegedly stabbed to death by her landlord.

Barbara Curless is a neighbor and friend of Sabrina and Bill Smith who rent an apartment on the corner of 69th and Vine Street in Carthage.

"I came in from WalMart, she was down on the sidewalk. Someone was holding her. They both were covered in her blood and her husband was screaming Barb, call 9-1-1!" Curless said.

Neighbors say both Sabrina and Bill lost their jobs and were receiving unemployment. Short on money, they were behind on rent and planning to move back to Atlanta.

Curless says the landlord changed the locks Friday, so when Sabrina arrived around 4 p.m. Saturday to get her clothes and possessions, she had to climb through the window. That's when Curless says the landlord, George Dibble, stabbed Sabrina.

"I said who stabbed her? And he said George...the landlord that lives upstairs over them," Curless said.

Police say 41 year-old Sabrina was transported to the hospital, where she died.

Curless says she got the news first-hand. "I just got a call from her husband and he was crying and all he was saying was, he killed her, he killed her!"

Police say they have arrested and charged 50 year-old Dibble, the landlord, with murder. Police will continue to investigate the murder.

$1M Bond For Landlord Accused Of Murder

Last Update: 12:37 pm

Slideshow

Police say a Cincinnati landlord murdered his former tenant because she still had property in the apartment.

That landlord, 50-year-old George Dibble, appeared in court Monday morning.

Dibble is charged with the murder of 41-year-old Sabrina Smith.

Investigators say Dibble stabbed Smith to death after an argument at the apartment in Carthage on Saturday afternoon.

Hamilton County prosecutors say Dibble was angered that Smith still had property in the apartment at 69th and Vine streets.

Neighbors told 9News that tough times forced Smith and her husband behind on rent. They said Dibble changed the locks on Friday.

When Smith arrived at the apartment on Saturday, she reportedly crawled through a window to get a few of her possessions. Police say that's when Dibble stabbed her. Smith was taken to University Hospital where she was pronounced dead.

Dibble's attorney told the judge that his client did cause the death of Smith, but said they disagree with the state's version of what happened.

The judge set Dibble's bond at $1 million.

A preliminary hearing date has not been set.

RE: Health Insurance Continuation

Dear Denise:

It appears to me from our telephone conversation and the nine page document you attached by voicemail to my office phone number that you are declining my effort to find a resolution of your concerns regarding health insurance. I had previously told you that I believed that the firm would accept my recommendation to extend your health insurance at the firm's cost for a period of time to allow you to attend to a medical matter which was pending.

In our telephone conversation, and in the nine page document you sent to me, you addressed a number of perceived wrongs you suffered while employed by the firm as well as your perception of an unlawful termination. You did not respond to the issue of resolution based on an extension of health insurance coverage.

I have been assured by the firm that we would extend your health insurance coverage for a reasonable period, but only on the condition that you sign a release of all of your perceived claims. As you know, that means that if you accept our offer of health insurance coverage for a period of time, yet to be determined, you could not file any charges, lawsuits or other complaints against the firm regarding your employment and separation from employment.

If my assumption that you are not interested in our proposed resolution is correct, you need not respond. Otherwise, you may call me, or preferably have your attorney call me, at 852-6088 if you wish to further discuss the terms of settlement.

Sincerely,

Paul R. Berninger

Board Docket No. 00241-BR-05-01; Ref. Docket No. 00002-R-05-01

In the Circuit Court of Hinds County, First Judicial District;
Civil Action No. 251-05-163CIV

Dear Judge DeLaughter:

Enclosed please find a copy of Motion to Stay Proceedings Pending Dispensation of Matters/Issues Timely Raised by Appellant, that is Presently Before the Mississippi Department of Employment Security and Other Government Agency(s), the original of which has been simultaneously filed with the Clerk's Office, in the above referenced matter. For your convenience, I have also enclosed an original of a proposed Order.

Said Motion is being submitted at this time in efforts of protecting rights that I am entitled to. According to the Mississippi Department of Employment Security ("MDES"), I have until March 17, 2005 to submit my Appeal to said Court. However, the MDES has not been cooperative with me and has failed to produce to me in a timely manner the type-written transcript and Exhibits I seek to assist me in preparation of my Appeal Brief in this matter. Therefore, I am requesting that upon review of this Motion submitted, if you find it to be well-taken, and in the interest of justice, that you grant said Motion. However, I also ask that if there are other laws governing said matters that I am not aware of, as a pro se litigant, that you apply same to assure that my rights are protected.

By copy of this letter, the Board of Review for the Mississippi Department of Employment Security, my former employer, Mitchell, McNutt & Sams, P.A. through its counsel and the other government agencies of interest, have been properly and adequately notified of my filing of the enclosed pleading.

Respectfully submitted,

RE: Denise Newsome v. Hamilton County Municipal Court/Judge Nadine L. Allen
Supreme Court Case No. 09-1690; WRIT OF PROHIBITION MATTER
Hamilton County Municipal Court Case No. 09CV01690

Dear Ms. Frost:

Enclosed please find the following (Original and 5 copies):

1. Relator's Motion To File Motion For Reconsideration Out Of Time and Notice of Ohio Supreme Court's Obstruction Of Justice – Impeding Relator's Timely Receipt of 12/02/09 Entry

PLEASE BE ADVISED that any delay (if any) in the filing of the Motion For Reconsideration was a direct and proximate result of the Supreme Court of Ohio's tampering with the mail and OBSTRUCTING the ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE and addressed within the attached pleading along with supporting Exhibits. With my October 19, 2009 filing, I requested that the Ohio Supreme Court advise me of any Conflict of Interest; however, to date, I have not been provided with this information. From my research, it appears that there may be a Conflict of interest with the MAJORITY (i.e. if not all) of the Justices of this Court in this matter. Please advise me IMMEDIATELY of this Court Court's Conflict of Interest in this matter to insure that I obtain equal protection of the laws and due process of law in the handling of this matter. Moreover, please advise of this Court's interference with my timely receipt of the December 2, 2009 ENTRY of this Court. Moreover, which now this Court appears to have attempted to mask said ENTRY out-of-sequence on the Docket Sheet in this matter.

Please file the original and return a stamped "FILED" copy to me in the self-addressed postage-paid enveloped enclosed. I am resubmitting the previous self-addressed postage-paid envelope provided with my December 14, 2009 filing for your convenience. I gather that since this Court only returned the original and four (4) copies, that it retained one for its record of the Motion For Reconsideration. Therefore, I expect it to use said copy to make the necessary copies and return to me a stamped "FILED" copy of said pleading also. I further expect this Court to act in GOOD-FAITH and see to it that my filings are docketed. By copy of this letter, I am providing opposing counsel, U.S. President Barack Obama and U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder with a copy of same.

Should you have questions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact me at 513/680-2922 or (601) 885-9536.

Sincerely,

ENTERED in that no Final Judgments on Relator's pending motions for Findings of Fact and Conclusion of Laws and Motions to Strike were ever entered prior to the unlawful remand/transferring of this matter to the Hamilton County Municipal Court – granting bifurcation and/or remand/transfer of Case No. A0901302 in the Hamilton County Court of Common Pleas to the Hamilton County Municipal Court as Case No. 09CV01690 – and hereby files this Relator's Motion To File Motion For Reconsideration Out Of Time and Notice of Ohio Supreme Court's Obstruction Of Justice – Impeding Relator's Timely Receipt of 12/02/09 Entry ("MTFOOTMFR") in accordance with Ohio S. Ct. R. XIV, Sections 2 and 3to the Ohio Supreme Court's "ENTRY" stamped Filed December 2, 2009, which is attached hereto at EXHIBIT "1" and incorporated herein by reference as if set forth in full herein.

Relator further moves this Court pursuant to S. Ct. R. XI, Sections 2 and 3and the applicable laws/statutes governing said matters and allow the filing of this instant MTFOOTMFR and her Motion for Consideration out of time for GOOD CAUSE shown and to suspend its December 2, 2009 Entry and reconsider this matter and enter a ruling GRANTING the relief Relator seeks through this instant MTFOOTMFR and her Motion For Reconsideration, Emergency Writ of Prohibition and Relator's subsequent filings. In support thereof Relator further states:

1. This instant MTFOOTMFR is submitted in good faith and is not submitted for purposes of delay, harassment, hindering proceedings, embarrassment, obstructing the administration of justice, vexatious litigation, increasing the cost of litigation, etc. and is filed to protect and preserve the rights of Relator.

2. This instant MTFOOTMFR has been timely filed and is in furtherance of protecting and preserving the Relator's rights. The record evidence will support that on or about December 2, 2009, the Ohio Supreme Court had filed its ENTRY granting Respondent's Motion to Dismiss. See EXHIBIT "2" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

3. The evidence supporting this instant MTFOOTMFR will support that the Supreme Court of Ohio in efforts of depriving Relator equal protection of the laws and due process of laws, did knowingly, willingly, deliberately and maliciously withhold providing her with its December 2, 2009 ENTRY in a timely manner and/or upon receipt of entry.

4. The Supreme Court of Ohio's handling of the December 2, 2009 ENTRY is in violation of Ohio S. Ct. R. XI Section 1 in that while it appears that there was an entry on said date, the evidence is clear that said Court did NOT provide Realtor with mailing of said ENTRY on this date. Said failure has infringed upon Relator's rights in which she has been ADVERSELY affected.

5. This instant Writ of Prohibition action is before the Supreme Court of Ohio because the lower courts have REPEATEDLY allowed opposing a parties and/or their counsel to file UNTIMELY pleadings. Now it appears this Court wants to be a stickler and deprive Relator the right to file her TIMELY Motion For Reconsideration with knowledge that it interfered with Relator's timely receipt of December 2, 2009 ENTRY. Therefore, depriving Relator the 10 days allowed under the laws/statutes to file her Motion For Reconsideration.

6. It appears this Court has pulled one of the plays out of Respondents' counsel's playbook (i.e. FALSIFYING mailing information) in his efforts of precluding Relator from filing a timely rebuttal which is addressed in her Rebuttal Brief. NEWS FLASH – this is a federal offense/crime.

7. According to the postmarking on the envelope in which the Supreme Court of Ohio provided Relator with a copy of its entry, it is postmarked December 3, 2009. See EXHIBIT "2" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. Said Exhibit will support the following:

a) That the envelope was not properly addressed (i.e. lacked City, State and Zip Code information) for the Relator to receive this information;

b) That the envelope did not have the proper FIRST-CLASS postage of 44¢ required but contained postage of ONLY 35¢ on the front and then on the back another postmarking for December 3, 2009 of 8¢ for a total of 43¢ which is still insufficient postage for mailing;

c) The evidence supports that the 35¢ postmarking was made from Meter No. 4262597 with a ZIP Code of 43215 (i.e. zip code for the Supreme Court of Ohio) and the postmarking on the back of envelope reveals that the 8¢ postmarking was made from Meter No. 4247379 with a ZIP Code of 43213 (i.e. not the zip code of the Supreme Court of Ohio). Nevertheless, still was not the amount of the required FIRST-CLASS postage – evidence mailing of ENTRY compromised breached; therefore, warranting an investigation in that there may have been a FEDERAL CRIME committed in the handling of this matter;

d) It was on or about December 9, 2009, that Relator received the Supreme Court of Ohio's December 2, 2009 ENTRY;

e) Relator checked her mail the weekend of December 5, 2009, and had not received said ENTRY; and

f) At best an investigation into the Supreme Court of Ohio's handling of its mailing of December 2, 2009, ENTRY has now been called into > question and other circumstances which may shed additional light into possible criminal activities is in the handling of same.

Based upon said evidence a reasonable mind may conclude that there was an attempt by the Supreme Court of Ohio to COVER-UP its failure to mail Relator a copy of its December 2, 2009 ENTRY. Moreover, that letter would not have been mailed because it did not have Relator's City, State and Zip Code information. The question now comes down to the handwriting and the actual handling of this piece of mail and when it actually was sent to Relator. Relator's Post Office Address is in Cincinnati, Ohio. Therefore, Relator should have received ENTRY no later than December 5, 2009, if indeed it was mailed on December 3, 2009 – wherein the record evidence supports that it was not and that there appears to have been a attempt to COVER-UP criminal behavior.

8. It appears this Court did not think that Relator would be bright/smart enough to figure this one out. Such unlawful/illegal/unethical practices raises very serious concerns as to whether or not this is a COMMON practices used by the Supreme Court of Ohio to deprive citizens of protected rights.

9. The record evidence supports that good cause has been shown and proven by Relator that any delay in the filing of her Motion For Reconsideration was not of any willful, deliberate and negligent acts of hers; however, was that of the Supreme Court of Ohio. Therefore, warranting the filing of this instant MTFOOTMFR and her Motion for Reconsideration and this Court's granting of same.

10. The record evidence will support that in JoElla's, Deputy Clerk of the Supreme Court of Ohio, letter of December 16, 2009, she advised:

> The enclosed motion for reconsideration was not filed and is being returned to you because it is untimely. A motion for reconsideration in the above referenced case would have been due in the Clerk's Office no later than 5:00 p.m. on December 14, 2009. However, it was not received until December 16, 2009. The Clerk's Office is prohibited by from filing an untimely motion for reconsideration by Rule XI, Section 2(D).
>
> The Court is unable to provide legal advice or act as an advocate. For these services, you may wish to contact an attorney. A list of the Lawyer Referral Services registered with the Supreme Court of Ohio is also enclosed.
>
> A copy of the docket report for this case is enclosed for your records.

See EXHIBIT "3" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein.

11. Based upon the record evidence a reasonable mind may conclude that the BURDEN-OF-PROOF is now on the Supreme Court of Ohio to show when the December 2, 2009 ENTRY was actually mailed to Relator. There is sufficient evidence to show that there was tampering with its mailing and that envelope was not properly addressed. Therefore, what actions were taken to COVER-UP such corrupt practices and COVER-UP the Obstruction of Justice and efforts to deprive Relator equal protection of the laws and due process of laws. Moreover, rights secured/guaranteed under the United States Constitution, laws of the State of Ohio and other laws of the United States.

12. The record evidence in this matter will clearly support that on October 19, 2009, Relator timely, properly and adequately presented to the Ohio Supreme Court concerns as to whether or not CONFLICT OF INTEREST existed with any of the Justices of said Court in correspondence provided which stated in part,

> While I understand that said pleading might be lengthy, it is pertinent and crucial for the Justices to have an understanding of what is going on and further supports the Criminal Complaint filed with the FBI and the Emergency Writ of Prohibition filed with this Court. Please advise if there is a "Conflict of Interest" (i.e. because of parties/names mentioned in pleading includes Judge John Andrew West; Judge Nadine L. Allen; Patricia M. Clancy; Joseph H. Deters; Christian J. Schaefer; Schwartz Manes Ruby & Slovin/David Meranus; Markesbery & Richardson Co./Michael E. Lively/Patrick B. Healy; Liberty Mutual Insurance Company/Molly G. Vance/Raymond H. Decker, Jr.; Stor-All Alfred LLC/Lori A. Whiteside/Leslie Smart/Leslie Calhoun; Wood & Lamping and/or those persons/parties involved in this action that may be known to this Court; however, not to Denise Newsome) with any of the Justices of the Supreme Court in regards to this matter.

See EXHIBIT "4" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. However, to date, the Supreme Court Justices have knowingly, willingly and deliberately withheld information regarding CONFLICT OF INTEREST in this matter and their relationships to opposing parties, their attorneys, their insurance companies and others which would compromise and influence their decisions; moreover, compromise the integrity of the Ohio Supreme Court. PLEASE TAKE NOTICE: Therefore, reasonable mind may conclude that the Supreme Court of Ohio has attempted to impede and deprive Relator rights secured/guaranteed under the laws of the United States and the State of Ohio.

13. Because the Ohio Supreme Court has REFUSED to advise of any potential CONFLICT OF INTEREST with the Justices of its Court and parties to the action, INSURANCE Company(s), etc., Relator has taken it upon herself to determine whether such Conflicts of Interest exist based upon information provided by Stor-All's counsel on February 6, 2009, during the hearing in the Hamilton County Municipal Court regarding Relator's Motion to Transfer. Based upon Relator's research, she has found information that is VERY DISTURBING and clearly support FINANCIAL CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS from Stor-All's (Plaintiff in the lower court action out of which this action is brought) Insurance Company's law firms to a MAJORITY of the Justices of the Ohio Supreme Court from Liberty Mutual's attorneys' law firms – such as:

(a) Frost Brown Todd LLC;
(b) Jones Day;
(c) Porter Wright Morris & Arthur LLP;
(d) Squire, Sanders & Dempsey LLP;
(e) Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP;

See EXHIBIT "5" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. While these are only a select few of the law firms that Relator pulled for this Exhibit, what is more disturbing is the amount of monies Justices received from these laws firms and/or others. Therefore, a reasonable mind may conclude that the Supreme Court of Ohio's handling of the December 2, 2009, was done to deprive Relator protected rights; moreover, in furtherance of OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE in efforts of covering up the criminal acts of Judges and attorneys for opposing parties committed on September 9-10, 2009.

14. From information Relator has been able to obtain from research, the following financial contributions of at least $328,170 (have been made by law firms representing and/or who have retained Liberty Mutual as a client) to Ohio Supreme Court Justices as follows:

JUSTICE	POLITICAL PARTY	LAW FIRM(S) WITH LIBERTY MUTUAL AS CLIENT	CONTRIBUTION
MOYER, THOMAS (Chief Justice)	Republican	Baker & Hostetler	$15,800
		Jones Day	$21,525
		Porter Wright Morris & Arthur LLP	$14,530
		Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP	$23,070
		TOTAL:	$74,925
O'CONNOR, MAUREEN	Republican	Jones Day	$12,700
		Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP	$10,075
		TOTAL:	$22,775
STRATTON, EVELYN	Republican	Frost Brown Todd LLC	$12,000

		Jones Day	$20,750
		Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP	$16,000
		TOTAL:	$48,750
CUPP, ROBERT	Republican	Porter Wright Morris & Arthur LLP	$12,610
		Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP	$18,350
		TOTAL:	$30,960
LAZINGER, JUDITH	Republican	Porter Wright Morris & Arthur LLP	$12,735
		TOTAL:	$12,735
O'DONNELL, TERRENCE	Republican	Baker & Hostetler	$30,475
		Jones Day	$37,025
		Squire, Sanders & Dempsey LLP	$30,600
		Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease LLP	$39,925
		TOTAL:	$138,025

See EXHIBIT "5" attached hereto and incorporated by reference as if set forth in full herein. IMPORTANT TO NOTE: ALL Justices are REPUBLICANS and ALL Justices are WHITE!! Information Relator believes is PERTINENT in that the criminal/civil wrongs leveled against her are RACIALLY motivated.

15. If Relator's memory serves her correctly, while employed with Wood & Lamping, one of the attorneys (Kenneth J. Schneider) held a special event leading up to the elections for Ohio Supreme Court Justice Maureen O'Connor and Evelyn Stratton. Relator recalls seeing an e-mail regarding this event from Schneider and attending to see what was going on. While she would not have voted for O'Connor because such acts are those in which Relator questions because of concerns that Justices put themselves in positions to be bought and feeling of concerns shared by other African-Americans and/or people of color of the CORRUPTION and knowledge that Judges/Justices decisions are purchased for a price. Relator at the time of the event was not registered to vote in Ohio; however, again, even if she was, most likely would not have voted for O'Connor or Stratton because of the appearance of ability to be purchased. If necessary Relator can look through her records to see if she retained Kenneth Schneider's e-mail, she recalls being given a flyer/brochure for O'Connor at the event.

16. Again, Relator mentions Castner v. Colorado Springs Cablevision, 979 F.2d 1417, 1421 (10th Cir. 1992), a decision which addresses whether to appoint counsel requiring accommodation of two competing considerations. First, the court must consider Congress's "special . . . concern with legal representation with Title VII actions." Jenkins v. Chemical Bank, 721 F.2d 876, 879 (2nd Cir. 1983). In enacting the attorney appointment provision of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and later reaffirming the importance of that provision in the legislative history of the Equal Employment Opportunity Act of 1972, Congress demonstrated its awareness that Title VII claimants might not be able to take advantage of the federal remedy without appointment of counsel. As explained in House Report No. 92-238:

> By including this provision in the bill, the committee emphasizes that the nature of Title VII actions more often than not pits parties of unequal strength and resources against each other. The complainant, who is usually a member of the disadvantaged class, is opposed by an employer who . . . has at his disposal a vast of resources and legal talent.

H.R. Rep. No. 238, 92nd Cong., 2d Sess., reprinted in 1972 U.S.C.C.A.N. 2137, 2148. Why, because there is record evidence to support at what GREAT LENGTHS employers/landlords, their lawyers, their insurance companies and others opposing Relator have gone to, to TIP-THE-SCALES of Justice in their favor and obtain rulings/decisions they knew were obtained through CORRUPTION and CONSPIRACY to Obstruct the Administration of Justice; moreover, deprive Relator equal protection of the laws and due process of laws. Rights secured/guaranteed under the United States Constitution and/or other laws of the United States. So while JoElla in her December 16, 2009, correspondence advises, "For these services, you may wish to contact an attorney. A list of the Lawyer Referral Services registered with the Supreme Court of Ohio is also enclosed," a reasonable mind may conclude that based upon the facts, evidence and legal conclusions in the record of this Court and the lower courts, that even if Relator had counsel, the Justices and others would have sought ways to threaten them and put them in fear of their life as they have done with Relator.

17. Relator admits that she must laugh because the use of the WILLIE LYNCH practices by the Supreme Court of Ohio and its employees in the handling of its attempt to OBSTRUCT the ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE and deprive Relator rights secured/guaranteed has been timely addressed in her Motion For Reconsideration. The record evidence will support that this Court has gone to great lengths to aid in the COVER-UP of criminal activities of judges, attorneys and others. Moreover, to WITHHOLD pertinent facts about the FINANCIAL TRAIL attached to the Justices of this Court.

18. Relator must also laugh because while she did not know that this Court would actually try and preclude her from filing her Motion to Reconsideration; it was a good thing that she retained documentation to support the TAMPERING with the mail and attempts by this Court COVER-UP its criminal actions.

19. Relator also provides at EXHIBIT "6" the a copy of the Docket Report provided by JoElla with her December 16, 2009, correspondence to Relator. IMPORTANT TO NOTE: It appears that the Ohio Supreme Court in efforts to COVER-UP and conceal its ENTRY placed its entry at the 10/12/09 Motion to Dismiss entry for the Respondents. There is a response by Relator - Rebuttal/Opposition to Motion to Dismiss and Memorandum in Support of Motion to Dismiss of Respondents; and Request/Motions for Sanctions – nevertheless, it appears that the Supreme Court of Ohio in further efforts of concealing and depriving Relator this information, embedded it at a filing of October 12, 2009, and clearly OUT-OF-DATE sequence. Thus, further warranting the intervention of the United States Department of Justice.

20. Well, it is a good thing that Relator was concerned and suspicious of the Justices' handling of this matter and now to see how the Clerk's Office appears to have attempted to compromise this case to prevent and OBSTRUCT the administration of justice – clearly is UNACCEPTABLE!!!!

21. Therefore, please let this filing also serve as Relator's timely NOTIFICATION to the Supreme Court of Ohio of its OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE – IMPEDING RELATOR'S TIMELY RECEIPT OF 12/02/09 ENTRY, therefore, infringing upon her protected rights and precluding/depriving her time required to prepare and file a timely pleading. In good faith, Relator moved to filed her pleading within the time of her receipt of filing which was December 9, 2009 – i.e. approximately one-week from the date of ENTRY.

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, Relator moves the Supreme Court of Ohio through this instant pleading to GRANT her Motion To File Motion For Reconsideration Out Of Time and Notice of Ohio Supreme Court's Obstruction Of Justice – Impeding Relator's Timely Receipt of 12/02/09 Entry in that the record evidence clearly supports good cause established for Relator's December 14, 2009 filing of Motion for Reconsideration and clearly REBUTS/REFUTES any delay that the Supreme Court may assert is the reason for its refusal to file Relator's timely MTFOOTMFR. While Relator believes the Supreme Court of Ohio has sufficient case law already in its record, possession and knowledge to sustain this instant MTFOOTMFR, Relator reserves the right to file a Memorandum Brief of Law should the Court feel that Relator needs to provide a Memorandum Brief of Authority. If needed, this Court should please so advise. As with Relator's filing of Motion for Reconsideration, she is providing the United States President, Barack Obama, and United States Attorney General, Eric Holder, with a copy of this instant filing as well. It is a good thing that Relator followed her mind to provide United States President Obama and United States Attorney General with a copy of the Motion for Reconsideration. Why, because, look at how the Supreme Court of Ohio attempted to OBSTRUCT JUSTICE and the evidence showing at least six (6) justices of this Court have received monies from law firms that are counsel for LIBERTY MUTUAL. Therefore, clearly showing a CONFLICT OF INTEREST. Not only that, that officials may have engaged in criminal actions to preclude and OBSTRUCT Relator from filing a timely

Motion For Reconsideration. Again, the BURDEN-OF-PROOF now shifts to the Supreme Court of Ohio to show that it indeed mailed and provided Relator with December 2, 2009 ENTRY in a timely manner which did not deprive her equal protection of the laws and due process of laws. Relator is laughing, laughing, laughing. . . . WHY? Because the Justices and this Court's practices in this matter clearly supports the practices of WILLIE LYNCH!!!

Respectfully submitted this 19th day of December, 2009.

Re: MY VISIT ON NEXT WEEK IN WASHINGTON D.C.

Date: 12/05/08

☒ Urgent ☒ For Review ☐ Please Comment ☒ Please Reply ☐ Please Recycle

Dear Vice President-Elect Biden:

I will be in the Washington, D.C. area on next week and plan to be on the Hill on Thursday December 11) and/or Friday (December 12). The reason for my visit is to obtain information on the Complaint (Emergency Complaint and Request for Legislature/Congress Intervention; Also Request for Investigation, Hearings and Findings) I submitted to the Senate's attention – the original Complaint was specifically sent to the attention of the Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary in the U.S. Senate, Patrick Leahy (in July 2008), the Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary in the U.S. House Of Representatives, John Conyers, Jr. (in August 2008), as well as the candidates for the United States President (Senators Barack Obama and John McCain) in August 2008, and Congresswoman Wasserman Schultz (in August 2008). While this Complaint was timely and I believe submitted to the appropriate individuals, to date, I have received nothing as to the status of my Complaint or the handling thereof.

Therefore, I will be coming to Washington, D.C. in regards to this matter in hopes of getting the process moving on my Complaint and working with those there, to see that this matter is handled in the proper manner. Moreover, to begin the process of clearing my name in that it is obvious that so many people (with the aid of the government) have gone to great lengths to cause injury/harm to my name, reputation, character, etc. because I have elected to expose civil/criminal wrongs. I am aware of how I am being projected and wanted to be seen as a mental case, psychotic, disturbed, dysfunctional etc.; however, to the contrary and this is not the case. I am completely sane, college educated, passionate about my civil rights, a Christian (real), not on any drugs or medication and have never been institutionalized in a mental hospital or facility neither have I ever been under the care of a psychiatrist.

I have recently obtained information regarding a Judgment that was entered on or about December 1, 2008 in a matter which is pending in a federal court in Mississippi. This matter is addressed in my Complaint submitted for filing with the United States Legislature/Congress in July 2008. The most recent action by this Court as well as criminal actions rendered by Courts (on or about October 9, 2008) here in Kentucky is clearly unacceptable and clearly requires IMMEDIATE attention from the United States Legislature/Congress. Continued acts by Court(s) Official(s) and others are clearly unacceptable and are not actions I believe the laws/statutes support. Moreover, said acts are racially motivated and have been in keeping with past oppressive behavior against African-Americans and the unlawful/illegal use of the judicial process to carry out such criminal and civil wrongs against said class and/or people of color. UNACCEPTABLE, because the Courts knew and/or should have known that they lacked jurisdiction to enter such rulings and/or Judgment; however, elected to exceed their jurisdiction and encroach upon the jurisdiction of the United States Legislature/Congress – excerpts of legal conclusions cut and pasted from LexisNexis is as follows:

> Clark v. Board of Education, 350 F. Supp. 149, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11444 (D. Ky., October 25, 1972) (HN2) Courts may not invade the domain of the legislature and where a plaintiff is asking for legislative relief or relief which would encroach upon the legislative process the courts are without power to act. That courts may not usurp the legislative function is fundamental, but where the laws enacted by the legislature are unconstitutional or have been applied in such a way as to deny constitutional rights, then the courts are empowered to act and may grant whatever relief necessary to vindicate constitutional wrongs.
> United States v. Powell, 151 F. 648, 1907 U.S. App. LEXIS 4978 (U.S. Court of Appeals, March 22, 1907) - It is the duty of the courts to be watchful of the constitutional rights of the citizen." Nor of its utterances that: "The fourteenth amendment makes no attempt to enumerate the rights it designs to protect. It speaks in general ...
>
> 1. Precise Matter Never "Drawn in Question" Before Supreme Court. . . . which Congress can protect under the fourteenth amendment, against lawless violence of private individuals, which prevents, and is designed to prevent, the state from affording the accused, when it endeavors to do so, the benefit of a trial according to the "law of the land," by the administration of the state's established course of judicial procedure. . . .
>
> "The fourteenth amendment makes no attempt to enumerate the rights it designs to protect. It speaks in general terms, and these are as comprehensive as possible. Its language is prohibitory; but every prohibition implies the existence of rights and immunities." Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U.S. 303, 25 L. Ed. 664.
> The fourteenth amendment was adopted to secure actual enjoyment of rights, which that amendment for the first time guarantied to citizens of the United States, who were thereby made citizens also of the state in which they resided. In form, the prohibitions of the amendment were leveled at the means by which it was supposed those rights would most often be defeated, but it was the evil to be averted, and the rights thereby to be enjoyed, and not the particular form of the invasion, [7] which were uppermost in the minds of the framers of the amendment. The intent and spirit of the command are that the enjoyment of the rights, which the amendment declares shall not be denied by the state, shall be worked out for those to whom the right was secured by full performance of the duties the amendment put upon the state. The performance of the duty by the state to its full extent is the dominant thought and purpose of the amendment. When the framers of the amendment, knowing that the states must continue to administer justice and punish crime within the state, coupled with this constant and continuing duty the condition that the state shall not deny due process of law, the substance of what they intended cannot be less than that the state shall afford to every person enjoyment of the benefits of due process, when it starts out to administer its justice in his case. Unless we surrender abjectly to the witchary of mere grammatical expression, and utterly desert the spirit of this clause, we must hold that the command, "no state shall deprive," etc., is only another form of command that each state shall afford enjoyment of the administration of its established course of [8] judicial procedure, in a case like this. The dominant end and purpose the amendment had in view were not merely that the states shall pass proper laws and furnish proper officers, who endeavor to execute them, but that the duty imposed upon the state shall be so fully performed that the citizen shall have actual, physical enjoyment of the benefits of the right, as distinguished from fictitious enjoyment, in theory of law, of a right in the form of an enchanting declaration upon parchment.

United States v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 751 F.2d 220, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 15791 (8th Cir., December 19, 1984, Decided) HN5 - The power of Congress to conduct investigations is inherent in the legislative process. The power to investigate is necessarily incident to the power to legislate and to do so wisely...

McGrain v. Daugherty, 273 U.S. 135, 1927 U.S. LEXIS 985 (U.S., January 17, 1927, Decided) - HN6 - The House of Representatives has the constitutional right to take evidence, to summon witnesses, and to compel them to appear and testify.

Below are the items that I would like to discuss during my visit. In that you are a member of the Committee on the Judiciary in the United States Senate, I am requesting your assistance with this matter as well in that you as the next Vice President of the United States as well as one that campaigned for CHANGE during the Presidential Campaign and the message represented by such includes that of racial injustices in this Country as set forth in my Complaint filed as well as the CURRENT efforts to attempt to shut the doors of the Courts to me to cover-up such criminal and civil wrongs mentioned in this Complaint and forthcoming (Senator Leahy and Congressman Conyers have received the following information – I have highlighted and marked with "*" revision made:

Dear Vice President-Elect Biden, Congressman Conyers and Senator Leahy:

Attached is a copy of the pleading entitled, Notice of Non-Waiver of Constitutional Rights and Civil Rights to Have the United States Legislature/Congress Intervene; Notice of Court's Lack of Jurisdiction to Enter December 1, 2008 Judgment (Docket No. 165) – Said Judgment Null/VOID. With this pleading I attached information obtained regarding the O.J. Simpson Complaint and recent court action against him, in that similar criminal charges that Mr. Simpson is accused of committing was rendered against me as evidenced in my Complaint filed with the Legislature/Congress back in July 2008 as well as with the FBI (which did nothing).

I plan to be in Washington, D.C. on tomorrow and Friday. I plan to stop by the offices of Congressman Conyers and Senator Leahy. The reason for my visit is to discuss the Complaint I have submitted for filing and find out the status of same. Furthermore, address other concerns that I have.

I hope you can understand the urgency of the meeting I am requesting and I expect your assistance in this endeavor.

Dear Vice President-Elect Biden, Congressman Conyers and Senator Leahy:

This correspondence is being provided to confirm my visit to the Senate on yesterday and the difficulties encountered in checking into the status of my "Emergency Complaint and Request for Legislature/Congress Intervention; Also Request for Investigations, Hearings and Findings," submitted for filing on or about July 13, 2008:

1) On or about November 24, 2008, I notified Congressman John Conyers via facsimile that I would be visiting his office(s) during the week of December 7, 2008 and requested a date and time during that week that I could meet with him; however, although he received this information, he elected to ignore it and to date I have heard nothing.

2) On or about December 4, 2008, I notified by Senator Leahy and Congressman Conyers via facsimile that I would be in Washington, D.C. and requested meetings with them.

3) On yesterday, I visited the Offices of Senator Leahy as well as the U.S. Senate's Committee on the Judiciary's Office to determine the status of the Complaint I submitted to his attention on or about July 13, 2008. This is what I encountered:

   a. No one in his office (SR-433) seems to know anything about the Complaint I submitted to his attention and advised that it would be with the U.S. Senate's Committee on the Judiciary.

   b. I went to the Senate Committee on the Judiciary's Office just to find out that it was not there and possibly sent to the U.S. House of Representatives - Committee on the Judiciary's Office, counsel for the Senate Committee on the Judiciary's Office. Although I specifically requested information in regards to the procedures for tracking to determine where my Complaint was, there appeared to be no such processes in the Senate Committee on the Judiciary's Office for handling receipt of such Complaints and/or such pertinent and critical concerns (as that addressed in my Complaint) submitted for handling.

4) I was advised that the Complaint submitted to Senator Leahy's attention may have been sent to the House of Representatives - Committee on the Judiciary's Office and I should contact them. While in the Senate's Committee on the Judiciary's Office I contacted the U.S. House of Representatives - Committee on the Judiciary's Office and after several calls and what apparently was "the run around and/or delay tactic" practiced by Leahy's and Conyers, staff wherein it appears they use a process condoned by Leahy and Conyers in handling citizens/people they do not want to deal with. I was also given the impression from such acts by Leahy's and Conyers, staff and/of staff of their Committee were procedures implemented to deal with citizens/persons they do not want to work and/or apparently were attempting needlessly burden citizens/persons in hopes they would give up and go away.

5) I was advised to contact my Senator's. However, correspondence to these offices will support that they were notified that PUBLIC CORRUPTION is known in the states (Mississippi-No. 2 and Kentucky-No. 3) that is addressed and my reasons for contacting Leahy, Conyers and others. Moreover, why would one take a car for repairs to a dentist for his expertise when it is a mechanic they need? So please spare me the contact your Senators and/or representative. Neither one of the Senator's/Congressmen/women are on the Committees which handled the issues in my Complaint that I am aware of.

6) I spoke with Matthew in the U.S. House of Representatives - Committee on the Judiciary's Office who advised me that due to three (3) months lapsing, my Complaint had been shredded and that there was no record of my Complaint submitted to the attention of Conyer or Leahy. Moreover, they would not have taken my Complaint based on his experience. I advised Matthew that this was unacceptable and shared my disappointment in his lack of knowledge of my Complaint as well as the nature of my Complaint. Moreover, on how the U.S. House of Representatives - Committee on the Judiciary's Office has handled this matter. I advised Matthew that I would be there in the morning personally to find out what is going on. Matthew suggested that I resubmit my Complaint. I advised Matthew of the volume of said Complaint and the great deal of time taken to prepare it. However, he did not seem interested. I advised Matthew that I did not bring a copy of the Complaint with me; however, had the brief. Moreover, that there are at leas five (5) sets (original and four (4) copies) of the Complaint here on the Hill. So there is no excuse for why a set cannot be obtained.

7) At the conclusion of my visit to the Senate Committee on the Judiciary's Office, I returned to Senator Leahy's office wherein I advised that he was not in; however, he was. Clearly a blatant lie – again practices I find unacceptable in that he knew and/or should have known I would be in his office on this week in that he was timely notified of my visit; however, had no time to see me.

Let me share my most deep disappointment and dissatisfaction in the handling of my Complaint entitled, "Emergency Complaint and Request for Legislature/Congress Intervention; Also Request for Investigations, Hearings and Findings" I did not appreciate the conduct and practice of the Senator Leahy (or their staff in their office or the office of their committee),), Congressman Conyer (or their staff in their office or the office of their committee), the Senate's Committee on the Judiciary's Office, and the U.S. House of Representative's Committee on the Judiciary's Office.

I took a great deal to time and care in preparing this Complaint as well as coming to Washington, D.C. I did not come here to be lied to, shunned or ignored by either Senator Leahy or Congressman Conyers as what happened on yesterday.

Furthermore, I would like to express my concerns of the practice of Senator Leahy's and Congressman Conyers acceptance and tolerance of their staff and/or staff of their Committee lying to me in regards to their attendance or present. Moreover, their blatant and clear refusal to meet with me. The following information was obtained from the U.S. Senate's Committee on the Judiciary's website to support they indeed handle Complaints such as mine:

Therefore, the actions of Senator Leahy on yesterday, his staff and/or the U.S. Senate's Committee on the Judiciary is unacceptable and has been ill received. There simply is no excuse for such incompetence, unprofessionalism, disrespect and handling for citizens Complaints submitted and/or entrusted to his care.

The following information was obtained from the U.S. House of Representative's Committee on the Judiciary's website to support they indeed handle Complaints such as mine:

> Just this year this Committee dealt with "Allegations of Selective Prosecution: The Erosion of Public Confidence in Our Federal Justice System." However, when provided with my Complaint which may go to the very claims/heart of such hearings, my Complaint was shredded (according to Matthews) and/or clearly ignored and not taken into consideration.

Therefore, the actions of Congressman Conyers (aware and/or should have been aware that I was in town) on yesterday, his staff and/or the U.S. Senate's Committee on the Judiciary is unacceptable and has been ill received. There simply is no excuse for such incompetence, unprofessionalism, disrespect and handling for citizens Complaints submitted and/or entrusted to his care. I do not appreciate being lied to, given the run around and/or shunned. I also have serious concerns as to the fact that it was Conyer's that I corresponded with first advising of my visit to D.C. on or about November 24, 2008, and a week later (December 1, 2008) I find out that I have been a victim of additional judicial injustices – then when I take the time to come to D.C., I cannot even meet with him and/or he hides behind his staff and allow them to do his biddings rather than discuss my matter with me personally.

I do intend to be back on the Hill today and hopefully find out what is going on. While I do not expect much based on the actions of Senator Leahy and Congressman Conyers on yesterday, I do require that I get some resolution as to the status of my "Emergency Complaint and Request for Legislature/Congress Intervention; Also Request for Investigations, Hearings and Findings."

I close with serious concerns as to why our system may be in the condition as it is – it appears such corruption and/or the condoning of such may be due to those on the Hill. Clearly in my situation, there is simply no excuse for how my Complaint has been handled; moreover, my being subjected to such crimes at the direction and/or instructions of public officials and nothing is being done.

If this is the CHANGE that America can look forward to, which appears to be politics as usual, then not only myself, but the public needs to be aware of it. Clearly, yesterday's visit is an embarrassment and an insult to the process that citizens are led to believe is available to them.

Sincerely,

Denise Newsome

Dear Vice President-Elect Biden, Congressman Conyers and Senator Leahy:

STATUS REQUEST:

As you know on or about July 13, 2008, I submitted a Complaint entitled, "Emergency Complaint and Request for Legislature/Congress Intervention; Also Request for Investigations, Hearings and Findings." Through this instant correspondence, I am requesting the status of this Complaint. The original of this Complaint was submitted to the attention of Senator Patrick Leahy (U.S. Senate's Chairman of Committee on the Judiciary) and later following up with copies to Congressman John Conyers, Jr. (U.S. House of Representative's Chairman of Committee on the Judiciary), Senator Barack Obama (in that he was a Presidential Candidate at the time of submittal and advising of filing should he return to the Senate as a result of losing the Presidential election), Senator John McCain (in that he was a Presidential Candidate at the time of submittal and advising of filing should he return to the Senate as a result of losing the Presidential election) and Congresswoman Debbie Wasserman-Schultz (as a member in the U.S. House of Representatives' Committee on the Judiciary). Providing a sufficient amount of copies out of concerns that providing only one Senator and/or Representative with this information would only amount to further acts of cover-up, dropping the ball, passing the buck, etc. in the handling of this matter. This Complaint consisted of approximately 65 pages and was supported by approximately 83 supporting Exhibits. While visiting the offices of Senator Leahy as well as his Committee's office, I was advised they could not find this Complaint. While visiting the office of Congressman Conyers as well as his Committee's office, I was advised they could not find this Complaint. I am hoping that since my visit, out of the 5 sets of this Complaint submitted to the Legislature's/Congress' attention, one or more have been found.

As I have addressed in previous correspondence there is sufficient information to support that the Legislature/Congress handles such matters (here is information I retrieved from their website) – this information is important in that there is a serious problem with our judicial system as well as certain public officials. In that the President-Elect/Vice-President Elect campaigned that they will bring about change, it is important that the public is aware of the Complaint I submitted and the handling of it thus far (my getting the run around while there, Senators/Congressman – of Committees handling such matters - ignored me while they had knowledge I was in Washington, D.C. and in their offices):

How serious is this problem – public corruption, racial bias in the judicial process, etc.? This is addressed in the Complaint I have submitted to the United States Legislature/Congress. Nevertheless I provide additional information I found disturbing and of necessity to address:

1. While I was in Mississippi for the past Christmas holiday, in the Jackson Clarion Ledger's Sunday paper (dated December 28, 2008) there was an article in the paper entitled, "Magnolia State Has Share of Corruption." (Cut and pasted from: http://www.clarionledger.com/article/20081228/NEWS/812280354/-1/archive) A copy of which is attached hereto. This article includes the following excerpts:

> The recent indictment of Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich has resurrected that state's stereotype as the ultimate place for backroom deals, bribes and corruption.
>
> But in the past decade, Mississippi has had nearly twice the per capita rate of public officials convicted than Illinois. . . .
>
> The number of Mississippi's corruption convictions is substantial, but only tells part of the story, said Assistant U.S. Attorney John Dowdy of Jackson, who heads the criminal division for the Southern District of Mississippi.
>
> "You take into account the number of cases prosecuted by the local district attorneys and the state attorney general, and you see there is a pattern of corruption with all levels of public office, from city to federal," he said.
>
> The Corporate Crime Reporter puts Mississippi in second place in public corruption, just behind Louisiana.[2]
>
> The high rankings don't surprise Dowdy. "I do believe that is a fair representation of the true nature of corruption within public office in this state," he said. "It is a problem, and it has been historically." . . .
> The only reason the state isn't ranked higher nationally in corruption is because most people get away with it, he said.

COMMENT: In my situation, not only was the United States Legislature/Congress made aware of this infectious issue, from information obtained during my trip, they clearly ignored my request – I advised them of the reasons I did not submit my Complaint through the representatives (Senators/Congressman) of the state(s), and provided them with sufficient information of concerns of corruption. However, during my visit, it was brought to my attention that my Complaint (and copies) may have been submitted to the Senator(s)/Representatives of my state(s). Clearly doing so over my objections and of being notified of my concerns and of the corruption in my state(s). This information for instance is contained on Page 3 and Exhibit 1 of the Complaint submitted to the U.S. Legislature/Congress. Not only that, I provided at Exhibit 2 a letter from Thad Cochran dated June, 1, 2006, in my Complaint. To date nothing. So no, the U.S. Legislature/Congress apparently is aware of the corruption problems growing in the judicial system; however, appears to be looking the other way. Concerns which has led me to believe that Capitol Hill (U.S. Legislature/Congress) may be contributing and/or encouraging such practices in their failure to exercise its jurisdiction. It is obvious that lobbyists are used on Capitol Hill to promote the agenda of those who pay them – thus, it is more profitable for corrupt public officials to pay lobbyist to see that the issues addressed in my Complaint are ignored and that the public is never made aware of it. Thus, money, power and wealth appears to be the way the U.S. Legislature/Congress handles matters. Clearly they have obtained the Complaint filed by me; however, I have heard nothing and when I visited earlier this month, look at how Senator Leahy and Congressman Conyers behaved. Moreover, may have instructed their staff to behave in the manner I experienced.

2. In the Complaint I submitted to the U.S. Legislature/Congress, for instance, they were made aware of the corrupt practices (unlawful/illegal) practices of Constable Jon Lewis (white male) in Jackson, Mississippi. Not only that, the FBI, the Hinds County Board of Supervisors are fully aware of Jon Lewis' corrupt practices. I submitted a formal Complaint to the Hinds County Board of Supervisors about July/August 2006 and a formal Complaint with the FBI on or about June 26, 2006. However, to date, nothing from my understanding has been done and Jon Lewis is still actively serving in such a capacity. A public official who took evidence (tape recording) from my persons on February 14, 2006, kidnapped me (with the presence of a fire arm – deadly weapon), had me held hostage at the Hinds County Detention Center until my parents paid the ransom (masked as a bond) to release me. There was no legal grounds for such actions nor the taking of my residence and property. Such acts were committed at the direction of Constable Jon Lewis, Judge(s) and others. Such acts were committed with knowledge that criminal/civil wrongs were being rendered against me. To no avail. Constable Lewis, other public officials and others made a conscious decision to usurp the laws and administer their own prejudicial/racially motivated justice. In fact, I advised Constable Lewis that he was committing legal wrongs to no avail. Because he has been allowed to conduct such criminal acts on his own or under the direction of judge(s) and/or others (i.e. Hinds County Board of Supervisors), he does it without fear of punishment or prosecution – placing himself above the laws and unlawfully/illegally taking the laws into his own hands.

Constable Jon Lewis has been allowed to repeatedly violate laws/statutes governing "service of process," etc. In my case he went as far as falsifying the Return (to unlawfully/illegally obtain $35 fee) – keeping in mind he also stole/removed property off my persons (tape recording) and failed to turn such evidence in at the Hinds County Detention Center. Retaining such information for himself in that it contained damaging information as to the criminal acts he engaged in. Therefore, he felt better served to take such evidence and destroy it. Not only that, Judges, public officials, etc. were aware of such criminal behavior and has done nothing.

IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE: That in the Complaint I filed with the U.S. Legislature/Congress, they have been made aware of the criminal and civil violations rendered me at the hands of Constable Lewis. (This is addressed in my Complaint at Pages 28 – 35 along with several supporting EXHIBITS) The Court(s), Hinds County Board of Supervisors, FBI, etc. are also aware of such corrupt practices. However, from my understanding, Constable Lewis is still employed and the public is definitely at risk.

How bold is Constable Lewis in committing such criminal/civil wrongs? He encourages investigations that he know will not happen. A reasonable mind may conclude because, like Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich, he may have threatened to sing – spill the beans on others.

Constable Lewis most likely would not take the heat for such corruption without taking others with him.

IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE: After my February 14, 2006 kidnapping at the hands of Constable Lewis, on or about April 19, 2006 (approximately two [2] months later) he is still at it. From information I have seen, it appears he had citizens sending payments to his home address. Why is this so important, because even the Clerk of the Court voiced concerns of such actions of Constable Lewis, I am not aware of any acts taken to deter such criminal practices. See documents attached hereto:

Supervisors Looking Into Constable's Methods:

> The Hinds County Board of Supervisor's is looking into the methods used by the county's constable. At issue, is how he collects his fees. The constable says he has done nothing wrong.

COMMENT: The Hinds County Board of Supervisors is fully aware that the practices of Constable Jon Lewis are unlawful/illegal; however, to date, I am not aware of any charges brought against him or him being charged with any crimes. I filed a Complaint with the Hinds County Board of Supervisors on or about July/August 2006. The County about this time was also notified of my intent to sue Hinds County for the civil/criminal wrongs rendered me on February 14, 2006. The 04/19/06 article goes on to state:

> "There is absolutely nothing criminal here, nothing wrong," said Constable Jon Lewis.

In a letter to the county administrator, Justice Court Clerk Patricia Woods accused Constable John Lewis of using questionable tactics.

The clerk said Friday, April 7th, several defendants appeared at justice court to pay fines, but a judge wasn't present. A Utica man received a letter telling him to appear, but the man had already paid his speeding ticket in January.

After learning that, the clerk told her staff not to collect any fees from defendants who did not have outstanding warrants.

"I refuse to be a part of his collection process," said Woods in her letter to County Administrator Anthony Brister. "I cannot imagine how many letters were mailed or payments received at his home address."

"I am welcoming an investigation from the auditor's office. I would like it to be looked into very thoroughly," said Lewis.

Constable Lewis says the letter to the defendant about the speeding ticket was a mistake on his part, but he makes no apologies for using tough methods.

In one letter to a defendant, Lewis advised the man not to talk to anyone but him. He told the man not to call the court. Lewis tells defendants that because he says it helps ensure he collects his $35 service fee, which keeps the constable's operation running.

That $35 fee is tacked on if someone doesn't pay their fine and the constable has to serve a warrant. Lewis says he has lost thousands of dollars because of mishandled fees, and he won't let that continue.

The Board of Supervisors held an executive session meeting Monday to discuss the matter. Since justice court falls under the board's jurisdiction, the board's attorney will be investigating.

IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE: That the Hinds County Board of Supervisors is fully aware of the criminal acts of Constable Lewis; however, what is being done? Nothing. Moreover, why are they allowing him to continue to break the laws – defy the laws and create his own laws that suit him rather than those that are lawful?

Hinds County Constable Refutes Allegations:

Hinds County Constable Jon Lewis is firing back over allegations that he illegally collected a fee for his services.

> The Hinds County Board of Supervisors called for an internal investigation into accusations that Lewis collected an unauthorized $35 fee for serving criminal and civil warrants.
>
> Board president Doug Anderson said those fees are being collected without board approval.
>
> But Lewis argues that accepting a fee is legal and said serving warrants is the way constables earn money.
> "The investigation needs to go forward. I welcome a thorough investigation from the State Auditor's Office. I want them to do this. They need to come in and look. I want everyone of my filed looked at," said Lewis.

IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE: Constable Lewis knew that his actions could possibly bring lawsuits. So from what I have seen, it appears Constable Lewis is trying to get the Board to change the laws to cover-up his criminal acts. I know he was put on notice on February 14, 2006, that I would be seeking actions against him for criminal/civil wrongs rendered me. So the Hinds County Board of Supervisors knew they had a walking liability, corrupt officer, etc.; however, to date may not have done anything to protect the public from the criminal acts of Constable Lewis:

No action was taken on this matter.

At pages 9 and 10. Look at what government agencies were notified of concerns of Constable Lewis' actions. Was anything done? Yet, Constable Lewis is allowed to continue to be a danger and/or threat to the public/citizens of the State of Mississippi and/or United States.

Controversy in Constable Special Election:

> County constable is a desirable position. For every warrant and summons the constable serves he makes $35. In a large county like Hinds the job can be quite lucrative. Constables also act as bailiffs in justice court and take on other law enforcement duties.

COMMENT: The record evidence in the Courts and/or government agencies will support that Constable Jon Lewis has been allowed to violate state laws and that such violations are done with his knowledge as well as the Hinds County Board of Supervisors' (and other government agencies) knowledge of Lewis' criminal activities and/or criminal/civil wrongs against citizens. Moreover, I believe an investigation into Constable Lewis' handling/service of warrants and/or summonses are not in compliance with the statutes/laws governing service of these legal documents. Nevertheless, he looks to obtain such fees ($35) when he has knowledge he has not served[3] legal documents and/or attempts to obtain such fees through unlawful/illegal practices. In my situation involving Constable Lewis, he did not serve any warrants/summonses on me in compliance with the statutes/laws of the State of Mississippi. He knowingly and deliberately falsified information regarding handling of service. IT'S IMPORTANT TO NOTE: Constable Lewis also participated in the unlawful seizure of my residence and property on February 14, 2006, unlawfully removed my microcassette recorder from my persons, kidnapped me (with the presence of a fire arm – deadly weapon), had me held hostage against my will at the Hind County Detention Center, along with other criminal acts. Said tape recording was evidence to the crimes being committed against me. Although I requested the return of the recording and such criminal acts were reported, to date, nothing has been done.

3. There is a serious epidemic on the rise in the United States. Especially, those concerning Landlord and Tenant matters. You have companies/persons buying up real estate (taking on the role as Landlord) in efforts of making big bucks through fraud and deception and then using corrupt public officials to aid in the unlawful/illegal seizure of property (of Tenant(s)). Not wanting to follow the statutes/laws in place to protect citizens, these Landlords either with the help of corrupt public officials (relying on special favors) or taking the laws into their own hands are committing serious criminal/legal wrongs under the watchful eyes of the Court(s), government agencies and now the United States Legislature/Congress.

IT IS IMPORTANT TO NOTE: That the failure of the Court(s) to uphold and enforce the laws/statutes may have encouraged such criminal/civil wrongs as that committed by Constable Jon Lewis. The very criminal acts that O.J. Simpson was charged with have been committed by Constable Jon Lewis and other; however, nothing has been done.

In fact, as recent as Friday, December 26, 2008, a landlord in the Cincinnati, Ohio area, took it upon himself to change the lock on his tenant's residence and when the tenant returned home, she had to climb through the window of her residence to obtain property. Apparently, the Landlord was on the lookout, confronted the tenant and as a result of such confrontation, the Landlord wound up stabbing the Tenant which later resulted in the Tenant's death. See articles attached hereto: Landlord Allegedly Stabs Tenant Over Un-Paid Rent and $1M Bond for Landlord Accused of Murder. Also attached are photographs of the Landlord and Tenant.

[3] Fraudulent acts.

WHAT A NEEDLESS AND SENSELESS ACT!!!! A LIFE LOST BECAUSE LANDLORD(S) WANTING TO MAKE QUICK MONEY TAKE THE LAWS INTO THEIR OWN HANDS AND RENDER THEIR OWN JUSTICE (I.E. MURDERING, KIDNAPPING, ETC.) IT IS NOT RIGHT. A GROWING PROBLEM!!!

4. From what I gathered, it appears the Mayor of Jackson, Mississippi, Frank Melton (African-American) is being charged with federal civil rights violations regarding an August 26, 2006, raid on a duplex. See articles taken from the Clarion Ledger's website attached hereto.

Mayor Melton's raid coming approximately six (6) months after the unlawful seizure, kidnapping, etc. that I had to endure at the hands of public official(s) (Constable Lewis – white male). However, do you see Constable Lewis (white male) and/or his cohorts being charged with criminal wrongs as those leveled against O. J. Simpson and Mayor Melton? No.

Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter. I am still awaiting the United States Legislature/Congress' response to the Complaint I submitted for filing in July 2008.

Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me. My direct fax number at my office is (513) 419-6453.

Dear Vice President-Elect Biden, Congressman Conyers and Senator Leahy:

Attached is a copy of the pleading entitled, Notice of Non-Waiver of Constitutional Rights and Civil Rights to Have the United States Legislature/Congress Intervene; Notice of Court's Lack of Jurisdiction to Enter December 1, 2008 Judgment (Docket No. 47) – Said Judgment Null/VOID. (Civil Action No. 3:07-cv-00560) This is a pleading I have had to file in that the attorney I retained to represent me has come under attack by Defense counsel in this Court and from the record evidence has endured threats of disbarment, etc. in her representation of me. Therefore, as a direct and proximate result of such attacks and threats she has succumbed to such pressures and filed a pleading to withdraw over my objections. The record in this lawsuit has been heavily breached and/or compromised and the Docket the case does not adequately reflect all pleadings filed.

In the same attacks that my counsel in the attached lawsuit I believe is the same type that any other attorneys I have retained and/or that has agreed to represent me in matters have had to endure. However, keep in mind I am painted as a "serious litigator," etc. and one that is delusional, paranoid, crazy, etc. Such processes which are a part of the systematic process to destroy me, my life, reputation, pursuit of happiness, pursuit of justice, etc. My attorney in the attached matter having well over twenty (20) years in the legal profession; however, I believe once opposing counsel and the Judges obtained some information regarding some issues with her in Tennessee, they may have used such information to blackmail/coerce, etc. into abandoning me. Of course with the research I conducted on my attorney (in that her abrupt turn-about-face and refusal to correspond or file pleadings – in efforts of throwing the case) and the information I was able to obtain, it became clear to me that something was wrong. My attorney being so positive with the evidence and likely outcome of the lawsuit; and then, abruptly just abandoned me. It was not until I obtained information from my research and the threatening letters from opposing counsel that was being submitted to my attorney without my knowledge, that I concluded defense tactics being used by opposing counsel to obtain an undue, unlawful and illegal advantage in this lawsuit and other(s).

As you know, I was in Washington, D.C. on Thursday and Friday and visited the offices of the Senator Leahy, Congressman Conyers as well as the Offices of the House of Representatives' Committee on the Judiciary and Senate's Committee on the Judiciary. I left the copies of the Emergency Complaint filed with the Legislature/Congress with a person who claimed to be counsel for the HR Committee on the Judiciary and gave me a name of Sam Sokol; as well as a copy with Congressman Conyer's office.

There simply is no excuse for the actions of the Judges/Magistrate Judges and attorneys (all of who are officers of the court). Such unlawful, illegal and unethical practices which are occurring under the watchful eyes of the House of Representatives and Senate that have jurisdiction over the judicial system, the courts and the officers thereof.

I hope you can understand the urgency of my request for the Legislature/Congress' intervention. Moreover, from the attached pleading and the one provided to your attention on December 10, 2008, in the other lawsuit, that the jurisdictions of the Committee on the Judiciary for both the Senate and House of Representatives are applicable in this matter; and their intervention in such matters, timely requested.

Your attention to this matter is greatly appreciated. Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at the above address and phone number (513) 680-2922. My direct fax number at my office is (513) 419-6453.

ACLU official alleges racial profiling at airport

Man says he was victim of profiling, challenges Logan's screening technique

Michael Dwyer / AP

King Downing, the national coordinator of the American Civil Liberties Union's Campaign Against Racial Profiling, leaves Federal Court in Boston, on Dec. 3. Downing says he was the victim of profiling by police at Logan International Airport in Boston, and he has gone to federal court to challenge a screening technique used around the country that relies on suspicious behavior patterns to identify potential terrorists.

BOSTON — The top official in charge of fighting racial profiling for the American Civil Liberties Union says he was the victim of profiling at the Boston airport, and he has gone to federal court to challenge a screening technique that relies on suspicious behavior to identify potential terrorists.

King Downing said he was stopped and questioned by state police in October 2003 after arriving on a flight to attend a meeting on racial profiling.

Downing sued the Massachusetts Port Authority, which operates the airport, and Massachusetts State Police, alleging they violated his constitutional right against unreasonable search. A trial in the case began Monday in U.S. District Court.

Downing, who is black and wears a short beard, said in his lawsuit that he was stopped by a state trooper and asked to show identification after he left the gate area and made a phone call in the terminal.

When he declined, Downing said, he was told to leave the airport, but was then stopped again. He was surrounded by four state troopers and told that he was under arrest for failing to produce identification.

Downing, an attorney who serves as national coordinator of the ACLU's Campaign Against Racial Profiling, said after he agreed to show his driver's license, the troopers asked to see his airline ticket. He was then allowed to leave, and no charges were filed against him.

In his lawsuit, Downing alleges the behavioral screening system used at Logan International Airport encourages racial profiling. His lawsuit seeks unspecified damage and a ruling to declare the screening system unconstitutional.

Downing was stopped "for no apparent reasons other than his appearance," said Peter Krupp, one of his attorneys. "He knew his rights, and he knew he had done nothing wrong."

In 2002, about a year after terrorists launched the Sept. 11 attacks by hijacking two planes from Logan, the airport began a program called "Behavior Assessment Screening System," which allows police to question passengers whose behavior appears suspicious. Logan was the first airport in the country to use the system.

The Transportation Security Administration has rolled out a similar system at more than 40 of the nation's largest airports. The TSA would not reveal what kinds of behavior authorities look for, but officials at Logan have previously said suspicious activity includes loitering without luggage, wearing heavy clothes on a hot day and watching security methods at the airport.

Logan officials say race played no role in the decision to question Downing. The first trooper to ask Downing for identification was black, and three of the four officers who arrived later were also black, according to court documents. The first trooper said he became suspicious when he saw Downing watching him.

Airport officials insisted behavior-pattern recognition helps strengthen security and does not involve racial profiling.

"We welcome the opportunity to defend the program in court," said Matthew Brelis, a spokesman for the Massachusetts Port Authority, which operates the airport.

Critics say the behavioral-recognition technique carries an inherent risk of racial profiling.

"Done right, it is based on behavior. Done wrong, it is based on physical characteristics, superficial characteristics," said Bruce Schneier, chief technology officer at the security firm BT Counterpane. "Unfortunately, it's easy to do it wrong."

Jury Finds Unlawful Detention At Logan Airport

Verdict stems from treatment of African-American passenger after arrival in 2003

BOSTON -- Friday evening, the jury in the Downing v. Massachusetts Port Authority trial found that state police had unlawfully detained King Downing at Logan Airport in October 2003. Mr. Downing also agreed to a settlement of his claims against the Massachusetts state trooper principally responsible for the unlawful detention, William Thompson.

King Downing, a Harvard-educated lawyer, testified at the trial that he was stopped for questioning by state police troopers after simply using a phone on his way out of Logan Airport on the morning of October 16, 2003. Police demanded to see Mr. Downing's identification and travel documents, which he was under no obligation to provide. After initially being told that he must leave the airport, which he intended to do anyway, Mr. Downing was surrounded by five state troopers and told he was under arrest. Although the police had no reason to stop him, Downing was detained for forty minutes until he finally acceded to police demands for his identification and travel papers.

"The jury found that Mr. Downing was unlawfully detained by the State Police," said attorney Peter B. Krupp, of the firm Lurie & Krupp LLP, who represented Mr. Downing in cooperation with the American Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts. "The jury verdict puts the state police on notice that its programs, including the post-9/11 Passenger Assessment Screening Program, must assure in the future that voluntary encounters between troopers and members of the traveling public do not become the type of unlawful detention that Mr. Downing experienced."

Downing had stopped on his way out of the airport to use a pay phone outside the secure area, and he contended that the only thing that would have attracted the attention of the trooper was his appearance. Mr. Downing is an African American who wears a beard. Downing testified that while he was on the phone, a state trooper positioned himself just a few feet away where he could easily listen in on Downing's call. When Downing objected, the trooper demanded to see his identification.

Ironically, Mr. Downing is the National Coordinator of the ACLU's Campaign Against Racial Profiling.

Downing's legal team had argued that his detention was the result of the Passenger Assessment Screening System (also known as the Behavior Assessment Screening System). The PASS program was designed to thwart terrorists and was put into effect at Logan Airport in 2003. Similar screening systems are now in use at dozens of airports around the country.

The jury did not find that the incident on Oct. 16, 2003, was necessarily the result of the PASS program, but nonetheless found that the police had unlawfully detained Mr. Downing because they had detained him without reasonable suspicion to believe he had committed any crime. The defendants had steadfastly contended that at all times during the 30-40-minute encounter with the police, Mr. Downing was free to leave the police. The jury rejected this notion.

"A jury with no blacks found that my rights were violated," said King Downing. "This case sends a message to blacks, and to all people, to stand up for their rights."

"This jury verdict upholds an important principle," said Carol Rose, Executive Director of the ACLU of Massachusetts. "In the United States, people cannot be stopped without cause by the police and required to produce identification and papers proving that they have a right to be in a particular place. 'Your papers please' is a phrase that is alien to a free society."

"Police and airport security personnel should be on the lookout for genuinely suspicious behavior, but the law is clear that they may not stop someone unless they have a reasonable suspicion that a crime or an act of terrorism might be committed. The use of behavioral characteristics, like those that were kept secret in this case, does not justify the detention of someone in a non-secure area."

The ACLU of Massachusetts has questioned the use of behavioral pattern recognition out of concern that it increases the likelihood of racial profiling. "The police are going to find suspicious behavior where they look for it," Rose explained. "And experience teaches us that they are more likely to look for it among people of color or a particular ethnicity. We will all be safer if security personnel base their investigations on evidence, not simply racial characteristics."

Jury Finds African American Passenger Was Unlawfully Detained at Logan Airport

December 10, 2007

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

BOSTON - On Friday, a Suffolk Superior Court jury found state police unlawfully detained American Civil Liberties Union attorney King Downing at Logan Airport in October 2003, and Downing agreed to a settlement of his claims against William Thomspon, the state trooper principally responsible for the unlawful detention.

Downing, a Harvard-educated lawyer who is the National Coordinator of the ACLU's Campaign Against Racial Profiling, testified at trial that he was stopped for questioning by state police troopers after simply using a phone on his way out of Logan Airport on the morning of October 16, 2003. REASON FOR INVESTIGATION

This investigation was initiated based on a complaint filed by Denise Newsome. She alleged that she was terminated for asking for Family Medical Leave. She also alleges that she was denied her right to take FMLA leave.

COVERAGE

The firm has employed 50 or more employees for 20 weeks in the current or preceding calendar year.

ELIGIBILITY

Ms. Newsome was an employee of the covered employer, had worked for at least 12 months, employed at least 1250 hours during the 12 months preceding the commencement of the leave and is employed at a work site where 50 or more employees are employed by the employer within 75 miles of that work site.

QUALIFYING CONDITION/SERIOUS HEALTH CONDITION

Ms. Newsome did not indicate that she had a serious health condition. There is no evidence to indicate that Ms. Newsome gave notice to the firm of her need for FMLA qualifying leave.

EMPLOYER NOTIFICATION

Ms.Newsome stated that in December 2008, she spoke with Andrea Griffith (HR manager at Wood & Lamping) regarding a medical procedure she would need to have completed at the end of January 2009.

Ms.Newsome stated that Ms.Griffith informed her of the process of medical leave under FMLA and sick leave.

STATUS OF COMPLIANCE

Ms. Newsome was hired on or around September 11, 2006. She was terminated on January 9, 2009.

Ms. Newsome states that she gave verbal notice (page 5 of original complaint) in December 2008 and written notice in January 2009 of her need for FMLA leave.

According to Ms. Newsome, she had a conversation with Andrea Griffith about a medical procedure that she needed at the end of January 2009. Ms. Newsome stated that Ms. Griffith told her that she could use paid leave along with her FMLA leave.

Ms. Griffith stated that she only talked to Ms. Newsome about a doctor's appointment later in the month of January 2009. Ms. Griffith stated that there was no mention of a SHC.

Ms. Newsome also stated the she submitted written notice on January 8, 2009. This notice was in the form of an internal leave slip dated January 8, 2009, requesting ½ day off for 'medical' on January 9, 2009.

According to 825.208a of the old regulations, the employee must explain the reasons for the needed leave so as to allow the employer to determine that the leave qualifies under FMLA. Ms. Newsome's request for ½ day off for 'medical' does not give enough information to the employer for determining if it qualifies under FMLA.

Ms. Newsome's request for leave (1/2 day 'medical') was approved by 2 staff attorneys.

On January 9, 2009, Ms. Newsome was informed by Ms. Griffith that her job was eliminated.

Ms. Griffith stated that when Ms. Newsome was terminated, she had not yet received the written notice for ½ day off from Ms. Newsome.

Ms. Griffith stated that Ms. Newsome's termination had nothing to do with FMLA as the firm has granted other employees requests for FMLA. She stated that Ms. Newsome's termination was the result of her job being eliminated. She was the least senior legal secretary and weakest performer. As of today, her position has not been filled.

On March 20, 2009, Wood and Lamping, put forth a settlement offer. The offer stated that Wood and Lamping would pay for the full cost of Ms. Newsome's health insurance for 1 year with the understanding that she would agree to drop all claims against the firm. In a telephone conversation with Ms. Newsome on March 31, 2009, she declined the settlement offer. She also declined the offer in an email on March 31, 2009 to this investigator.

After several attempts to contact Ms. Newsome, contact was made on April 20, 2009 to discuss further settlement issues. She again demanded reinstatement and all back pay. She also requested that she be permitted to take medical leave as 'originally planned.'

This settlement offer was presented to Ms. Griffith at Wood and Lamping. On April 29. 2009, Ms. Griffith declined the offer put forth by Ms. Newsome.

Based on the above information, there was not sufficient evidence to substantiate Ms. Newsome's claim that her rights were violated under FMLA. No evidence was found to show that Ms. Newsome gave Wood and Lamping notice of her intention to take FMLA leave. There is also no evidence to show that the employer denied Ms. Newsome her rights under FMLA.

DISPOSITION

A final conference was held with Ms. Griffith on April 29, 2009. The FMLA was discussed in detail with Ms. Griffith. She stated that she has had other employees on FMLA and there have been no problems. She agreed to continued compliance with the FMLA.

Ms. Newsome was not informed of the final results of the investigation. Ms. Newsome was not satisfied with how the investigation was handled and was not willing to participate in any settlement agreements presented to her. She was only interested in reinstatement and full back pay. She was not willing to hear that violations may not be found.

Every telephone conversation made to Ms. Newsome was met with an angry email the next day. The emails contained threats

It is requested that Ms. Newsome be sent a letter stating that there were no violations found. No further contact will be made between this investigator and Ms. Newsome.

FEBRUARY 1, 2009 – TRANSCRIBED VOICEMAIL FROM PAUL BERNINGER

Denise this is Paul Berninger from the law firm. The reason I'm calling you is that I am aware of the lay-off situation that has taken place and I had some conversations with Andrea due to your situation and I've asked for the opportunity to give you a call. I know you wrote a letter addressing some things to C.J. Schmidt regarding health insurance and I wanted to talk to you about that. I believe that the firm should extend your health insurance coverage for a period of time. I believe that is because I understand that you did say something to Andrea about a need for some kind of medical attention. I don't know what it is and she didn't disclose anything to me in regards to what that was. But what I want to do is to talk to you about that. Find out what it is that you would want in terms of extension of your medical insurance at our cost for a period of time. So that you could attend to that medical need. I would just let you know that there would be one part that I know that I would have to get from you in order for me to convince the firm to extend medical insurance coverage for some period of time and that would basically be a release. By that, I mean that I would write something up that you would sign that would clearly indicate that you would not (under any circumstances) be able to file any kind of a charge against the firm or file a lawsuit.

We do need to meet this afternoon to discuss your being out of the office so much over the last couple of days. Also, you need to inform me in advance on doctor's appointments. 45 minutes before an appointment is not sufficient time. Please see me when you return.

RE: RESPONSE TO YOUR E-MAIL OF 10/15/08

As you are aware, per my voicemail messages of October 9, 2008, my apartment was burglarized, etc. I had to leave work not realizing the magnitude of this crime; however, I was devastated and seriously affected by this crime.

On October 11, 2008, I was admitted to the Emergency Room and test were run out of concerns from the symptoms I was having. The doctor recommended that I return to work on 10/14/08, in which I did. (See Document Attached).

My doctor's appointment for 10/10/08 was scheduled way in advance and prior to the October 9, 2008, criminal actions. The appointment that I set for 10/13/08 was made on 10/10/08; however, had to be cancelled and rescheduled for today in that my doctor wanted this test done right away.

Without going into details where things are at, as a direct and proximate result of the 10/09/08 criminal acts rendered me, a Criminal Complaint has been filed with the FBI (Federal Bureau of Investigations), the NAACP has been put on notice and made aware of this crime, as well as other government authorities. I am not at liberty to disclose anymore than this to you.

I apologize for the inconvenience and the impact this has caused in the performance of my work; however, I am doing my best to work through this all to be best of my abilities.

Thank you for your concerns and understanding through the critical times I am dealing with.

Sincerely,

Denise Newsome

Transcript of Obama's speech

The following is a transcript of Sen. Barack Obama's speech, as provided by Obama's campaign.

We the people, in order to form a more perfect union.

Two hundred and twenty one years ago, in a hall that still stands across the street, a group of men gathered and, with these simple words, launched America's improbable experiment in democracy.

Farmers and scholars; statesmen and patriots who had traveled across an ocean to escape tyranny and persecution finally made real their declaration of independence at a Philadelphia convention that lasted through the spring of 1787.

The document they produced was eventually signed but ultimately unfinished. It was stained by this nation's original sin of slavery, a question that divided the colonies and brought the convention to a stalemate until the founders chose to allow the slave trade to continue for at least 20 more years, and to leave any final resolution to future generations.

Of course, the answer to the slavery question was already embedded within our Constitution -- a Constitution that had at its very core the ideal of equal citizenship under the law; a Constitution that promised its people liberty, and justice, and a union that could be and should be perfected over time.

And yet words on a parchment would not be enough to deliver slaves from bondage, or provide men and women of every color and creed their full rights and obligations as citizens of the United States.

What would be needed were Americans in successive generations who were willing to do their part -- through protests and struggle, on the streets and in the courts, through a civil war and civil disobedience and always at great risk -- to narrow that gap between the promise of our ideals and the reality of their time.

This was one of the tasks we set forth at the beginning of this campaign -- to continue the long march of those who came before us, a march for a more just, more equal, more free, more caring and more prosperous America.

I chose to run for the presidency at this moment in history because I believe deeply that we cannot solve the challenges of our time unless we solve them together -- unless we perfect our union by understanding that we may have different stories, but we hold common hopes; that we may not look the same and we may not have come from the same place, but we all want to move in the same direction -- towards a better future for our children and our grandchildren.

This belief comes from my unyielding faith in the decency and generosity of the American people. But it also comes from my own American story.

I am the son of a black man from Kenya and a white woman from Kansas. I was raised with the help of a white grandfather who survived a Depression to serve in Patton's Army during World War II and a white grandmother who worked on a bomber assembly line at Fort Leavenworth while he was overseas.

I've gone to some of the best schools in America and lived in one of the world's poorest nations. I am married to a black American who carries within her the blood of slaves and slaveowners -- an inheritance we pass on to our two precious daughters.

I have brothers, sisters, nieces, nephews, uncles and cousins, of every race and every hue, scattered across three continents, and for as long as I live, I will never forget that in no other country on Earth is my story even possible.

It's a story that hasn't made me the most conventional candidate. But it is a story that has seared into my genetic makeup the idea that this nation is more than the sum of its parts -- that out of many, we are truly one.

Throughout the first year of this campaign, against all predictions to the contrary, we saw how hungry the American people were for this message of unity.

Despite the temptation to view my candidacy through a purely racial lens, we won commanding victories in states with some of the whitest populations in the country. In South Carolina, where the Confederate Flag still flies, we built a powerful coalition of African-Americans and white Americans.

This is not to say that race has not been an issue in the campaign. At various stages in the campaign, some commentators have deemed me either "too black" or "not black enough."

We saw racial tensions bubble to the surface during the week before the South Carolina primary. The press has scoured every exit poll for the latest evidence of racial polarization, not just in terms of white and black, but black and brown as well.

And yet, it has only been in the last couple of weeks that the discussion of race in this campaign has taken a particularly divisive turn.

On one end of the spectrum, we've heard the implication that my candidacy is somehow an exercise in affirmative action, that it's based solely on the desire of wide-eyed liberals to purchase racial reconciliation on the cheap.

On the other end, we've heard my former pastor, Rev. Jeremiah Wright, use incendiary language to express views that have the potential not only to widen the racial divide, but views that denigrate both the greatness and the goodness of our nation -- that rightly offend white and black alike.

I have already condemned, in unequivocal terms, the statements of Rev. Wright that have caused such controversy. For some, nagging questions remain.

Did I know him to be an occasionally fierce critic of American domestic and foreign policy? Of course. Did I ever hear him make remarks that could be considered controversial while I sat in church? Yes. Did I strongly disagree with many of his political views? Absolutely -- just as I'm sure many of you have heard remarks from your pastors, priests or rabbis with which you strongly disagreed.

But the remarks that have caused this recent firestorm weren't simply controversial. They weren't simply a religious leader's effort to speak out against perceived injustice.

Instead, they expressed a profoundly distorted view of this country -- a view that sees white racism as endemic, and that elevates what is wrong with America above all that we know is right with America, a view that sees the conflicts in the Middle East as rooted primarily in the actions of stalwart allies like Israel, instead of emanating from the perverse and hateful ideologies of radical Islam.

As such, Rev. Wright's comments were not only wrong but divisive, divisive at a time when we need unity; racially charged at a time when we need to come together to solve a set of monumental problems -- two wars, a terrorist threat, a falling economy, a chronic health care crisis and potentially devastating climate change; problems that are neither black or white or Latino or Asian, but rather problems that confront us all.

Given my background, my politics, and my professed values and ideals, there will no doubt be those for whom my statements of condemnation are not enough. Why associate myself with Rev. Wright in the first place, they may ask? Why not join another church?

And I confess that if all that I knew of Rev. Wright were the snippets of those sermons that have run in an endless loop on the television and YouTube, or if Trinity United Church of Christ conformed to the caricatures being peddled by some commentators, there is no doubt that I would react in much the same way

But the truth is, that isn't all that I know of the man. The man I met more than 20 years ago is a man who helped introduce me to my Christian faith, a man who spoke to me about our obligations to love one another; to care for the sick and lift up the poor.

He is a man who served his country as a U.S. Marine, who has studied and lectured at some of the finest universities and seminaries in the country, and who for over thirty years led a church that serves the community by doing God's work here on Earth -- by housing the homeless, ministering to the needy, providing day care services and scholarships and prison ministries, and reaching out to those suffering from HIV/AIDS.

In my first book, "Dreams From My Father," I described the experience of my first service at Trinity:

"People began to shout, to rise from their seats and clap and cry out, a forceful wind carrying the reverend's voice up into the rafters....And in that single note -- hope! -- I heard something else; at the foot of that cross, inside the thousands of churches across the city, I imagined the stories of ordinary black people merging with the stories of David and Goliath, Moses and Pharaoh, the Christians in the lion's den, Ezekiel's field of dry bones.

"Those stories -- of survival, and freedom, and hope -- became our story, my story; the blood that had spilled was our blood, the tears our tears; until this black church, on this bright day, seemed once more a vessel carrying the story of a people into future generations and into a larger world.

"Our trials and triumphs became at once unique and universal, black and more than black; in chronicling our journey, the stories and songs gave us a means to reclaim memories that we didn't need to feel shame about...memories that all people might study and cherish -- and with which we could start to rebuild."

That has been my experience at Trinity. Like other predominantly black churches across the country, Trinity embodies the black community in its entirety -- the doctor and the welfare mom, the model student and the former gang-banger.

Like other black churches, Trinity's services are full of raucous laughter and sometimes bawdy humor. They are full of dancing, clapping, screaming and shouting that may seem jarring to the untrained ear.

The church contains in full the kindness and cruelty, the fierce intelligence and the shocking ignorance, the struggles and successes, the love and yes, the bitterness and bias that make up the black experience in America.

And this helps explain, perhaps, my relationship with Rev. Wright. As imperfect as he may be, he has been like family to me. He strengthened my faith, officiated my wedding, and baptized my children.

Not once in my conversations with him have I heard him talk about any ethnic group in derogatory terms, or treat whites with whom he interacted with anything but courtesy and respect. He contains within him the contradictions -- the good and the bad -- of the community that he has served diligently for so many years.

I can no more disown him than I can disown the black community. I can no more disown him than I can my white grandmother -- a woman who helped raise me, a woman who sacrificed again and again for me, a woman who loves me as much as she loves anything in this world, but a woman who once confessed her fear of black men who passed by her on the street, and who on more than one occasion has uttered racial or ethnic stereotypes that made me cringe.

These people are a part of me. And they are a part of America, this country that I love.

Some will see this as an attempt to justify or excuse comments that are simply inexcusable. I can assure you it is not. I suppose the politically safe thing would be to move on from this episode and just hope that it fades into the woodwork.

We can dismiss Rev. Wright as a crank or a demagogue, just as some have dismissed Geraldine Ferraro, in the aftermath of her recent statements, as harboring some deep-seated racial bias.

But race is an issue that I believe this nation cannot afford to ignore right now. We would be making the same mistake that Rev. Wright made in his offending sermons about America -- to simplify and stereotype and amplify the negative to the point that it distorts reality.

The fact is that the comments that have been made and the issues that have surfaced over the last few weeks reflect the complexities of race in this country that we've never really worked through -- a part of our union that we have yet to perfect.

And if we walk away now, if we simply retreat into our respective corners, we will never be able to come together and solve challenges like health care, or education, or the need to find good jobs for every American.

Understanding this reality requires a reminder of how we arrived at this point. As William Faulkner once wrote, "The past isn't dead and buried. In fact, it isn't even past." We do not need to recite here the history of racial injustice in this country.

But we do need to remind ourselves that so many of the disparities that exist in the African-American community today can be directly traced to inequalities passed on from an earlier generation that suffered under the brutal legacy of slavery and Jim Crow.

Segregated schools were, and are, inferior schools; we still haven't fixed them, fifty years after Brown v. Board of Education, and the inferior education they provided, then and now, helps explain the pervasive achievement gap between today's black and white students.

Legalized discrimination -- where blacks were prevented, often through violence, from owning property, or loans were not granted to African-American business owners, or black homeowners could not access FHA mortgages, or blacks were excluded from unions, or the police force, or fire departments -- meant that black families could not amass any meaningful wealth to bequeath to future generations.

That history helps explain the wealth and income gap between black and white, and the concentrated pockets of poverty that persists in so many of today's urban and rural communities.

A lack of economic opportunity among black men, and the shame and frustration that came from not being able to provide for one's family, contributed to the erosion of black families -- a problem that welfare policies for many years may have worsened.

And the lack of basic services in so many urban black neighborhoods -- parks for kids to play in, police walking the beat, regular garbage pick-up and building code enforcement -- all helped create a cycle of violence, blight and neglect that continue to haunt us.

This is the reality in which Rev. Wright and other African-Americans of his generation grew up. They came of age in the late fifties and early sixties, a time when segregation was still the law of the land and opportunity was systematically constricted.

What's remarkable is not how many failed in the face of discrimination, but rather how many men and women overcame the odds; how many were able to make a way out of no way for those like me who would come after them.

But for all those who scratched and clawed their way to get a piece of the American Dream, there were many who didn't make it -- those who were ultimately defeated, in one way or another, by discrimination.

That legacy of defeat was passed on to future generations -- those young men and, increasingly, young women who we see standing on street corners or languishing in our prisons, without hope or prospects for the future. Even for those blacks who did make it, questions of race, and racism, continue to define their worldview in fundamental ways.

For the men and women of Rev. Wright's generation, the memories of humiliation and doubt and fear have not gone away; nor has the anger and the bitterness of those years.

That anger may not get expressed in public, in front of white co-workers or white friends. But it does find voice in the barbershop or around the kitchen table. At times, that anger is exploited by politicians, to gin up votes along racial lines, or to make up for a politician's own failings.

And occasionally it finds voice in the church on Sunday morning, in the pulpit and in the pews. The fact that so many people are surprised to hear that anger in some of Rev. Wright's sermons simply reminds us of the old truism that the most segregated hour in American life occurs on Sunday morning.

That anger is not always productive; indeed, all too often it distracts attention from solving real problems; it keeps us from squarely facing our own complicity in our condition, and prevents the African-American community from forging the alliances it needs to bring about real change.

But the anger is real; it is powerful; and to simply wish it away, to condemn it without understanding its roots, only serves to widen the chasm of misunderstanding that exists between the races.

In fact, a similar anger exists within segments of the white community. Most working- and middle-class white Americans don't feel that they have been particularly privileged by their race.

Their experience is the immigrant experience -- as far as they're concerned, no one's handed them anything, they've built it from scratch. They've worked hard all their lives, many times only to see their jobs shipped overseas or their pension dumped after a lifetime of labor.

They are anxious about their futures, and feel their dreams slipping away; in an era of stagnant wages and global competition, opportunity comes to be seen as a zero sum game, in which your dreams come at my expense.

So when they are told to bus their children to a school across town; when they hear that an African-American is getting an advantage in landing a good job or a spot in a good college because of an injustice that they themselves never committed; when they're told that their fears about crime in urban neighborhoods are somehow prejudiced, resentment builds over time.

Like the anger within the black community, these resentments aren't always expressed in polite company. But they have helped shape the political landscape for at least a generation.

Anger over welfare and affirmative action helped forge the Reagan Coalition. Politicians routinely exploited fears of crime for their own electoral ends. Talk show hosts and conservative commentators built entire careers unmasking bogus claims of racism while dismissing legitimate discussions of racial injustice and inequality as mere political correctness or reverse racism.

Just as black anger often proved counterproductive, so have these white resentments distracted attention from the real culprits of the middle-class squeeze -- a corporate culture rife with inside dealing, questionable accounting practices and short-term greed; a Washington dominated by lobbyists and special interests; economic policies that favor the few over the many.

And yet, to wish away the resentments of white Americans, to label them as misguided or even racist, without recognizing they are grounded in legitimate concerns -- this too widens the racial divide, and blocks the path to understanding.

This is where we are right now. It's a racial stalemate we've been stuck in for years. Contrary to the claims of some of my critics, black and white, I have never been so naive as to believe that we can get beyond our racial divisions in a single election cycle, or with a single candidacy -- particularly a candidacy as imperfect as my own.

But I have asserted a firm conviction -- a conviction rooted in my faith in God and my faith in the American people -- that working together we can move beyond some of our old racial wounds, and that in fact we have no choice if we are to continue on the path of a more perfect union.

For the African-American community, that path means embracing the burdens of our past without becoming victims of our past. It means continuing to insist on a full measure of justice in every aspect of American life.

But it also means binding our particular grievances -- for better health care, and better schools, and better jobs -- to the larger aspirations of all Americans, the white woman struggling to break the glass ceiling, the white man whose been laid off, the immigrant trying to feed his family.

And it means taking full responsibility for own lives -- by demanding more from our fathers, and spending more time with our children, and reading to them, and teaching them that while they may face challenges and discrimination in their own lives, they must never succumb to despair or cynicism; they must always believe that they can write their own destiny.

Ironically, this quintessentially American -- and yes, conservative -- notion of self-help found frequent expression in Rev. Wright's sermons. But what my former pastor too often failed to understand is that embarking on a program of self-help also requires a belief that society can change.

The profound mistake of Rev. Wright's sermons is not that he spoke about racism in our society. It's that he spoke as if our society was static; as if no progress has been made; as if this country -- a country that has made it possible for one of his own members to run for the highest office in the land and build a coalition of white and black, Latino and Asian, rich and poor, young and old -- is still irrevocably bound to a tragic past.

But what we know -- what we have seen -- is that America can change. That is the true genius of this nation. What we have already achieved gives us hope -- the audacity to hope -- for what we can and must achieve tomorrow.

In the white community, the path to a more perfect union means acknowledging that what ails the African-American community does not just exist in the minds of black people; that the legacy of discrimination -- and current incidents of discrimination, while less overt than in the past -- are real and must be addressed.

Not just with words, but with deeds -- by investing in our schools and our communities; by enforcing our civil rights laws and ensuring fairness in our criminal justice system; by providing this generation with ladders of opportunity that were unavailable for previous generations.

It requires all Americans to realize that your dreams do not have to come at the expense of my dreams; that investing in the health, welfare and education of black and brown and white children will ultimately help all of America prosper.

In the end, then, what is called for is nothing more, and nothing less, than what all the world's great religions demand -- that we do unto others as we would have them do unto us. Let us be our brother's keeper, Scripture tells us. Let us be our sister's keeper. Let us find that common stake we all have in one another, and let our politics reflect that spirit as well.

For we have a choice in this country. We can accept a politics that breeds division, and conflict, and cynicism. We can tackle race only as spectacle -- as we did in the O.J. trial -- or in the wake of tragedy, as we did in the aftermath of Katrina -- or as fodder for the nightly news.

We can play Rev. Wright's sermons on every channel, every day and talk about them from now until the election, and make the only question in this campaign whether or not the American people think that I somehow believe or sympathize with his most offensive words.

We can pounce on some gaffe by a Hillary supporter as evidence that she's playing the race card, or we can speculate on whether white men will all flock to John McCain in the general election regardless of his policies.

We can do that.

But if we do, I can tell you that in the next election, we'll be talking about some other distraction. And then another one. And then another one. And nothing will change.

That is one option. Or, at this moment, in this election, we can come together and say, "Not this time." This time we want to talk about the crumbling schools that are stealing the future of black children and white children and Asian children and Hispanic children and Native American children.

This time we want to reject the cynicism that tells us that these kids can't learn; that those kids who don't look like us are somebody else's problem. The children of America are not those kids, they are our kids, and we will not let them fall behind in a 21st Century economy. Not this time.

This time we want to talk about how the lines in the emergency room are filled with whites and blacks and Hispanics who do not have health care, who don't have the power on their own to overcome the special interests in Washington, but who can take them on if we do it together.

This time we want to talk about the shuttered mills that once provided a decent life for men and women of every race, and the homes for sale that once belonged to Americans from every religion, every region, every walk of life.

This time we want to talk about the fact that the real problem is not that someone who doesn't look like you might take your job; it's that the corporation you work for will ship it overseas for nothing more than a profit.

This time we want to talk about the men and women of every color and creed who serve together, and fight together, and bleed together under the same proud flag.

We want to talk about how to bring them home from a war that never should've been authorized and never should've been waged, and we want to talk about how we'll show our patriotism by caring for them, and their families, and giving them the benefits they have earned.

I would not be running for president if I didn't believe with all my heart that this is what the vast majority of Americans want for this country. This union may never be perfect, but generation after generation has shown that it can always be perfected.

And today, whenever I find myself feeling doubtful or cynical about this possibility, what gives me the most hope is the next generation -- the young people whose attitudes and beliefs and openness to change have already made history in this election.

There is one story in particularly that I'd like to leave you with today -- a story I told when I had the great honor of speaking on Dr. King's birthday at his home church, Ebenezer Baptist, in Atlanta.

There is a young, 23-year-old white woman named Ashley Baia who organized for our campaign in Florence, South Carolina. She had been working to organize a mostly African-American community since the beginning of this campaign, and one day she was at a roundtable discussion where everyone went around telling their story and why they were there.

And Ashley said that when she was 9 years old, her mother got cancer. And because she had to miss days of work, she was let go and lost her health care. They had to file for bankruptcy, and that's when Ashley decided that she had to do something to help her mom.

She knew that food was one of their most expensive costs, and so Ashley convinced her mother that what she really liked and really wanted to eat more than anything else was mustard and relish sandwiches. Because that was the cheapest way to eat.

She did this for a year until her mom got better, and she told everyone at the roundtable that the reason she joined our campaign was so that she could help the millions of other children in the country who want and need to help their parents, too.

Now Ashley might have made a different choice. Perhaps somebody told her along the way that the source of her mother's problems were blacks who were on welfare and too lazy to work, or Hispanics who were coming into the country illegally. But she didn't. She sought out allies in her fight against injustice.

Anyway, Ashley finishes her story and then goes around the room and asks everyone else why they're supporting the campaign. They all have different stories and reasons. Many bring up a specific issue. And finally they come to this elderly black man who's been sitting there quietly the entire time.

And Ashley asks him why he's there. And he does not bring up a specific issue. He does not say health care or the economy. He does not say education or the war. He does not say that he was there because of Barack Obama. He simply says to everyone in the room, "I am here because of Ashley."

"I'm here because of Ashley." By itself, that single moment of recognition between that young white girl and that old black man is not enough. It is not enough to give health care to the sick, or jobs to the jobless, or education to our children.

But it is where we start. It is where our union grows stronger. And as so many generations have come to realize over the course of the two-hundred and twenty one years since a band of patriots signed that document in Philadelphia, that is where the perfection begins.

RE: Wood & Lamping, LLP
File No. 1537034

Dear Ms. Petric:

In follow up to our telephone conversation on this morning, attached please find the following documents:

1. January 11, 2009 E-mail 2009 to Andrea Griffith & C.J. Schmidt.[1]
2. January 30, 2009 Facsimile/E-mail to Andrea Griffith & C.J. Schmidt.
3. February 2, 2009 Facsimile/E-mail to Paul Berninger.
4. February 4, 2009 (Received 2/5/09) Letter from Paul R. Berninger.
5. February 6, 2009 Facsimile/E-mail to Paul R. Berninger.
6. February 6, 2009 Letter/Facsimile to David Meranus (Attorney representing company suing me) – provided Paul Berninger, Andrea Griffith, C.J. Schmidt and U.S. Legislature/Congress with copy of this letter).

For your review, I have attached the Statutes (U.S. Codes) governing the Secretary of Labor's/Department of Labor"s duty to INVESTIGATE this charge to insure that Wood & Lamping is in compliance with the FMLA. (29 USCA § 2616). The Secretary of Labor"s filing of lawsuit on my behalf in court if violations are found – in the interest of justice and equal protection of the laws/due process of laws, etc. afforded to me under the applicable statutes/laws governing such matters, I do not believe that I should be required to bring a private lawsuit. The laws are clear that it is the duty and/or responsibility of the Secretary of Labor to bring action to deter violations under the FMLA. Moreover, see that the applicable INJUNCTION is imposed along with any other relief I am entitled to. (29 USCA § 2617 – Enforcement). I believe that an investigation into this matter, will reveal that Wood & Lamping interfered with rights secured and/or guaranteed under the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA), United States Constitution and other statutes/laws rendering me protection from such unlawful/illegal practices rendered against me. (29 USCA § 2615) - I have cut & pasted these statutes and attached them hereto.

> Conducting a Thorough Investigation[2]
> Because discrimination often is subtle, and there rarely is a "smoking gun," [Fn. 45 - See Aman v. Cort Furniture Rental Corp., 85 F.3d 1074, 1081-82 (3rd Cir. 1996)("It has become easier to coat various forms of discrimination with the appearance of propriety, or to ascribe some other less odious intention to what is in reality discriminatory behavior. In other words, while discriminatory conduct persists, violators have learned not to leave the proverbial „smoking gun" behind."); cf. McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 792, 801 (1973)("it is abundantly clear that Title VII tolerates no racial discrimination, subtle or otherwise").] determining whether race played a role in the decisionmaking requires examination of all of the surrounding facts and circumstances. The presence or absence of any one piece of evidence often will not be determinative. Sources of information can include witness statements, including consideration of their credibility; documents; direct observation; and statistical evidence such as EEO-1 data, among others. See EEOC Compl. Man., Vol. I, Sec. 26, Selection and Analysis of Evidence." A non-exhaustive list of important areas of inquiry and analysis is set out below.

It is clear that Wood & Lamping deprived me rights under the FMLA that they afforded to whites similarly situated.

I believe the laws are clear as to what I am entitled to and the Department of Labor's records should contain the applicable policies and procedures to be followed regarding the handling of such claims. I should not be required to have to bring a private lawsuit, when the Secretary of Labor has the legal authority and jurisdiction to bring legal action on my behalf as it has done for others in the past where violations have been found.

I would like to add and/or reiterate some of the following case statutes/laws to support my FMLA Complaint and the relief sought:

> Regarding any argument Wood & Lamping may assert regarding "reduction-in-force, etc." the law is clear:

>
> [6] Employees' rights to obtain leave under FMLA are essentially prescriptive, setting substantive floors for conduct by employers, and creating entitlements for employees. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 2 et seq., 29 U.S.C.A. § 2601 et seq.

[2] EEOC Compliance Manual Section 15: Race and Color Discrimination

[9] Employer's motive is relevant to whether employer has violated proscriptive provisions of FMLA protecting from discrimination those employees who exercise their rights to leave; the issue is whether employer took the adverse action because of a prohibited reason or for a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 105(a)(1, 2), 29 U.S.C.A. § 2615(a)(1, 2).

[18] FMLA protects employee who visits a doctor with symptoms that are eventually diagnosed as constituting a serious health condition, even if, at the time of the initial medical appointments, the illness has not yet been diagnosed nor its degree of seriousness determined. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 102(a)(1)(D), 29 U.S.C.A. § 2612(a)(1)(D); 29 C.F.R. § 825.114(b).

[21] For employee to be unable to perform his or her job within meaning of FMLA section entitling employee to 12 weeks of leave for serious health condition making employee unable to perform his or her job, it will suffice if employee is unable to perform job because of need to obtain medical treatment or diagnosis; he or she does not have to be physically unable to work. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 102(a)(1)(D), 29 U.S.C.A. § 2612(a)(1)(D); 29 C.F.R. § 825.114(a)(2)(i), (b).

[23] Employer may not use reduction-in-force (RIF), reorganization, or improved-efficiency rationale as pretext to mask actual discrimination or retaliation for employee's exercise of FMLA rights; the mere incantation of the mantra of "efficiency" is not a talisman insulating an employer from liability for invidious discrimination. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 105(a), 29 U.S.C.A. § 2615(a); 29 C.F.R. § 825.220.

> n.23 - But an employer may not use its RIF/reorganization/improved-efficiency rationale as a pretext to mask actual discrimination or retaliation; the mere incantation of the mantra of "efficiency" is not a talisman insulating an employer from liability for invidious discrimination. See McDonnell Douglas, 411 U.S. at 804, 93 S.Ct. 1817 (employer may not use an ostensibly legitimate reason for an adverse action as a pretext for discrimination that is prohibited by statute); 29 U.S.C. § 2615(a); 29 C.F.R. § 825.220; cf. INS v. Chadha, 462 U.S. 919, 944, 103 S.Ct. 2764, 77 L.Ed.2d 317 (1983): "Convenience and efficiency are not the primary objectives-or the hallmarks-of democratic government." Nor are they the objectives of public policy underlying statutes like the FMLA or the ADA.

[25]Even if employer's articulated reason for its adverse employment action is facially neutral, as in the case of a reduction in force (RIF), if in reality the employer acted for reason prohibited by the FMLA's retaliation provision*, then its asserted legitimate reason and its ostensibly nondiscriminatory* selection criteria as to who is subject to RIF cannot insulate it from liability. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 105(a), 29 U.S.C.A. § 2615(a).

> N.25 - Because of the availability of seemingly neutral rationales under which an employer can hide its discriminatory intent, and because of the difficulty of accurately determining whether an employer's motive is legitimate or is a pretext for discrimination, there is reason to be concerned about the possibility that an employer could manipulate its decisions to purge employees it wanted to eliminate. See Weldon v. Kraft, Inc., 896 F.2d 793, 798 (3d Cir.1990) (Subjective evaluations of performance "are more susceptible of abuse and more likely to mask pretext" than objective job qualifications.) (internal quotation marks omitted). The law does not permit this. Even if an employer's actions and articulated reasons are facially neutral (e.g., a RIF), if in reality the employer acted for a prohibited reason (e.g., retaliation for exercising a protected right), then its asserted legitimate reason for the RIF and its ostensibly nondiscriminatory selection criteria as to who gets RIFed cannot insulate it from liability. As Judge Posner wrote in the context of . . . discrimination, "[a] RIF is not an open sesame to discrimination against a . . .person. Even if the employer has a compelling reason wholly unrelated to the disabilities of any of its employees to reduce the size of its work force, this does not entitle it to use the occasion as a convenient opportunity to get rid of its . . . workers." Matthews v. Commonwealth Edison Co., 128 F.3d 1194, 1195 (7th Cir.1997) (citation omitted). Nor can it be an opportunity to get rid of workers who exercise their FMLA right to take medical leave for serious medical conditions. See 29 U.S.C. § 2615(a).

OHIO LAW:

Bradley v. Mary Rutan Hosp. Assoc., 322 F.Supp.2d 926 (S.D.Ohio.E.Div.,2004) - An employer violates the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA) when it violates either the FMLA statute itself or its implementing regulations. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, §§ 104, 105, 29 U.S.C.A. §§ 2614, 2415; 29 C.F.R. § 825.220(b).

Hollins v. Ohio Bell Telephone Co., 496 F.Supp.2d 864(S.D.Ohio.W.Div.,2007) - When an employee complies with the requirements of the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA), the employee is entitled to certain substantive rights under the Act, including the right to take FMLA leave and the right, upon return from the leave, to be restored to the position of employment held when the leave commenced or to an equivalent

> Schmauch v. Honda of America Manufacturing, Inc., 295 F.Supp.2d 823(S.D.Ohio.E.Div.,2003) - Employers have prescriptive obligation under the FMLA, i.e., they must grant employees substantive rights guaranteed by the FMLA, and they have a proscriptive obligation, i.e., they may not penalize employees for exercising such rights. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 2 et seq., 29 U.S.C.A. § 2601 et seq.
> Skrjanc v. Great Lakes Power Service Co., 272 F.3d 309(C.A.6.Ohio,2001) - The FMLA protects an employee's right to be treated the same as other similarly situated employees. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 2 et seq., 29 U.S.C.A. § 2601 et seq.

As I shared with you, the offer by Wood & Lamping – payment of medical coverage in that I do not file any charges, lawsuits against it for the violations (unlawful/illegal acts) rendered me are clearly in violation of my protected rights under the FMLA, Constitution, Civil Rights Act, etc. I took such an offer as a means to extort and/or bribe me to waive protected rights secured to me under the statutes/laws governing such matters. I WILL NOT waive protected rights. Wood & Lamping violated the laws and therefore, is subject to the consequences for said violations. As I shared with you, their unlawful/illegal acts (i.e. taking of evidence Policies & Procedures Manual, etc.) clearly supports PRETEXT. Not only that, to be offering to provide me medical coverage ONLY is knowledge that they have committed violation(s) – this offer is not being made in good faith, but for purposes of their own SELFISHNESS and interest with total disregard to my legal and/or protected rights. The additional information that has surfaced since my termination also brings to light the criminal/civil wrongs of Wood & Lamping against me to which they and their cohorts are liable. I do not wish to waive rights secured/guaranteed to me and am requesting that the Secretary of Labor bring the applicable actions to deter the legal wrongs rendered me.

> McConnell v. Applied Performance Technologies, Inc., 98 Fed.Appx. 397 (C.A.6.Ohio,2004) - Former employee could not waive claims for violations of Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) in settlement agreement with employer. Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, § 1 et seq., 29 U.S.C.A. § 201 et seq.

I recall your asking whether or not I provided Wood & Lamping with Certification and/or the appropriate form for this leave. I followed the process as normal. If there was any other form Wood & Lamping required, then it should have been provided to me to take with me to my January 29, 2009 appointment and the additional time that would be needed, would have been provided. However, to prematurely terminate my employment and interfere with my rights under the FMLA, etc. is clearly unlawful/illegal and in violation of my protected rights. The acts of Wood & Lamping were willful, malicious and wanton and deliberately done to interfere with my rights under the FMLA; as well as engaging (it appears) in other criminal/civil wrongs against me. This is not mere speculation; I have produced factual/evidential material to support the ill motives of Wood & Lamping.

> Killian v. Yorozu Automotive Tennessee, Inc., 454 F.3d 549 (6th Cir. 2006) - Even if employee fails to provide medical certification in timely fashion, employer's remedy under FMLA regulations is delayed leave, not termination. Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 103(e), 29 U.S.C.A. § 2613(e); 29 C.F.R. §§ 825.305(b), 825.311.

In the interest of justice, the Secretary of Labor may bring a lawsuit on my behalf to obtain any other relief that I am entitled to under the FMLA and I am entitled to a JURY TRIAL:

> Helmly v. Stone Container Corp., 957 F.Supp. 1274 (1997) - Right to jury trial exists under Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA), even though FMLA, like its sister statute Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), which also provides right to jury trial, is silent on the issue. Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, § 1 et seq., 29 U.S.C.A. § 201 et seq.; Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, § 2 et seq., 29 U.S.C.A. § 2601 et seq.
>
> Even if the motion had been timely filed it would have been denied. While the text of the Family and Medical Leave Act, 29 U.S.C. § 2601 et seq. ("FMLA"), is conspicuously silent as to the right of trial by jury, this Court has already indicated that the FMLA is a closer companion to the Fair Labor Standards Act, 29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq. ("FLSA"), than to the Title VII legislation referenced by Defendants. See Court's Order of November 4, 1996, p. 13 (quoting Freemon v. Foley, 911 F.Supp. 326, 330 (N.D.Ill.1995)). Though the relief available under the civil enforcement provisions of the FLSA, 29 U.S.C. § 216(c), is nearly identical to that available under the FMLA, 29 U.S.C. § 2617(a), the text of the FLSA contains no explicit right to a jury trial. Despite this seemingly glaring omission, our predecessor circuit held that the damages provisions of the statute were actions at law and therefore "on proper demand, are triable before a jury." Wirtz v. Jones, 340 F.2d 901, 904 (5th Cir.1965) FN1 (citing Lewis v. Times Publishing Co., 185 F.2d 457 (5th Cir.1950); Olearchick v. American Steel Foundries, 73 F.Supp. 273 (W.D.Pa.1947)). This legal conclusion was clearly ratified by the Supreme Court in Lorillard v. Pons, 434 U.S. 575, 576, 98 S.Ct. 866, 867-68, 55 L.Ed.2d 40 (1978), when it pronounced that there exists a Seventh Amendment jury trial right under the civil enforcement damages provisions of the FLSA despite the absence of any language creating that right.

City of Prichard,* 661 F.2d 1206, 1209 (11th Cir.1981). In fact, the Wirtz v. Jones case has been expressly recognized as current binding authority in the Eleventh Circuit. See EEOC v. Chrysler Corp., 759 F.2d 1523, 1525 (11th Cir.1985).

Additionally, where, as here, a statute is silent as to a given issue, if the district court "ascertains that Congress had an intention on the precise question at issue, that intention is the law and must be given effect." Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 843 n. 9, 104 S.Ct. 2778, 2781 n. 9, 81 L.Ed.2d 694 (1984). One commentator has examined the evident adoption of the procedural provisions of the FLSA within the FMLA and concluded that Congress intended to incorporate sub silentio the right to a jury trial for damages under the FMLA: "By incorporating the procedural provisions of the FLSA, Congress presumably signaled its intent to afford a right to jury trial in private civil actions under the FMLA." Frank Morris, Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, p. 17 (1994).

In reviewing the legislative history of the FMLA, it is all too certain that Congress did intend to align the procedures of the FMLA with those of the FLSA. See Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources Majority Report on 1993 S. 5, Sections I and IV, S. Rep. 103-3 (1993); House Committee on Education and Labor Report on 1993 H.R. 1, H.R. Rep. 103-8(I), U.S.Code Cong. & Admin.News 1993, 3. Through this analysis, it appears that the remarks of Professor Morris are prescient and that the jury trial right pronounced in Lorillard is to be found in the FLSA's sister statute, the FMLA.

Furthermore, it is evident from the comments of disdain from the opposition that Congress intended to provide a jury trial right under the statute. Rising in opposition to what was then House Resolution 1, Rep. Harris W. Fawell (R-IL), gave this summary of what the future FMLA would mean for employers such as Defendants: "Employers *1276 will be subject to a Federal jury trial and possible damages, liquidated damages, expert witness fees, mandated legal fees, injunctions to rehire, promote, and so forth." 139 Cong. Rec. H391 (daily ed. February 3, 1993). Additionally, the House Committee on Education and Labor's Minority Report gave this summary of the changes made in the FMLA since the time it was twice vetoed by President Bush during his administration:

H.R. 1 has been considerably improved over past versions of the legislation considered by this Committee. Damages have been reduced from potentially quadruple lost backpay and benefits to double cost backpay and benefits, with interest, plus attorneys' fees and expert witness fees. Further, the enforcement structure of the bill has been simplified; however, it still retains the same two enforcement pillars of H.R. 2, as reported in the previous Congress-that is, DOL enforcement and private law suits, with jury trials.

H.R.Rep. No. 103-8 (1993).

Legislative history subsequent to President Clinton's enactment of the bill also indicates that Congress had no intention other than to silently include the > jury trial right. In support of his bill designed to extend the protections of the recently passed FMLA to employees of Congress, Rep. William F. Goodling (R-PA), stated that the purpose of the bill was simply to give "a private cause of action by House employees in Federal district court against Members, including the same procedures (including jury trials) and the same damages, attorney fees, and court costs as would be available against private sector employees." 139 Cong. Rec. E-1597 (daily ed. June 23, 1993).

>
> Given the parallel procedural structure between the FMLA and the FLSA and given the legislative history which clearly presumes a right to a jury trial, this Court can only conclude that the United States Magistrate Judge in Hicks v. Maytag Corp., 1995 WL 908171 (E.D.Tenn.1995), was incorrect when he declared that there is no right to a jury trial in an FMLA case. A plaintiff in an FMLA case possesses the right to have a jury determine whether an employer is liable and to what extent, in damages, that employer is liable to the employee. In the instant case, Plaintiff properly asserted the right to a jury trial and he will have a jury hear all of his claims, including the FMLA claim. Any portion of Plaintiff's claim sounding in equity (i.e., for reinstatement, promotion, or the like) will, of course, be decided by the undersigned judge and will not be considered by the jury.

> 957 F.Supp. 1274, 3 Wage & Hour Cas.2d (BNA) 1629, 9 NDLR P 269

I am certain that Wood & Lamping"s acts are in violation of my protected rights and that of the FMLA. Moreover, that their reasons provided to me for termination is FALSE and PRETEXT. Wood & Lamping was aware that I was presently engaged in protected activities as well as its obtaining knowledge of past participation in protected activities – it elected to continue its unlawful/illegal practices in efforts of aiding David Meranus in the lawsuit they knew and/or should have known was going to be filed against me. In efforts of aiding Mr. Meranus and his client(s); Wood & Lamping made a conscious decision to interfere with my rights under the FMLA as well as other protected rights to aid Mr. Meranus. I have the legal right to seek recovery of and against Wood & Lamping and Mr. Meranus and others under a separate action. Therefore, as a matter of law, I AM NOT required to WAIVE any rights (and therefore do not) to appease Wood & Lamping – let them reap from the consequences of their actions.

Given the facts, evidence and legal conclusions presented, not only in my FMLA Complaint, but also the attached documents, I believe a reasonable mind may conclude that it is not in my best interest and/or well being to return to Wood & Lamping. Not only that, Wood & Lamping has engaged (in acts clearly prohibited by statutes/laws) with others to blacklist me and to keep me from working – i.e. financially devastate me, deprive me life, liberties and the pursuit of happiness. It is clear that I have tried to move on with my life; however, the stalking, harassment, etc. of persons like Mr. Meranus (and/others on behalf of their clients) is unlawful/illegal and criminal in nature. Wood & Lamping engaged in such wrongs and clearly from their acts do not want me in their employment. Therefore, let them provide me with the relief I am entitled to under the FMLA for such violations:

EMPLOYER CREDIBILITY[3]

The credibility of the employer‟s explanation is key and must be judged in light of all the evidence obtained during the investigation. If an employer‟s explanation for the employee‟s treatment ultimately is not credible, that is powerful evidence that discrimination is the most likely explanation. [Fn. 59 – See Reeves,[4] 530 U.S. at 147 ("Proof that the defendant‟s explanation is unworthy of credence is simply one form of circumstantial evidence that is probative of intentional discrimination, and it may be quite persuasive. Proving the employer‟s reason false becomes part of (and often considerably assists) the greater enterprise of proving that the real reason was intentional discrimination. In appropriate circumstances, the trier of fact can reasonably infer from the falsity of the explanation that the employer is dissembling to cover up a discriminatory purpose. Such an inference is consistent with the general principle of evidence law that the factfinder is entitled to consider a party‟s dishonesty about a material fact as affirmative evidence of guilt.")(citations and internal quotation marks omitted).] An employer‟s credibility will be undermined if its explanation is unsupported by or contrary to the balance of the facts. Similarly, the credibility of the explanation can be called into question if it is unduly vague, [Fn. 60 – Employers have leeway to make subjective decisions, but regardless of whether the reasons are objective or subjective, the employer‟s "explanation of its legitimate reasons must be clear and reasonably specific" so that "the plaintiff is afforded a „full and fair opportunity‟ to demonstrate pretext." See Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine, 450 U.S. 248, 258 (1981). The explanation must be clearly set forth through the *presentation of evidence. Id. at 255. A person evaluating a decision based on subjective factors should do so carefully because subjective factors "are more susceptible of abuse and more likely to mask pretext." See Goosby v. Johnson & Johnson Med., Inc., 228 F.3d 313, 320 (3rd Cir. 2000)(citation and quotation marks omitted)] appears to be an after-the-fact explanation, or appears otherwise fabricated (e.g., the explanation shifts, or inconsistent reasons are given). . . .

Elements of Damages – In General: All employment-related losses for salaried and hourly wage employees are recoverable in a wrongful discharge suit, regardless of whether the action sounds in contract or tort. Thus, the employee may recover back pay, bonuses, and commissions that would have been earned but for the dismissal. The employee‟s recovery may include damages for loss of fringe benefits. . . The employee is also entitled to recover the cost of securing other employment, and this cost may include moving expenses. The amount of the award for back pay and loss of fringe benefits during the employee‟s period of unemployment may be offset by the amount of unemployment insurance, if any, received by the employee during that time.. . the employee has no duty to seek inferior employment, and the burden of proof of the employee‟s failure to mitigate damages is on the employer. Moreover, it has been held that the employer may be estopped from raising the issue of the employee‟s duty to mitigate damages if the employee‟s dismissal was maliciously motivated.. . . Damages for > consequential losses and emotional distress generally are not allowed in a wrongful discharge case if the cause of action sounds entirely in contract. Where the action sounds in tort alone, or in both contract and tort, such compensatory damages are allowed. . . Plaintiff testified that as a result of the firing he suffered emotional distress by way of humiliation and lost confidence and trust. . . The court held that this evidence supported an award of compensatory damages.. . . Punitive damages are recoverable in an action for bad faith wrongful discharge if the defendant‟s conduct is sufficiently culpable.. . . The amount of punitive damages or exemplary damages to be awarded is a matter for the discretion of the jury; it depends on the circumstances of the particular case. Punitive damages must bear a reasonable relationship to the actual damages sustained by the plaintiff, though there is no fixed ratio by which punitive and actual damages are properly proportioned. An appellate court generally will not substitute its judgment for that of the trier of fact as to the amount of punitive damages to be awarded. . . . Plaintiff was discharged on the ground of poor work performance, after the employer‟s incomplete and insufficient investigation of the charges that had been brought against plaintiff by coemployees. Plaintiff experienced substantial difficulty finding subsequent employment, and she ultimately had to leave the state. She had lived and worked in a small community where a dismissal for poor work performance would necessarily have an adverse consequence on her reputation and ability to earn a livelihood. One of the charges against her had been fabricated and her personnel file had been altered to support the allegation. An award of punitive damages against her former employer was affirmed on the basis of this evidence. . . .Plaintiff had a . . . faithful performance until she was fired by a vindictive supervisor . . .At the trial of Plaintiff‟s wrongful discharge case, expert witnesses testified that the employer had violated its own personnel practices and policies in thirteen separate instances; and the employer‟s evidence at trial was often inconsistent and even contradictory as to whether plaintiff was fired . . . as a part of a reduction-in-force program. In addition, the president of the company for which she had worked had revealed a calloused attitude toward. . . plaintiff in particular. . . An award of exemplary damages against the plaintiff‟s former employer was affirmed on appeal (verdict for $95,000 economic damages, $100,000 compensatory damages for mental distress, and $1,300,000 punitive damages). [FN 89] Flanigan v. Prudential Federal Sav. & Loan Asso. (1986), 720 P2d 257. . . 105 CCH LC ¶ 55614 (verdict for $95,000 economic damages, $100,000 compensatory damages for mental distress, and $1,300,000 punitive damages). See also Cancellier v. Federated Dept. Stores (1982) 672 F.2d 1312. . . 48 Am. Jur. Proof of Facts 2d 235-240.

Any assertion (if any) by Wood & Lamping regarding RIF for economic or financial reasons is to be met with them turning over financial records – the Secretary of Labor cannot merely take their word for this, clear factual evidence is required to rebut that facts, evidence and legal conclusions presented in my FMLA Complaint and the attached correspondence:

> In assessing punitive damages, juries may be allowed to consider evidence of the defendant‟s wealth and financial affairs. The rationale is that the award should be in an amount sufficient to have an impact on the defendant‟s attitudes and conduct in the future, so as to act as a deterrent to future wrongful conduct of the type under attack. In other words, the wealthier the defendant, the larger should be the assessment of punitive damages. Accordingly, where punitive damages are claimed, the plaintiff may be allowed to conduct some discovery into the subject of the defendant‟s financial affairs in most jurisdictions. . . . Plaintiff‟s counsel should anticipate that discovery into the subject of defendant‟s financial affairs will be strenuously resisted by the defense. Accordingly, the discovery plan in a wrongful discharge case should include an effective method of obtaining as much information on the subject of the defendant‟s wealth as the situation will permit in an expedient and efficacious manner. Thus, where liberal or unrestricted discovery into the subject of defendant‟s wealth is allowed, counsel should consider seeking the disclosure of the following items of information:
> - The current net worth of the employer
> - Total annual sales or gross income for the last fiscal year and one or more prior fiscal years
> - The net annual income for the past fiscal year and one or more prior fiscal years
> - The identity and values of all capital assets
> - The nature and amount of defendant‟s liabilities and obligations
> - Copies of the employer‟s tax returns whenever such discovery is permitted by the court.

I believe a reasonable mind may conclude that Wood & Lamping‟s areas of practice, taking of documents/evidence will support they were fully aware of the criminal/civil wrongs being committed; however, made a conscious decision to move forward anyhow.

Ms. Petric, please see my FMLA Complaint, I have set forth the relief I am seeking. Also have attaché the applicable statute (29 USCA § 2617) to support the relief I am entitled to.

Should you have any questions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Dear President Obama
Attorney General Holder
Secretary Solis
Secretary Geithner
Commissioner Shulman
Secretary Duncan:

RE: Vogel Denise Newsome
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT'S ENGAGEMENT IN CRIMINAL ACTS
OBAMA ADMINISTRATION'S OBSTRUCTING JUSTICE

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE:

That Vogel Denise Newsome ("Newsome") is hereby requesting that the UNLAWFUL/ILLEGAL/ CRIMINAL acts leveled against her by the United States Government cease. President Obama is being contacted because he is Head of the Executive Department and FULLY aware of what is going on with Newsome – i.e. Newsome providing him with documentation that is provided to those under his Administration so President Obama CANNOT claim "Lack of Knowledge." As the President of the United States, the U.S. Department of Justice, U.S. Department of Labor, U.S. Department of Treasury and their sub-departments fall under President Barack Obama's Administration and Supervision. Furthermore, this is documentation to support President Barack Obama and his Administration's failure to uphold the laws of the United States

6) President Obama and his Administration's handling of Complaints submitted by Newsome is clearly an OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE. In fact, such ADVERSE and UNDULLY delays are OBSTRUCTING legal matters from going forward. Newsome for example attach correspondence recently received from LIBERTY MUTUAL and its insured's counsel (Michael E. Lively) dated March 5, 2010. Evidencing how such DIALATORY and OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE by the Obama Administration is hindering other legal process involving Newsome and others. Moreover, is preventing Newsome from moving forward. Newsome has an attorney interested in this matter willing to assist in legal representation. However, again, all is being HINDERED because of President Barack Obama and his Administration's FAILURE TO PROSECUTE. Moreover, FAILURE TO ADVISE OF THE STATUS OF LEGAL MATTERS BROUGHT TO HIS ATTENTION!

So this is Newsome's story and EXPOSURE to United States Citizens of what President Barack Obama and his Administration are doing behind their backs and behind closed doors. If President Barack Obama and his Administration can be this RUTHLESS and OBSTRUCT THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE, what else is his Administration hiding from the PUBLIC?????

The United States Citizens need to know President Barack Obama and his Administration's role in COVERING UP criminal/civil wrongs of Newsome's employer(s). Moreover, allowing employer(s) to KNOWINGLY and DELIBERATELY provide FALSE information during a federal investigation. It is a good thing that Newsome has the tape recording and documentation to support such criminal practices. Oh, CITIZENS need to know that the Department of Justice has prosecuted employer(s) for engaging in such criminal acts (i.e. providing of false statements during federal investigation); however, leave it to Newsome to bring her Complaints and the Department of Justice and expect fair and equal treatment in the handling thereof, just to be subjected to DISCRIMINATORY practices in the handling of said complaints. All under the WATCHFUL eyes and ADMINISTRATION of President Barack Obama, Eric Holder, Solis and others.

Newsome is requesting a response to this instant letter on how the matters before each of the above referenced Departments are being handled as well as when records in the Department of Labor previously requested will be made available to her for reviewing and copying. Newsome is requesting said RESPONSE to this letter by April 2, 2010.

Should either of you have questions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact Newsome at 513/680-2922 or (601) 885-9536.

Sincerely,

Vogel Denise Newsome

Dear President Obama
Attorney General Holder
Secretary Solis
Secretary Geithner
Com missioner Shulman
Secretary Duncan:

RE: Vogel Denise Newsome
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT'S ENGAGEMENT IN CRIMINAL ACTS
OBAMA ADMINISTRATION'S OBSTRUCTING JUSTICE

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE:

WARNING: This docum ent contains HIGHLY sensitive inf ormation a nd m aterial for thos e who are in DENIAL and REFUSE to know the tr uth regardi ng the RACIAL INJUSTICES in the U nited States. Furthermore, will shed additional light on the ROLE of the First alleged African-American President (Barack Obama) and U.S. Attorney General (Eric Holder) and their COVER-UP of such practices leveled against African-Americans and/or people of color. Furthermore, for those who are in DENIAL and cannot believe that the United States first alleged African-American President/U.S. Attorney General would have a ROLE in the and/or physically. Many African-Americans and/or people of color are going to be so disappointed to know that President Barack Obama and U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder are attempting to COVER-UP criminal acts of their OPPRESSORS; while many will also remain in DENIAL (even with the EVIDENCE slapping them in the face – i.e because of the shackles on their minds and scales on their eyes) that the person (President Barack Obama) that they have taken to be their Saviour would be a part of CORRUPTION and the RACIAL INJUSTICES leveled against them.

Newsome believes the PUBLIC/WORLD is entitled to know whether President Barack Obama and his Administration's FAILURE to act on Complaints brought to their attention is a direct and proximate result of a CONSPIRACY that he and his Administration has sought to COVER-UP regarding the criminal/civil wrongs reported because those involved are KEY FINANCIAL CONTRIBUTORS and ADVISORS/LOBBYISTS of President Obama and those in his Administration and/or close relations with him.

Other World Leaders/NATIONS will not be like the United States Government Officials and willing to look the other way. Neither does Newsome believe they will take very kindly knowing of President Barack Obama's ROLE in CONSPIRACY leveled against Newsome and the COVER-UP of crimes/civil wrongs leveled against her.

Again, Newsome is requesting a response to this instant letter and the demands therein on or before MAY 3, 2010.

Should either of you have questions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact Newsome at 513/680-2922 or (601) 885-9536.

Sincerely,

Vogel Denise Newsome

RE: VOGEL DENISE NEWSOME
REQUESTS FOR RESPONSE & AFFIDAVITS BY JUNE 23, 2010
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT'S ENGAGEMENT IN CRIMINAL ACTS
OBAMA ADMINISTRATION'S OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE

Dear United States President Obama
United States Attorney General Holder
United Secretary Solis:

As each of you are aware, Newsome has repeatedly contacted each of you regarding criminal/civil violations leveled against her. Newsom e's recent correspondence dated, May 19, 2010 en titled, "RESPONSE TO MAY 13, 2010 LETTER – EXECUT IVE DEP ARTMENT'S ENGA GEMENT IN CRIMINAL ACTS – OBAM A ADMINISTRATION'S OBSTRUCTING JUSTICE," requested a response by June 3, 2010, which apparently must have gone ignored because to date, Newsome has not received a response from either of you regarding her requests.

This involves a recipient of the 2009 NOBEL PEACE PRIZE – United States President Barack Obama – who appears to be engaged in criminal activities and the COVER-UP of CORRUPTION in his Administration

Again, it is IMPORTANT TO NOTE that in matters involv ing Newsom e, her opponen ts are those such as LIBERTY MUTUAL INSURANCE and its law firm s – i.e . Bake r Donelson Bea rman Caldwell & Berkowit z

United States Attorney General Eric Holder and Secretary of Labor Hilda Solis has resorted for ill purposes – i.e. increasing costs and efforts to financially devastate Newsome.

Sincerely,

Vogel Denise Newsome

RE: REQUES T FOR FEDERAL INVESTIGATION INTO HENLEY YOUNG JUVENILE DETENTION CENTER (A/K/A HINDS COUNTY YOUTH DETENTION CENTER); UPDATE ON ADDITIONAL MATTERS; SECOND REQUEST FOR RETURN OF MONIES EMBEZZLED;[1] AND REQUEST FOR STATUS

Dear President Obama and Attorney General Holder:

This is to confirm that I am in receipt of F. Michael Kelleher's, Special Assistant to the President and Director of Presidential Correspondence, le tter dated June 19, 2009. A copy of which is attached hereto at EXHIBIT " A" and incorporated herein by reference. PLEAS E ACCEPT THIS AS A "NEW" wherein I incorporate and implement the Complaints submitted to President Obama's and U.S. Attorney Eric Ho lder's attention on Ma y 21, 2009. As well as the July 14, 2008 Complaint submitted to President Barack Obama's (then Senator Obama) attention – in which a copy of said July Complaint was provided as Exhibit with May 21, 2009 Complaint.

In response to Mr. .Kelleher's letter, "No the ISSUES brought to President Obama's attention as of May 21, 2009, and his attention when he was Senator as of August 2, 2008, have not been addressed." President Obam a was provided with an update and official Com plaint as recent as last month on or about May 21, 2009; along with the demands and/or relief sought by me.

[1] Boldface, italics and/or underline added for em phasis. INSERTING pertinent info rmation so that it is within this letter rather than as an Exhibit – making such information readily available.

steer clear of addressing such issues. That the March 8, 2008 speech may have been given for political purposes/hype/damage control ONLY and there was NEVER any intent to make good on trying to address such issues. America is aware that Barack Obama is the President of the United States and is not for one particular race; however, they are not IGNORANT of the fact that African-Americans and/or people of color are repeatedly being deprived Human/Civil Rights, Constitutional Rights, Equal Protection of the Laws, Due Process of Laws, Employment Opportunities, etc. IT IS OBVIOUS THAT THE MEDIA/PRESS ARE STEERING CLEAR OF THIS SUBJECT – April's question at the June 23, 2009 Press Conference was ignored in the post coverage on the major network stations. Why? Because our media want to distract from such sensitive topics and cover up such issues as it has done for years. AGAIN – Foreign countries are not ignorant of these things. We need to handle our business over here first before we begin meddling in another country's affairs.

President Barack Obama and U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder acknowledge the need to deal with such RACIAL issues.

Here we go. Now will Obama and Holder deal with the issues provided herein as well as in the Complaints submitted to their attention?

President Barack Obama ENCOURAGES the public to keep him abreast of what is going on and to feel free to contact him. The question now, is HOW IS HIS ADMINISTRATION GOING TO DEAL WITH THE SUCH CRIMINAL AND RACIST ISSUES TIMELY BROUGHT TO HIS ATTENTION?????

Respectfully submitted this 24th day of June, 2009.

RE: STATUS REQUEST OF COMPLAINTS FILED BY JULY 23, 2009

Dear President Obama and Secretary Solis):

This is to advise you both that I am in receipt of the U.S. Department of Labor's (Wage & Hour Division) letter dated June 30, 2009, a copy of which is attached for your review and response.

As you can see from the June 30, 2009 correspondence, the Department of Labor states in part:

> "This letter is to acknowledge receipt of your Freedom of Information Act Request, dated May 21, 2009."

I gather the Department of Labor is referring to my June 3, 2009 letter, in which it was only the first page that contained an incorrect date – the remaining pages having the correct date of June 3, 2009. However, no such request (FOIA) was ever submitted by me. On May 21, 2009, I submitted a COMPLAINT (which both has received) entitled:

> REPORTING OF RACIAL AND DISCRIMINATION PRACTICES COMPLAINT: REQUESTS FOR STATUS; REQUEST FOR CREATION OF COMMITTEES/COURT, INVESTIGATIONS AND FINDINGS – CONSTITUTIONAL, CIVIL RIGHTS VIOLATIONS AND DISCRIMINATION; AND DEMAND/RELIEF REQUESTED

Tracking Nos. – (Solis: 23061570000105855303) and (Obama: 23061570000105855259)
To date I have not received anything regarding the May 21, 2009 Complaint mentioned above.

Then on or about June 3, 2009 (which 1st page only was incorrectly dated), I submitted the following:

OFFICIAL REQUEST FOR FINDINGS OF FACTS AND CONCLUSION OF LAW BY JULY 1, 2009 - FILE NO. 1537034

Which to date, both of you have received – Tracking Nos. (Solis: 03071790000073181159) and (Obama: 23061570000105855273). Solis also received the June 3, 2009 Request for Findings of Facts and Conclusion of Law by July 1, 2009 via facsimile at (202) 693-6111.

PLEASE BE ADVISED:

1. To date, I have not received documentation from either of you addressing the filing of my Complaint of May 21, 2009 and the CASE NUMBER (if any) that has been assigned. From the above referenced title it is clear what I am requesting of President Barack Obama's Administration. However, my concern is that this Administration may be taking the COWARD approach and clearly attempting to give me the RUN AROUND. The June 30, 2009, letter from the Department of Labor is UNACCEPTABLE in that I DID NOT submit a "Freedom of Information Act Request" on May 21, 2009. Therefore, the Department of Labor's June 30, 2009 correspondence clearly leaves me with the impression that President Barack Obama's Administration may be attempting to EVADE ADDRESSING THE RACIAL DISCRIMINATORY PRACTICES BROUGHT TO ITS ATTENTION THAT HIS ADMINISTRATION HAS REPEATEDLY ADVISED WOULD NOT BE TOLORATED!!!!

   If so, so much for President Barack Obama's infamous March 18, 2008 "RACE SPEECH" and so much for U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder's Jet Magazine Article of March 9, 2009 – attached at EXHIBIT 59 of the May 21, 2009 Complaint. Instead this Administration is projecting itself to be one of "COWARDS" and is refusing to address the discriminatory and racial injustice practices within the Department of Labor that has been timely brought to both of your attention.

   THEREFORE, please provide me with the status to the May 21, 2009 Complaint and Request for Findings of Fact (NOT Freedom of Information Request). To date, I have not received the information regarding the STATUS of my May 21, 2009 Complaint NOR Case Number (if any) that has been assigned.

2. On June 3, 2009, I requested FINDINGS OF FACT and CONCLUSION OF LAW regarding a Family & Medical Leave Act Complaint that I filed in the Cincinnati, Ohio Office. You both were provided with a copy of this Complaint at EXHBIT 58 of my May 21, 2009 Complaint which both of you received. I requested Secretary Holis to provide me with the Department of Labor's FINDINGS of FACT and CONCLUSION OF LAW regarding my January 16, 2009 FMLA Complaint by July, 1, 2009. To date, I *have not received the Department of Labor's Findings of Fact regarding my January 19, 2009 FMLA Complaint.

PLEASE BE ADVISED: While President Obama has promoted his area of specialty in the law to include: CONSTITUTIONAL Law and CIVIL RIGHTS Law – then this Administration would know that under the 14th Amendment to the United States Constitution, I am entitled to the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law that I have requested. Moreover, that the laws clearly state that said requests are secured and guaranteed under the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution to assist me in determining whether I want to contest and/or acquiesce such findings of fact and conclusion of laws. Without the information I requested, how is a citizen to determine whether or not the Department's own policies and procedures were followed. Without this information I am being deprived EQUAL PROTECTION OF THE LAWS, EQUAL APPLICATION OF THE LAWS, DUE PROCESS OF LAWS, ETC.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE: That I will like a STATUS UPDATE regarding my May 21, 2009 Complaint and EXPLANATION as to why the Barack Obama Administration is DEPRIVING and/or DENYING me the Findings of Fact and Conclusion of Law regarding my May 21, 2009 Complaint and June 3, 2009 Correspondence regarding FMLA matter.

ONE REVIEWING THE FACTS, EVIDENCE AND LEGAL CONCLUSIONS PROVIDED IN DOCUMENTS PROVIDED THE OBAMA ADMINISTRATION WOULD KNOW THAT SUCH INFORMATION IS VERY DIFFICULT TO COME BY. NOT ONLY THAT, IT SUPPORTS WHAT AFRICAN-AMERICANS AND/OR PEOPLE OF COLOR HAVE KNOWN FOR YEARS REGARDING THE RACIAL INJUSICES – Now we have a President who claims he can identify with ALL races; however, clearly is refusing to have his Administration address such issues which he has ADDRESSED needs to dealt with. If not the Obama Administration, then whose Administration? Obama's Administration is now in the White House; however, TIP-TOEING AROUND SUCH ISSUES!!!

The reason why I use the TRACKING FEATURES in my mailings is because so many African-Americans and/or people of color have had to go through what I have. If I relied upon "First-Class" ONLY mailing, then the Obama Administration would use the practices of the OLD Administrations and assert that documents probably got lost in the mail – rather than just admit how they are merely part of our PREJUDICIAL GOVERNMENT SYSTEM targeted at keeping African-Americans and/or people of color oppressed. Moreover, SWEEPING such Racial Injustices under the rug! The practice of the Administration (PAST and now it appears the PRESENT) is to exhaust citizens in hopes that they would give up – not pursue their rights, liberties and pursuit of happiness.

BOTH OF YOUR PROMPT AND IMMEDIATE/URGENT ATTENTION TO THIS MATTER IS GREATLY APPRECIATED!! If this Administration has lied to the citizens of the United States about addressing such RACIAL/DISCRIMINATORY matters – ADVISING IT WILL NOT TOLORATE DISCRIMINATORY PRACTICES (but indeed DOES), please let the Obama Administration be willing to OWN up you to its LIES and FAILURES presented to the citizens to deceive them for purposes of obtaining their votes.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE: That due to concerns that the Barack Obama Administration is engaging in DILIATORY practices and using POLICIES of the OLD ADMINISTRATIONS and subjecting me to MORE OF THE SAME old practices of the Administrations before him – while President Barack Obama promised CHANGE, please provide me with the above requested information by JULY 23, 2009.

Sincerely,

Denise Newsome

RE: FINAL DETERMINATION and REQUEST THAT HARASSMENT/ATTACKS ON NEWSOME CEASE

Dear Mr. Levin, Mr. Holder and President Obama:

This will confirm that Vogel Denise Newsome ("Newsome") is in receipt of the Ohio Department of Taxation's June 9, 2010 "FINAL DETERMINATION" – a copy of which is attached and to the e-mail entitled, "FINAL DETERMINATION-OH DeptOfTaxation 060910."

PLEASE BE ADVISED and TAKE NOTICE: That Newsome will not belabor this issue and relies upon argument that she WAS NOT a resident of the State of Ohio in 2005; therefore, the Assessment issued by this office is NULL/VOID and does not apply to her.

Furthermore, Newsome will like to take the time to make it known that she believes the submittal of such SHAM/FRIVOLOUS document is merely in keeping of the UNLAWFUL/ILLEGAL practices of the Commonwealth of Kentucky Department of Revenue's most recent CRIMINAL/CIVIL violations rendered against Newsome on or about July 17, 2010, in the execution of SHAM PROCESS (i.e. Notice of Levy) and its failure to comply with the statutes/laws governing such matter; moreover, infringing upon the Constitutional rights and/or legal rights of Newsome that are guaranteed under the law.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE: That Newsome takes the Ohio Department of Revenue's handling of this most recent "FINAL DETERMINATION" as actions in furtherance of the crimes leveled against her by the Commonwealth of Kentucky. It is important to note from this document:

1) While the "FINAL DETERMINATION" is dated June 9, 2010, the Ohio Department of Taxation DID NOT provide Newsome with this document at the time of its alleged creation and/or execution. Nevertheless, it places documentation in package stating that a response is due in 60 days. Such behavior and/or practices by the Ohio Department of Taxation in its OBSTRUCTION and/or COMPROMISING of mailing (i.e. withholding mail, falsifying date on mail, etc.) is clearly UNACCEPTABLE and prohibited by law. A copy of information VERIFYING mailing (based upon postmark) being July 21, 2010 - approximately 41 days after June 9, 2010 date placed on the "Final Determination" - is attached as well provided with e-mail entitled, "072610-OH DeptTaxation MAILING RECEIPT."

2) The Ohio Department of Taxation DELIBERATELY/PURPOSELY placed the wrong "Post Office Box" information on the "Final Determination" for purposes of precluding Newsome from receiving. However, to its disappointment, Newsome has received and provides this instant response. See copy of envelope which is attached and to the e-mail entitled, "FINAL DETERMINATION-OH DeptOfTaxation 060910." While the Ohio Department of Taxation may want it appear it was merely a typo/error in transposing numbers, Newsome would find this hard to believe because her mailing information should be stored and/or saved and Post Office Box 14731 is the address that has appeared on ALL other correspondence received prior to this recently mailing by the Ohio Department of Taxation.

3) Newsome further attaches to this instant letter and e-mail, a copy of her June 8, 2009 Response which was FAXED to the attention of Commissioner Richard A. Levin of the Ohio Department of Taxation at (614) 466-6401; as well as to the Compliance Division of the Ohio Department of Taxation at (614) 387-1847. See document entitled, "060809 Response OH DeptOfTaxation" to this e-mail.

Looking that the time of mailing and that most recentl CRIMINAL/CIVIL wrongs in the execution of the Commonwealth of Kentucky Department of Revenue's SHAM/BOGUS LEGAL PROCESS – July 17, 2010 "Notice of Levy"- that the Ohio Department of Taxation issued the FINAL DETERMINATION as a ROLE IN CONSPIRACY that has been leveled against Newsome in RETALIATION of her exercising protected rights as well as for purposes of HARASSMENT, INTIMIDATION, THREATS, COERCION, etc.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE: That Newsome further believes that the most recent attacks on by the Ohio Department of Taxation and Commonwealth of Kentucky Department of Revenue may also be in RETALIATION of Newsome's July 13, 2010, E-mail to United States President Barack Obama, United States Attorney General Eric Holder and others entitled, "U.S. PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA: THE DOWNFALL/DOOM OF THE OBAMA ADMINISTRATION – Corruption/Conspiracy/Cover-Up/Criminal Acts Made Public." Newsome believes a reasonable mind may conclude that the Ohio and Kentucky recent actions are RELATED to Newsome's exercising of rights secured under the Constitution and other statutes/laws governing such matters. The Obama Administration who itself wanted members (i.e. Thomas Daschle and Timothy Geithner – who is presently Secretary for the Department of Treasury. The Department who has recently UNLAWFULLY/ILLEGALLY taken Newsome's 2009 Income Tax Return) – see information attached as well as to e-mail entitled, "BAKER DONELSON -(Daschle & GeithnerInfo)."

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE: Newsome hereby demands that any and all actions and FURTHER actions by this Ohio Department of Taxation in regards to matters involving the June 9, 2010 "FINAL DETERMINATION" cease in that it has been TIMELY, PROPERLY and ADEQUATELY NOTIFIED that Newsome WAS NOT a resident of the State of Ohio in 2005. Furthermore, the Ohio Department of Taxation has failed to produce any documentation as to how it reached such a conclusion. Newsome further demand that CONSPIRACY that has been leveled against her by the Obama Administration, Kentucky Department of Revenue and others CEASE immediately and any/all monies be returned and/or released IMMEDIATELY.

Should you have questions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact me at 513/680-2922 or (601) 885-9536.

Sincerely,

Vogel Denise Newsome

Interest swap deal bad news for Jackson

04.23.09 - 12:01 am

INSIGHTS

By JAMES HENDRIX

Will Jackson meet Jefferson County's current fate: a local government slowly dragged into bankruptcy after it bet its municipal bonds on complex derivatives?

The Jackson City Council approved a motion to enter into an interest rate swap for its 2002 and 2004 bonds with Deustche Bank and Rice Financial Products. Unfortunately for the rest of us, the gang of four who voted for this deal along with swap-promoter and Finance Director Rick Hill probably had no real idea of what they were doing, as many officials in other cities have discovered to their dismay.

The media and citizens of Jackson should hold city councilors Melton, Hill, Crisler, Bluntson, McLemore, and Tillman accountable for trying to push this on us. There was no competitive bidding. Jackson is exposed to an adjustable rate agreement similar to those that have devastated other local governments. The fees were not even mentioned or made available to the public yet we are expected to fork over millions of dollars of our money to bankers and "advisers."

Councilman Jeff Weill of Ward 1 voted against the bill and sent this statement to Jackson Jambalaya explaining his vote:

"I had no comfort level with the swap initially proposed last November. Since that time the mayor of Birmingham's been indicted and attorneys general across the U.S. have convened grand juries looking into these schemes. They are purely fee driven. Even the 'independent' financial advisers who advised the council had an interest in the transaction, not to mention the players and the bond lawyers.

"Most of those proposing this deal worked hard to obscure the costs of issuance. As a lawyer and former prosecutor that was a giant red flag to me."

While every other municipality is running away from these instruments of financial self-destruction as fast as they can, our leaders instead choose to chain us to a ticking time bomb with these variable rates. If these variable rates go south, Jackson will pay dearly for that ten million pieces of silver. We should hold the council's feet to the fire and demand a thorough hearing on this matter as well as opening this entire process to competitive bids. Thanks to these guys, Jackson is going to be just like Birmingham in more ways than one.

Bloomberg reported how Birmingham's Jefferson County thought it could use these swaps to its advantage as it fell for some sweet talk from Wall Street:

"The county relied on advice from a bank, JP Morgan Chase and Co., to arrange its funding, rather than use competitive bidding.

'Like homeowners who took out mortgages they couldn't afford and didn't understand, Jefferson County officials rejected fixed-rate debt and borrowed instead at rates that varied with the market.

'The county paid banks $120 million in fees -- six times the prevailing rate -- for $5.8 billion in interest-rate swaps. That was supposed to protect the county from rising rates for their bonds. Lending rates went the wrong way, putting the county $277 million deeper into debt..."

"Officials there (in Birmingham) relied on the advice of JP Morgan in 2002 and 2003 while refinancing almost all the $3.2 billion of fixed-rate debt that built sewers into variable-rate bonds coupled with interest-rate swaps.

Costs Spiral: When the insurers guaranteeing the bonds lost their top credit ratings and the auction-rate market seized up in February, the yield on the bonds jumped as high as 10 percent, from about three percent in January. At the same time, the swaps tied to the debt, instead of protecting against higher rates, backfired. That pushed the sewer system's annual debt costs to $460 million, more than twice the $190 million it collects in revenue..."

When Birmingham tried to escape the death spiral it faced, the bankers from New York turned into Bruno and Vito from Jersey when it failed to post $184 million collateral and was in technical default. JP Morgan and other counterparties wanted Jefferson County to raise taxes to cover the debt. Jefferson County in turn wanted Wall Street to renegotiate the swaps. One County Commissioner told the Birmingham News, "We are dealing with a virtual immovable force on Wall Street." Consequently, several commissioners are pushing the county to declare bankruptcy while the mayor of Birmingham faces criminal prosecution for receiving bribes and favors for these no-bid contracts. Such a bankruptcy will be the largest municipal bankruptcy in American history.

Birmingham is not the only city suffering from the interest rate swap time bomb. The New York Times reported the rate adjustments on these swaps harmed many small towns in Tennessee. Lewisburg, a town of only 11,000, saw its "annual interest payments on the bond had quadrupled to $1 million this year." Some municipalities tried to withdraw from these bond market traps:

In Claiborne County, north of Knoxville, officials said they were recently told by Morgan Keegan bankers that extracting themselves from a municipal bond derivative would cost $3 million, a sum the poor county cannot afford...."

In Mount Juliet, a suburb east of Nashville, city leaders were surprised to discover that the payments on its bonds had increased by 500 percent to $478,000..." New York Times story.

Officials are now negotiating the terms of the agreement with Deutsche Bank and Rice Financial Products, the two banks that will actually conduct the rate swap. The city has brought on Sterne Agee and Leach Inc., a national investment firm with an office in Jackson, to serve as its financial advisor, as well as two local law firms - Baker Donelson Bearman Caldwell and Berkowitz, and Anthony Simon - to serve as legal counsel for the transaction.

One must ask what kind of dope Mr. Hill thinks we are smoking if he expects us to buy this malarkey. Investors will be more than happy to buy variable rate debt as long as they think they can squeeze us for every cent of it. The reporter failed to ask Mr. Hill what would happen if the rates adjusted. No serious person expects the interest rates to remain near zero as they are now. As interest rates increase (not to mention the effect Obama's deficit spending will have on the bond markets) over the next few years, any deal using these variable rates will cost Jackson much more money. Something ignored by Mr. Hill while he pimped this deal for the loan sharks.

It is also troubling that the city did not advertise for bids on the refinancing. Since the fees for these refinances will cost us up to more than $4 million, Mr. Hill should have sought competitive bids. What was his criteria for choosing these banks? What are the fees going to be and why are we awarding contracts worth millions in fees without any bidding whatsoever? In fact, the story says the terms are being negotiated. The city council approved these swaps without even knowing the final terms of the agreement. As Mac would say, you CAN'T be serious.

CHARGE-PROCESSING OUTLINE

In processing a charge involving an allegation of retaliation, consider the following issues (for a detailed discussion of each issue, see accompanying chapter at referenced pages):

There are three essential elements of a retaliation claim:

1) protected activity -- opposition to discrimination or participation in the statutory complaint process

2) adverse action

3) causal connection between the protected activity and the adverse action

I. Protected Activity

A. Did CP oppose discrimination? 3

1. Did the charging party (CP) explicitly or implicitly communicate to the respondent (R) or another covered entity a belief that its activity constituted unlawful discrimination under Title VII, the ADA, the ADEA, or the EPA?

- If the protest was broad or ambiguous, would CP's protest reasonably have been interpreted as opposition to such unlawful discrimination?

Did someone closely associated with CP oppose discrimination?

2. Was the manner of opposition reasonable? Was the manner of opposition so disruptive that it significantly interfered with R's legitimate business concerns?

- If the manner of opposition was not reasonable, CP is not protected under the anti-retaliation clauses.

3. Did CP have a reasonable and good faith belief that the opposed practice violated the anti-discrimination laws?

- If so, CP is protected against retaliation, even if s/he was mistaken about the unlawfulness of the challenged practices.
- If not, CP is not protected under the anti-retaliation clauses.

B. Did CP participate in the statutory complaint process?... 9

Did CP or someone closely associated with CP file a charge, or testify, assist, or participate in any manner in an investigation, proceeding, hearing, or lawsuit under the statutes enforced by the EEOC?

- If so, CP is protected against retaliation regardless of the validity or reasonableness of the original allegation of discrimination.

- CP is protected against retaliation by a respondent for participating in statutory complaint proceedings even if that complaint involved a different covered entity.

II. Adverse Action

Did R subject CP to any kind of adverse treatment? 11

- Adverse actions undertaken after CP's employment relationship with R ended, such as negative job references, can be challenged.

- Although trivial annoyances are not actionable, more significant retaliatory treatment that is reasonably likely to deter protected activity is unlawful. There is no requirement that the adverse action materially affect the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment.

III. Causal Connection

A. Is there direct evidence that retaliation was a motive for the adverse action? 15

1. Did R official admit that it undertook the adverse action because of the protected activity?

2. Did R official express bias against CP based on the protected activity? If so, is there evidence linking that statement of bias to the adverse action?

- Such a link would be established if, for example, the statement was made by the decision-maker at the time of the challenged action.

If there is direct evidence that retaliation was a motive for the adverse action, "cause" should be found. Evidence as to any additional legitimate motive would be relevant only to relief, under a mixed-motives analysis.

B. Is there circumstantial evidence that retaliation was the true reason for the adverse action? 16

1. Is there evidence raising an inference that retaliation was the cause of the adverse action?

- Such an inference is raised if the adverse action took place shortly after the protected activity and if the decision-maker was aware of the protected activity before undertaking the adverse action.

- If there was a long period of time between the protected activity and the adverse action, determine whether there is other evidence raising an inference that the cause of the adverse action was retaliation.

2. Has R produced evidence of a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the adverse action?

3. Is R's explanation a pretext designed to hide retaliation?

- Did R treat similarly situated employees who did not engage in protected activity differently from CP?

- Did R subject CP to heightened scrutiny after s/he engaged in protected activity?

If, on the basis of all of the evidence, the investigator is persuaded that retaliation was the true reason for the adverse action, then "cause" should be found.

IV. Special Remedies Issues

A. Is it appropriate to seek temporary or preliminary relief pending final disposition of the charge?.....19

1. Is there a substantial likelihood that the challenged action will be found to constitute unlawful retaliation?

2. Will the retaliation cause irreparable harm to CP and/or the EEOC?

- Will CP likely incur irreparable harm beyond financial hardship because of the retaliation?

- If the retaliation appears to be based on CP's filing of a prior EEOC charge, will that retaliation likely cause irreparable harm to EEOC's ability to investigate CP's original charge of discrimination?

If there is a substantial likelihood that the challenged action will constitute retaliation and if that retaliation will cause irreparable harm to CP and/or the EEOC, contact the Regional Attorney about pursuing temporary or preliminary relief.

B. Are compensatory and punitive damages available and appropriate?..... 20

Compensatory and punitive damages are available for retaliation claims under all of the statutes enforced by the EEOC, including the ADEA and the EPA. Compensatory and punitive damages for retaliation claims under the ADEA and the EPA are not subject to statutory caps.

Punitive damages often are appropriate in retaliation claims under any of the statutes enforced by the EEOC.

8-I INTRODUCTION

A. OVERVIEW

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964\1, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act\2, the Americans with Disabilities Act\3, and the Equal Pay Act\4 prohibit retaliation by an employer, employment agency, or labor organization because an individual has engaged in protected activity. Protected activity consists of the following:

PROTECTED ACTIVITY

(1) opposing a practice made unlawful by one of the employment discrimination statutes (the "opposition" clause); or

(2) filing a charge, testifying, assisting, or participating in any manner in an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under the applicable statute (the "participation" clause).

This chapter reaffirms the Commission's policy of ensuring that individuals who oppose unlawful employment discrimination, participate in employment discrimination proceedings, or otherwise assert their rights under the laws enforced by the Commission are protected against retaliation. Voluntary compliance with and effective enforcement of the anti-discrimination statutes depend in large part on the initiative of individuals to oppose employment practices that they reasonably believe to be unlawful, and to file charges of discrimination. If retaliation for such activities were permitted to go unremedied, it would have a chilling effect upon the willingness of individuals to speak out against employment discrimination or to participate in the EEOC's administrative process or other employment discrimination proceedings.

The Commission can sue for temporary or preliminary relief before completing its processing of a retaliation charge if the charging party or the Commission will likely suffer irreparable harm because of the retaliation. The investigator should contact the Regional Attorney early in the investigation if it appears that it may be appropriate to seek such relief. See Section 8-III A. for guidance on the standards for seeking temporary or preliminary relief.

B. BASIS FOR FILING A CHARGE

A charging party who alleges retaliation under Title VII, the ADA, the ADEA, or the EPA need not also allege that he was treated differently because of race, religion, sex, national origin, age, or disability\6. A charging party who alleges retaliation in violation of the ADA need not be a qualified individual with a disability\7. Similarly, a charging party who alleges retaliation for protesting discrimination against persons in the protected age group need not be in the protected age group in order to bring an ADEA claim.\8

A charging party can challenge retaliation by a respondent even if the retaliation occurred after their employment relationship ended\9. S/he can also challenge retaliation by a respondent based on his/her protected activity involving a different employer, or based on protected activity by someone closely related to or associated with the charging party.\10

A charging party can bring an ADA retaliation claim against an individual supervisor, as well as an employer. This is because Section 503(a) of the ADA makes it unlawful for a "person" to retaliate against an individual for engaging in protected activity.\11

8-II. ELEMENTS OF A RETALIATION CLAIM

A. OVERVIEW

There are three essential elements of a retaliation claim:

ELEMENTS OF RETALIATION

1) opposition to discrimination or participation in covered proceedings

2) adverse action

3) causal connection between the protected activity and the adverse action

---

B. PROTECTED ACTIVITY: OPPOSITION

1. Definition

The anti-retaliation provisions make it unlawful to discriminate against an individual because s/he has opposed any practice made unlawful under the employment discrimination statutes\12. This protection applies if an individual explicitly or implicitly communicates to his or her employer or other covered entity a belief that its activity constitutes a form of employment discrimination that is covered by any of the statutes enforced by the EEOC.

While Title VII and the ADEA prohibit retaliation based on opposition to a practice made unlawful by those statutes, the ADA prohibits retaliation based on opposition to "any act or practice made unlawful by this chapter." The referenced chapter prohibits not only disability-based employment discrimination, but also disability discrimination in state and local government services, public accommodations, commercial facilities, and telecommunications. Thus, the ADA prohibits retaliation for opposing not just allegedly discriminatory employment practices but also practices made unlawful by the other titles of the statute.

2. Examples of Opposition

* Threatening to file a charge or other formal complaint alleging discrimination

Threatening to file a complaint with the Commission, a state fair employment practices agency, union, court, or any other entity that receives complaints relating to discrimination is a form of opposition.

Example - CP tells her manager that if he fails to raise her salary to that of a male coworker who performs the same job, she will file a lawsuit under either the federal Equal Pay Act or under her state's parallel law. This statement constitutes "opposition."

* Complaining to anyone about alleged discrimination against oneself or others

A complaint or protest about alleged employment discrimination to a manager, union official, co-worker, company EEO official, attorney, newspaper reporter, Congressperson, or anyone else constitutes opposition. Opposition may be nonverbal, such as picketing or engaging in a production slow-down. Furthermore, a complaint on behalf of another, or by an employee's representative, rather than by the employee herself, constitutes protected opposition by both the person who makes the complaint and the person on behalf of whom the complaint is made.

A complaint about an employment practice constitutes protected opposition only if the individual explicitly or implicitly communicates a belief that the practice constitutes unlawful employment discrimination\13. Because individuals often may not know the specific requirements of the anti-discrimination laws enforced by the EEOC, they may make broad or ambiguous complaints of unfair treatment. Such a protest is protected opposition if the complaint would reasonably have been interpreted as opposition to employment discrimination.

Example 1 - CP calls the President of R's parent company to protest religious discrimination by R. CP's protest constitutes "opposition."

Example 2 - CP complains to co-workers about harassment of a disabled employee by a supervisor. This complaint constitutes "opposition."

Example 3 - CP complains to her foreman about graffiti in her workplace that is derogatory toward women. Although CP does not specify that she believes the graffiti creates a hostile work environment based on sex, her complaint reasonably would have been interpreted by the foreman as opposition to sex discrimination, due to the sex-based content of the graffiti. Her complaint therefore constitutes "opposition."

Example 4 - CP (African-American) requests a wage increase from R, arguing that he deserves to get paid a higher salary. He does not state or suggest a belief that he is being subjected to wage discrimination based on race. There also is no basis to conclude that R would reasonably have interpreted his complaint as opposition to race discrimination because the challenged unfairness could have been based on any of several reasons. CP's protest therefore does not constitute protected "opposition."

* Refusing to obey an order because of a reasonable belief that it is discriminatory

Refusal to obey an order constitutes protected opposition if the individual reasonably believes that the order requires him or her to carry out unlawful employment discrimination.

Example - CP works for an employment agency. His manager instructs him not to refer any African-Americans to a particular client, based on the client's request. CP refuses to obey the order and refers an African-American applicant to that client. CP's action constitutes "opposition."

Refusal to obey an order also constitutes protected opposition if the individual reasonably believes that the order makes discrimination a term or condition of employment. For example, in one case a court recognized that a correction officer's refusal to cooperate with the defendant's practice of allowing white but not black inmates to shower after work shifts constituted protected opposition. Even if the inmates were not "employees," the plaintiff could show that his enforcement of the policy made race discrimination a term or condition of his employment. Thus, his refusal to obey the order constituted opposition to an unlawful employment practice.\14

* Requesting reasonable accommodation or religious accommodation

A request for reasonable accommodation of a disability constitutes protected activity under Section 503 of the ADA. Although a person making such a request might not literally "oppose" discrimination or "participate" in the administrative or judicial complaint process, s/he is protected against retaliation for making the request. As one court stated,

> It would seem anomalous . . . to think Congress intended no retaliation protection for employees who request a reasonable accommodation unless they also file a formal charge. This would leave employees unprotected if an employer granted the accommodation and shortly thereafter terminated the employee in retaliation\15.

By the same rationale, persons requesting religious accommodation under Title VII are protected against retaliation for making such requests.

3. Standards Governing Application of the Opposition Clause

Although the opposition clause in each of the EEO statutes is broad, it does not protect every protest against job discrimination. The following principles apply:

a. Manner of Opposition Must Be Reasonable

The manner in which an individual protests perceived employment discrimination must be reasonable in order for the anti- retaliation provisions to apply. In applying a "reasonableness" standard, courts and the Commission balance the right of individuals to oppose employment discrimination and the public's interest in enforcement of the EEO laws against an employer's need for a stable and productive work environment.

Public criticism of alleged discrimination may be a reasonable form of opposition. Courts have protected an employee's right to inform an employer's customers about the employer's alleged discrimination, as well as the right to engage in peaceful picketing to oppose allegedly discriminatory employment practices.\16

On the other hand, courts have found that the following activities were not reasonable and thus not protected: searching and photocopying confidential documents relating to alleged ADEA discrimination and showing them to co-workers\17; making an overwhelming number of complaints based on unsupported allegations and bypassing the chain of command in bringing the complaints\18; and badgering a subordinate employee to give a witness statement in support of an EEOC charge and attempting to coerce her to change her statement.\19 Similarly, unlawful activities, such as acts or threats of violence to life or property, are not protected.

If an employee's protests against allegedly discriminatory employment practices interfere with job performance to the extent that they render him or her ineffective in the job, the retaliation provisions do not immunize the worker from appropriate discipline or discharge\20. Opposition to perceived discrimination does not serve as license for the employee to neglect job duties.

b. Opposition Need Only Be Based on Reasonable and Good Faith Belief

A person is protected against retaliation for opposing perceived discrimination if s/he had a reasonable and good faith belief that the opposed practices were unlawful. Thus, it is well settled that a violation of the retaliation provision can be found whether or not the challenged practice ultimately is found to be unlawful\21. As one court has stated, requiring a finding of actual illegality would "undermine[] Title VII's central purpose, the elimination of employment discrimination by informal means; destroy[] one of the chief means of achieving that purpose, the frank and non-disruptive exchange of ideas between employers and employees; and serve[] no redeeming statutory or policy purposes of its own."\22

Example 1 - CP complains to her office manager that her supervisor failed to promote her because of her gender. (She believes that sex discrimination occurred because she was qualified for the promotion and the supervisor promoted a male instead.) CP has engaged in protected opposition regardless of whether the promotion decision was in fact discriminatory because she had a reasonable and good faith belief that discrimination occurred.

Example 2 - Same as above, except the job sought by CP was in accounting and required a CPA license, which CP lacked and the selectee had. CP knew that it was necessary to have a CPA license to perform this job. CP has not engaged in protected opposition because she did not have a reasonable and good faith belief that she was rejected because of sex discrimination.

c. Person Claiming Retaliation Need Not Be the Person Who Engaged in Opposition

Title VII, the ADEA, the EPA, and the ADA prohibit retaliation against someone so closely related to or associated with the person exercising his or her statutory rights that it would discourage that person from pursuing those rights\23. For example, it is unlawful to retaliate against an employee because his son, who is also an employee, opposed allegedly unlawful employment practices. Retaliation against a close relative of an individual who opposed discrimination can be challenged by both the individual who engaged in protected activity and the relative, where both are employees. See Section 8-II C.3. for discussion of similar principle under "participation" clause.

d. Practices Opposed Need Not Have Been Engaged in by the Named Respondent

There is no requirement that the entity charged with retaliation be the same as the entity whose allegedly discriminatory practices were opposed by the charging party. For example, a violation would be found if a respondent refused to hire the charging party because it was aware that she opposed her previous employer's allegedly discriminatory practices.

C. PROTECTED ACTIVITY: PARTICIPATION

1. Definition

The anti-retaliation provisions make it unlawful to discriminate against any individual because s/he has made a charge, testified, assisted, or participated in any manner in an investigation, proceeding, hearing, or litigation under Title VII, the ADEA, the EPA, or the ADA. This protection applies to individuals challenging employment discrimination under the statutes enforced by EEOC in EEOC proceedings, in state administrative or court proceedings, as well as in federal court proceedings, and to individuals who testify or otherwise participate in such proceedings\24. Protection under the participation clause extends to those who file untimely charges. In the federal sector, once a federal employee initiates contact with an EEO counselor, (s)he is engaging in "participation."\25

2. Participation Is Protected Regardless of Whether the Allegations in the Original Charge Were Valid or Reasonable

The anti-discrimination statutes do not limit or condition in any way the protection against retaliation for participating in the charge process. While the opposition clause applies only to those who protest practices that they reasonably and in good faith believe are unlawful, the participation clause applies to all individuals who participate in the statutory complaint process. Thus, courts have consistently held that a respondent is liable for retaliating against an individual for filing an EEOC charge regardless of the validity or reasonableness of the charge\26. To permit an employer to retaliate against a charging party based on its unilateral determination that the charge was unreasonable or otherwise unjustified would chill the rights of all individuals protected by the anti-discrimination statutes.

3. Person Claiming Retaliation Need Not Be the Person Who Engaged in Participation

The retaliation provisions of Title VII, the ADEA, the EPA, and the ADA prohibit retaliation against someone so closely related to or associated with the person exercising his or her statutory rights that it would discourage or prevent the person from pursuing those rights. For example, it would be unlawful for a respondent to retaliate against an employee because his or her spouse, who is also an employee, filed an EEOC charge\27. Both spouses, in such circumstances, could bring retaliation claims.

4. The Practices Challenged in Prior or Pending Statutory Proceedings Need Not Have Been Engaged in by the Named Respondent

An individual is protected against retaliation for participation in employment discrimination proceedings even if those proceedings involved a different entity\28. For example, a violation would be found if a respondent refused to hire the charging party because it was aware that she filed an EEOC charge against her former employer.

D. ADVERSE ACTION

1. General Types of Adverse Actions

The most obvious types of retaliation are denial of promotion, refusal to hire, denial of job benefits, demotion, suspension, and discharge. Other types of adverse actions include threats, reprimands, negative evaluations, harassment, or other adverse treatment.

Suspending or limiting access to an internal grievance procedure also constitutes an "adverse action." For example, in EEOC v. Board of Governors of State Colleges & Universities\29, a university's collective bargaining agreement provided for a specific internal grievance procedure leading to arbitration. The agreement further provided that this procedure could be terminated if the employee sought resolution in any other forum, such as the EEOC. The Seventh Circuit ruled that termination of the grievance process constituted an adverse employment action in violation of the anti-retaliation clause of the ADEA\30.

2. Adverse Actions Can Occur After the Employment Relationship Between the Charging Party and Respondent Has Ended

In Robinson v. Shell Oil Company,\31 the Supreme Court unanimously held that Title VII prohibits respondents from retaliating against former employees as well as current employees for participating in any proceeding under Title VII or opposing any practice made unlawful by that Act. The plaintiff in Robinson alleged that his former employer gave him a negative job reference in retaliation for his having filed an EEOC charge against it. Some courts previously had held that former employees could not challenge retaliation that occurred after their employment had ended because Title VII, the ADEA, and the EPA prohibit retaliation against "any employee."\32 However, the Supreme Court stated that coverage of post-employment retaliation is more consistent with the broader context of the statute and with the statutory purpose of maintaining unfettered access to the statute's remedial mechanisms. The Court's holding applies to each of the statutes enforced by the EEOC because of the similar language and common purpose of the anti-retaliation provisions.

Examples of post-employment retaliation include actions that are designed to interfere with the individual's prospects for employment, such as giving an unjustified negative job reference, refusing to provide a job reference, and informing an individual's prospective employer about the individual's protected activity.\33 However, a negative job reference about an individual who engaged in protected activity does not constitute unlawful retaliation unless the reference was based on a retaliatory motive. The truthfulness of the information in the reference may serve as a defense unless there is proof of pretext, such as evidence that the former employer routinely declines to offer information about its former employees' job performance and violated that policy with regard to an individual who engaged in protected activity. See Section 8-II E. below.

Retaliatory acts designed to interfere with an individual's prospects for employment are unlawful regardless of whether they cause a prospective employer to refrain from hiring the individual\34. As the Third Circuit stated, "an employer who retaliates cannot escape liability merely because the retaliation falls short of its intended result."\35 However, the fact that the reference did not affect the individual's job prospects may affect the relief that is due.

3. Adverse Actions Need Not Qualify as "Ultimate Employment Actions" or Materially Affect the Terms or Conditions of Employment to Constitute Retaliation

Some courts have held that the retaliation provisions apply only to retaliation that takes the form of ultimate employment actions\36. Others have construed the provisions more broadly, but have required that the action materially affect the terms, conditions, or privileges of employment.\37

The Commission disagrees with those decisions and concludes that such constructions are unduly restrictive. The statutory retaliation clauses prohibit any adverse treatment that is based on a retaliatory motive and is reasonably likely to deter the charging party or others from engaging in protected activity. Of course, petty slights and trivial annoyances are not actionable, as they are not likely to deter protected activity. More significant retaliatory treatment, however, can be challenged regardless of the level of harm. As the Ninth Circuit has stated, the degree of harm suffered by the individual "goes to the issue of damages, not liability."\38

Example 1 - CP filed a charge alleging that he was racially harassed by his supervisor and co-workers. After learning about the charge, CP's manager asked two employees to keep CP under surveillance and report back about his activities. The surveillance constitutes an "adverse action" that is likely to deter protected activity, and is unlawful if it was conducted because of CP's protected activity.

Example 2 - CP filed a charge alleging that she was denied a promotion because of her gender. One week later, her supervisor invited a few employees out to lunch. CP believed that the reason he excluded her was because of her EEOC charge. Even if the supervisor chose not to invite CP because of her charge, this would not constitute unlawful retaliation because it is not reasonably likely to deter protected activity.

Example 3 - Same as Example 2, except that CP's supervisor invites all employees in CP's unit to regular weekly lunches. The supervisor excluded CP from these lunches after she filed the sex discrimination charge. If CP was excluded because of her charge, this would constitute unlawful retaliation since it could reasonably deter CP or others from engaging in protected activity.

The Commission's position is based on statutory language and policy considerations. The anti-retaliation provisions are exceptionally broad. They make it unlawful "to discriminate" against an individual because of his or her protected activity. This is in contrast to the general anti-discrimination provisions which make it unlawful to discriminate with respect to an individual's "terms, conditions, or privileges of employment." The retaliation provisions set no qualifiers on the term "to discriminate," and therefore prohibit any discrimination that is reasonably likely to deter protected activity\39. They do not restrict the actions that can be challenged to those that affect the terms and conditions of employment\40. Thus, a violation will be found if an employer retaliates against a worker for engaging in protected activity through threats\41, harassment in or out of the workplace, or any other adverse treatment that is reasonably likely to deter protected activity by that individual or other employees.\42

This broad view of coverage accords with the primary purpose of the anti-retaliation provisions, which is to "[m]aintain[] unfettered access to statutory remedial mechanisms."\43 Regardless of the degree or quality of harm to the particular complainant, retaliation harms the public interest by deterring others from filing a charge\44. An interpretation of Title VII that permits some forms of retaliation to go unpunished would undermine the effectiveness of the EEO statutes and conflict with the language and purpose of the anti-retaliation provisions.

E. PROOF OF CAUSAL CONNECTION

In order to establish unlawful retaliation, there must be proof that the respondent took an adverse action because the charging party engaged in protected activity. Proof of this retaliatory motive can be through direct or circumstantial evidence. The evidentiary framework that applies to other types of discrimination claims also applies to retaliation claims.

1. Direct Evidence

If there is credible direct evidence that retaliation was a motive for the challenged action, "cause" should be found. Evidence as to any legitimate motive for the challenged action would be relevant only to relief, not to liability.\45

Direct evidence of a retaliatory motive is any written or verbal statement by a respondent official that s/he undertook the challenged action because the charging party engaged in protected activity. Such evidence also includes a written or oral statement by a respondent official that on its face demonstrates a bias toward the charging party based on his or her protected activity, along with evidence linking that bias to the adverse action. Such a link could be shown if the statement was made by the decision-maker at the time of the adverse action\46. Direct evidence of retaliation is rare.

Example - CP filed a charge against Respondent A, alleging that her supervisor sexually harassed and constructively discharged her. CP subsequently sued A and reached a settlement. When CP applied for a new job with Respondent B, she received a conditional offer subject to a reference check. When B called CP's former supervisor at A Co. for a reference, the supervisor said that CP was a "troublemaker," started a sex harassment lawsuit, and was not anyone B "would want to get mixed up with." B did not hire CP. She suspected that her former supervisor gave her a negative reference and filed retaliation charges against A and B. The EEOC investigator discovered notes memorializing the phone conversation between A and B. These notes are direct evidence of retaliation by A because they prove on their face that A told B about CP's protected activity and that A gave CP a negative reference because of that protected activity. These notes are not direct evidence of retaliation by B because they do not directly prove that B rejected CP because of her protected activity. However, the fact that B gave CP a conditional job offer and then decided not to hire her after learning about her protected activity is strong circumstantial evidence of B's retaliation. (See Section 8-II E.2. below.)

2. Circumstantial Evidence

The most common method of proving that retaliation was the reason for an adverse action is through circumstantial evidence. A violation is established if there is circumstantial evidence raising an inference of retaliation and if the respondent fails to produce evidence of a legitimate, non-retaliatory reason for the challenged action, or if the reason advanced by the respondent is a pretext to hide the retaliatory motive.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE OF RETALIATION

1. Evidence raises inference that retaliation was the cause of the challenged action;

2. Respondent produces evidence of a legitimate, non-retaliatory reason for the challenged action; and

3. Complainant proves that the reason advanced by the respondent is a pretext to hide the retaliatory motive.

An initial inference of retaliation arises where there is proof that the protected activity and the adverse action were related.\47 Typically, the link is demonstrated by evidence that: (1) the adverse action occurred shortly after the protected activity, and (2) the person who undertook the adverse action was aware of the complainant's protected activity before taking the action.

An inference of retaliation may arise even if the time period between the protected activity and the adverse action was long, if there is other evidence that raises an inference of retaliation. For example, in Shirley v. Chrysler First, Inc.\48, a 14-month interval between the plaintiff's filing of an EEOC charge and her termination did not conclusively disprove retaliation where the plaintiff's manager mentioned the EEOC charge at least twice a week during the interim and termination occurred just two months after the EEOC dismissed her charge.\49

Common non-retaliatory reasons offered by respondents for challenged actions include: poor job performance; inadequate qualifications for the position sought; violation of work rules or insubordination; and, with regard to negative job references, truthfulness of the information in the reference. For example, in one case, the plaintiff claimed that she was discharged for retaliatory reasons but the employer produced unrebutted evidence that she was discharged because of her excessive absenteeism\50. In another case, the plaintiff alleged that his former employer's negative job reference was retaliatory, but the defendant established that the evaluation was based on the former supervisor's personal observation of the plaintiff during his employment and contemporary business records documenting those observations.\51

Even if the respondent produces evidence of a legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason for the challenged action, a violation will still be found if this explanation is a pretext designed to hide the true retaliatory motive. Typically, pretext is proved through evidence that the respondent treated the complainant differently from similarly situated employees or that the respondent's explanation for the adverse action is not believable. Pretext can also be shown if the respondent subjected the charging party's work performance to heightened scrutiny after she engaged in protected activity\52.

Example 1- CP alleges that R denied her a promotion because she opposed the under-representation of women in management jobs and was therefore viewed as a "troublemaker." The promotion went to another female employee. R asserts that the selectee was better qualified for the job because she had a Masters in Business Administration, while CP only had a college degree. The EEOC investigator finds that this explanation is pretextual because CP has significantly greater experience working at R Company and experience has always been the most important criterion for selection for management jobs.

Example 2 - CP alleges that R gave him a negative job reference because he had filed an EEOC charge. R produces evidence that its negative statements to CP's prospective employer were honest assessments of CP's job performance. There is no proof of pretext, and therefore the investigator finds no retaliation.

Example 3 - Same as Example 2, except there is evidence that R routinely declines to offer information about former employees' job performance. R fails to offer a credible explanation for why it violated this policy with regard to CP. Therefore, pretext is found.

8-III SPECIAL REMEDIES ISSUES

A. TEMPORARY OR PRELIMINARY RELIEF

Section 706(f)(2) of Title VII authorizes the Commission to seek temporary injunctive relief before final disposition of a charge when a preliminary investigation indicates that prompt judicial action is necessary to carry out the purposes of Title VII. Section 107 of the ADA incorporates this provision. The ADEA and the EPA do not authorize a court to give interim relief pending resolution of an EEOC charge. However, the EEOC can seek such relief as part of a lawsuit for permanent relief, pursuant to Rule 65 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Temporary or preliminary relief allows a court to stop retaliation before it occurs or continues. Such relief is appropriate if there is a substantial likelihood that the challenged action will be found to constitute unlawful retaliation, and if the charging party and/or the EEOC will likely suffer irreparable harm because of the retaliation. Although courts have ruled that financial hardships are not irreparable, other harms that accompany loss of a job may be irreparable. For example, in one case forced retirees showed irreparable harm and qualified for a preliminary injunction where they lost work and future prospects for work, consequently suffering emotional distress, depression, a contracted social life, and other related harms\53. A temporary injunction also is appropriate if the respondent's retaliation will likely cause irreparable harm to the Commission's ability to investigate the charging party's original charge of discrimination. For example, the retaliation may discourage others from providing testimony or from filing additional charges based on the same or other alleged unlawful acts\54.

The intake officer or investigator should notify the Regional Attorney when a charge of retaliation is filed and where temporary or preliminary relief may be appropriate.\55

B. COMPENSATORY AND PUNITIVE DAMAGES

1. Availability of Damages for Retaliation Under ADEA and EPA

A 1977 amendment to the Fair Labor Standards Act authorizes both legal and equitable relief for retaliation claims under that Act\56. Compensatory and punitive damages therefore are available for retaliation claims brought under the EPA and the ADEA, as well as under Title VII and the ADA\57. The compensatory and punitive damages obtained under the EPA and the ADEA are not subject to statutory caps.

2. Appropriateness of Punitive Damages

Proven retaliation frequently constitutes a practice undertaken "with malice or with reckless indifference to the federally protected rights of an aggrieved individual." Therefore, punitive damages often will be appropriate in retaliation claims brought under any of the statutes enforced by the EEOC\58.

1 Section 704(a) of Title VII, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-3(a).

2 Section 4(d) of the ADEA, 29 U.S.C. § 623(d).

3 Section 503(a) of the ADA, 42 U.S.C. § 12203(a). Section 503 (b) of the ADA, 42 U.S.C.12203(b), further provides that it is unlawful "to coerce, intimidate, threaten, or interfere with anyindividual in the exercise or enjoyment of, or on account of his or her having exercised or enjoyed,or on account of his or her having aided or encouraged any other individual in the exercise orenjoyment of, any right granted or protected by this chapter."

4 Section 15(a)(3) of the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), 29 U.S.C. § 215(a)(3).

5 Federal employees are also protected against retaliation under each of the employment discrimination statutes. See, e.g., Hale v. Marsh, 808 F.2d 616, 619 (7th Cir. 1986) (recognizing retaliation cause of action for federal employees under Title VII); Bornholdt v. Brady, 869 F.2d 57, 62 (2d Cir. 1989) (recognizing retaliation cause of action for federal employees under ADEA).

6 Where it appears that a charging party's allegation of unlawful retaliation may also be subject to the jurisdiction of another federal agency or a state or local government, s/he should be referred promptly to the appropriate office. For example, if the charging party is covered by a collective bargaining agreement and is a member of the union, s/he should be referred to the NLRB to be counseled on unlawful retaliation under the National Labor Relations Act. Non-payment of overtime pay should be directed to the Department of Labor, Wage and Hour Division. The EEOC office should proceed with its investigation of allegations under its jurisdiction, and refer to any applicable memorandum of understanding or coordination rule with the agency that also has jurisdiction over the matter.

12 The anti-retaliation provision of the Fair Labor Standards Act, which applies to the Equal Pay Act, does not contain a specific "opposition" clause. However, courts have recognized that the statute prohibits retaliation based on opposition to allegedly unlawful practices. See, e.g., EEOC v. Romeo Community Sch., 976 F.2d 985, 989-90 (6th Cir. 1992); EEOC v. White & Son Enterprises, 881 F.2d 1006, 1011 (11th Cir. 1989). Contra Lambert v. Genessee Hospital, 10 F.3d 46, 55 (2d Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1052 (1994).

13 See, e.g., Barber v. CSX Distrib. Services, 68 F.3d 694 (3d Cir. 1995) (plaintiff's letter to defendant's human resources department complaining about unfair treatment and expressing dissatisfaction that job he sought went to a less qualified individual did not constitute ADEA opposition because letter did not explicitly or implicitly allege that age was reason for alleged unfairness).

Ill. 1996) (plaintiff engaged in statutorily protected expression by requesting accommodation for her disability). The courts in Soileau and Garza only considered whether accommodation requests fall within the opposition or participation clause in Section 503(a) of the ADA. Note, however, that Section 503(b) more broadly makes it unlawful to interfere with "the exercise or enjoyment of . . . any right granted or protected" by the statute.

16 See, e.g., Sumner v. United States Postal Service, 899 F.2d 203 (2d Cir. 1990) (practices protected by opposition clause include writing letters to customers criticizing employer's alleged discrimination).

19 Jackson v. St. Joseph State Hospital, 840 F.2d 1387 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 892 (1988).

20 See, e.g., Coutu v. Martin County Bd. of Comm'rs, 47 F.3d 1068, 1074 (11th Cir. 1995) (no retaliation found where plaintiff was criticized by her supervisor not because she was opposing discrimination but because she was spending an inordinate amount of time in "employee advocacy" activities and was not completing other aspects of her personnel job).

21 This standard has been adopted by every circuit that has considered the issue. See, e.g., Little v. United Technologies, 103 F.3d 956, 960 (11th Cir. 1997), and Trent v. Valley Electric Association, Inc., 41 F.3d 524, 526 (9th Cir. 1994).

22 Berg v. La Crosse Cooler Co., 612 F.2d 1041, 1045 (7th Cir. 1980).

23 See, e.g., Murphy v. Cadillac Rubber & Plastics, Inc., 946 F. Supp. 1108, 1118 (W.D. N.Y. 1996) (plaintiff stated claim of retaliation where he was subjected to adverse action based on his wife's protected activities).

24 The participation clause protects those who testify in an employment discrimination case about their own discriminatory conduct, even if such testimony is involuntary. For example, in Merritt v. Dillard Paper Co., 120 F.3d 1181 (11th Cir.1997), the defendant fired the plaintiff after he reluctantly testified in his co-worker's Title VII case about workplace sexual activities in which he participated. The president of the defendant company told the plaintiff at the time of his termination that his testimony was "the most damning" to the defendant's case. The court found that this comment constituted direct evidence of retaliation.

26 See, e.g., Wyatt v. Boston, 35 F.3d 13, 15 (1st Cir. 1994).

27 See, e.g., EEOC v. Ohio Edison Co., 7 F.3d 541, 544 (6th Cir. 1993) (agreeing that plaintiff's allegation of reprisal for relative's protected activities states claim under Title VII); Thurman v. Robertshaw Control Co., 869 F. Supp. 934, 941 (N.D. Ga. 1994) (plaintiff could make out first element of prima facie case of retaliation by showing that plaintiff's close relative participated in the complaint process).

The Commission disagrees with the Fifth Circuit's holding in Holt v. JTM Indus., 89 F.3d 1224 (5th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 117 S.Ct. 1821 (1997), that there was no unlawful retaliation where the plaintiff was put on paid administrative leave because his wife had filed an age discrimination charge.

28 See, e.g., Christopher v. Stouder Memorial Hosp., 936 F.2d 870, 873-74 (6th Cir.) (defendant's frequent reference to plaintiff's sex discrimination action against prior employer warranted inference that defendant's refusal to hire was retaliatory), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1013 (1991).

Eastman Kodak Co.,104 F.3d 702 (5th Cir.) (anti-retaliation provisions only bar "ultimate employment actions" that are retaliatory; harassment, reprimands, and poor evaluation could not be challenged), cert. denied, 118 S. Ct. 336 (1997).

37 See, e.g., Munday v. Waste Management of North America, 126 F.3d 239 (4th Cir. 1997) (employer's instruction to workers to shun plaintiff who had engaged in protected activity, to spy on her, and to report back to management whatever she said to them did not adversely affect plaintiff's terms, condition, or benefits of employment and therefore could not be challenged), cert. denied, 118 S. Ct. 1053 (1998).

38 Hashimoto, 118 F.3d at 676. See also EEOC v. L. B. Foster, 123 F.3d at 754 n.4 (plaintiff need not prove that retaliatory denial of job reference caused prospective employer to reject her; such a showing is relevant only to damages, not liability); Smith v. Secretary of Navy, 659 F.2d 1113, 1120 (D.C. Cir. 1981) ("the questions of statutory violation and appropriate statutory remedy are conceptually distinct. An illegal act of discrimination -- whether based on race or some other factor such as a motive of reprisal -- is a wrong in itself under Title VII, regardless of whether that wrong would warrant an award of [damages]").

39 See, e.g., Knox v. State of Indiana, 93 F.3d 1327, 1334 (7th Cir. 1996) ("[t]here is nothing in the law of retaliation that restricts the type of retaliatory act that might be visited upon an employee who seeks to invoke her rights by filing a complaint"); Passer v. American Chemical Society, 935 F.2d 322, 331 (D.C. Cir. 1991) (Section 704(a) broadly prohibits an employer from discriminating against its employees in any way for engaging in protected activity and does not "limit its reach only to acts of retaliation that take the form of cognizable employment actions such as discharge, transfer or demotion").

40 Even if there were a requirement that the challenged action affect the terms or conditions of employment, retaliatory acts that create a hostile work environment would meet that standard since, as the Supreme Court has made clear, the terms and condition of employment include the intangible work environment. Meritor Savings Bank v. Vinson, 477 U.S. 57, 64-67 (1986). For examples of cases recognizing that retaliatory harassment is unlawful, see DeAngelis v. El Paso Municipal Police Officers Ass'n., 51 F.3d 591 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 116 S. Ct. 473 (1995); Davis v. Tri-State Mack Distributor, 981 F.2d 340 (8th Cir. 1992).

41 See McKnight v. General Motors Corp., 908 F.2d 104, 111 (7th Cir. 1990) ("[r]etaliation or a threat of retaliation is a common method of deterrence"), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 919 (1991); Garcia v. Lawn, 805 F.2d 1400, 1401-02 (9th Cir. 1986) (threatened transfer to undesirable location); Atkinson v. Oliver T. Carr Co., 40 FEP Cases (BNA) 1041, 1043-44 (D.D.C. 1986) (threat to press criminal complaint).

42 For examples of cases finding unlawful retaliation based on adverse actions that did not affect the terms or conditions of employment, see Hashimoto, 118 F.3d at 675-76 (retaliatory job reference violated Title VII even though it did not cause failure to hire); Berry v. Stevinson Chevrolet, 74 F.3d 980, 986 (10th Cir. 1996) (instigating criminal theft and forgery charges against former employee who filed EEOC charge found retaliatory); Passer, 935 F.2d at 331 (canceling symposium in honor of retired employee who filed ADEA charge found retaliatory).

45 The basis for finding "cause" whenever there is credible direct evidence of a retaliatory motive is Section 107 of the 1991 Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-2(m) and 2000e-5(g)(2)(B). Section 107 provides that an unlawful employment practice is established whenever race, color, religion, sex, or national origin was a motivating factor, even though other factors also motivated the practice. It further provides that a complainant who makes such a showing can obtain declaratory relief, injunctive relief, and attorneys fees but no damages or reinstatement if the respondent proves that it would have taken the same action even absent the discrimination. Section 107 partially overrules Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins, 490 U.S. 228 (1989), which held that a respondent can avoid liability for intentional discrimination in mixed-motives cases if it can prove that it would have made the same decision in the absence of the discrimination.

Some courts have ruled that Section 107 does not apply to retaliation claims. See, e.g., Woodson v. Scott Paper, 109 F.3d 913 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 118 S. Ct. 299 (1997). Those courts apply Price Waterhouse v. Hopkins, and therefore absolve the employer of liability for proven retaliation if the establishes that it would have made the same decision in the absence of retaliation. Other courts have applied Section 107 to retaliation claims. See, e.g., Merritt v. Dillard Paper Co., 120 F.3d 1181, 1191 (11th Cir. 1997).

The Commission concludes that Section 107 applies to retaliation. Courts have long held that the evidentiary framework for proving employment discrimination based on race, sex, or other protected class status also applies to claims of discrimination based on retaliation. Furthermore, an interpretation of Section 107 that permits proven retaliation to go unpunished undermines the purpose of the anti-retaliation provisions of maintaining unfettered access to the statutory remedial mechanism.

46 For example, in Merritt v. Dillard Paper Company, 120 F.3d 1181 (11th Cir. 1997), the plaintiff testified in a co-worker's Title VII action about sexual harassment in the workplace. Shortly after the case was settled, the president of the company fired the plaintiff. The court found direct evidence of retaliation based on the president's statement to the plaintiff, "[y]our deposition was the most damning to Dillard's case, and you no longer have a place here at Dillard Paper Company."

49 See Kachmar v. Sunguard Data Systems, 109 F.3d 173 (3d Cir. 1997) (district court erroneously dismissed plaintiff's retaliation claim because termination occurred nearly one year after her protected activity; when there may be reasons why adverse action was not taken immediately, absence of immediacy does not disprove causation).

Western Missouri Medical Center, 97 F.3d 1085 (8th Cir. 1996) (reasonable person could infer that defendant's explanation for plaintiff's discharge was pretextual where defendant launched investigation into allegedly improper conduct by plaintiff shortly after she engaged in protected activity).

U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission

Office of the Chairman

MEMORANDUM

FROM: Stuart Ishimaru, Acting Chairman

TO: All EEOC Employees

SUBJECT: EEO Policy Statement

DATE: July 7, 2009

The Commission is firmly committed to promoting and maintaining a work environment that ensures equality of opportunity for all of our employees. As a federal civil rights agency, we must all support the full realization of equal opportunity in all aspects of our work and at every level within the Commission.

As the federal agency charged with the enforcement of this nation's employment discrimination laws, the EEOC has a unique and profoundly important role in the government's antidiscrimination efforts. Accordingly, it is the Commission's policy to ensure equal opportunity in all of its employment policies and practices and to prohibit discrimination in all aspects of the agency's operations. As part of our mission, the EEOC must set the example for all other agencies to provide equal employment opportunity for all employees and applicants regardless of their race, religion, color, sex, national origin, age or disability. Also, consistent with Presidential Executive Orders and other laws designed to protect federal employees, we must affirm our commitment to the prohibitions against discrimination based on political affiliation, sexual orientation, status as a parent, marital status or veteran status. This commitment must be exemplified in all of our management practices and decisions, including recruitment and hiring practices, appraisal systems, training and career development programs, as well as in our day-to-day management decisions.

We must also ensure that our own employees who believe that they have been discriminated against are fully able to exercise their right to file an EEO complaint, a grievance or otherwise raise their concerns without fear of reprisal. Acts of reprisal against any employee who engages in protected activity will not be tolerated.

EEOC managers and supervisors are reminded of their responsibility to prevent, document and promptly correct harassing conduct in the workplace. Employees are urged to report acts of harassment to the appropriate agency officials as outlined in the Agency's Harassment Order.

All EEOC employees share the responsibility for ensuring that EEOC is a model workplace and is free of all forms of discrimination. I challenge each and every employee to take responsibility for executing the Commission's EEO policy and to cooperate fully in its enforcement.

Facts About Retaliation

An employer may not fire, demote, harass or otherwise "retaliate" against an individual for filing a charge of discrimination, participating in a discrimination proceeding, or otherwise opposing discrimination. The same laws that prohibit discrimination based on race, color, sex, religion, national origin, age, and disability, as well as wage differences between men and women performing substantially equal work, also prohibit retaliation against individuals who oppose unlawful discrimination or participate in an employment discrimination proceeding.

In addition to the protections against retaliation that are included in all of the laws enforced by EEOC, the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) also protects individuals from coercion, intimidation, threat, harassment, or interference in their exercise of their own rights or their encouragement of someone else's exercise of rights granted by the ADA.

There are three main terms that are used to describe retaliation. Retaliation occurs when an employer, employment agency, or labor organization takes an adverse action against a covered individual because he or she engaged in a protected activity. These three terms are described below.

Adverse Action

An adverse action is an action taken to try to keep someone from opposing a discriminatory practice, or from participating in an employment discrimination proceeding. Examples of adverse actions include:

- employment actions such as termination, refusal to hire, and denial of promotion,
- other actions affecting employment such as threats, unjustified negative evaluations, unjustified negative references, or increased surveillance, and
- any other action such as an assault or unfounded civil or criminal charges that are likely to deter reasonable people from pursuing their rights.

Adverse actions do not include petty slights and annoyances, such as stray negative comments in an otherwise positive or neutral evaluation, "snubbing" a colleague, or negative comments that are justified by an employee's poor work performance or history.

Even if the prior protected activity alleged wrongdoing by a different employer, retaliatory adverse actions are unlawful. For example, it is unlawful for a worker's current employer to retaliate against him for pursuing an EEO charge against a former employer.

Of course, employees are not excused from continuing to perform their jobs or follow their company's legitimate workplace rules just because they have filed a complaint with the EEOC or opposed discrimination.

For more information about adverse actions, see EEOC's Compliance Manual Section 8, Chapter II, Part D.

Covered Individuals

Covered individuals are people who have opposed unlawful practices, participated in proceedings, or requested accommodations related to employment discrimination based on race, color, sex, religion, national origin, age, or disability. Individuals who have a close association with someone who has engaged in such protected activity also are covered individuals. For example, it is illegal to terminate an employee because his spouse participated in employment discrimination litigation.

Individuals who have brought attention to violations of law other than employment discrimination are NOT covered individuals for purposes of anti-discrimination retaliation laws. For example,"whistleblowers" who raise ethical, financial, or other concerns unrelated to employment discrimination are not protected by the EEOC enforced laws.

EXHIBIT 147

Protected activity includes:

Opposition to a practice believed to be unlawful discrimination

Opposition is informing an employer that you believe that he/she is engaging in prohibited discrimination. Opposition is protected from retaliation as long as it is based on a reasonable, good-faith belief that the complained of practice violates anti-discrimination law; and the manner of the opposition is reasonable.

Examples of protected opposition include:

- Complaining to anyone about alleged discrimination against oneself or others;
- Threatening to file a charge of discrimination;
- Picketing in opposition to discrimination; or
- Refusing to obey an order reasonably believed to be discriminatory.

Examples of activities that are NOT protected opposition include:

- Actions that interfere with job performance so as to render the employee ineffective; or
- Unlawful activities such as acts or threats of violence.

Participation in an employment discrimination proceeding.

Participation means taking part in an employment discrimination proceeding. Participation is protected activity even if the proceeding involved claims that ultimately were found to be invalid. Examples of participation include:

- Filing a charge of employment discrimination;
- Cooperating with an internal investigation of alleged discriminatory practices; or
- Serving as a witness in an EEO investigation or litigation.

A protected activity can also include requesting a reasonable accommodation based on religion or disability.

For more information about Protected Activities, see EEOC's Compliance Manual, Section 8, Chapter II, Part B - Opposition and Part C - Participation.

PRESS RELEASE
5-26-98

EEOC ISSUES GUIDANCE CLARIFYING RIGHT TO PROTECTION AGAINST RETALIATION

WASHINGTON -- The U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) announced today the release of comprehensive guidance on the prohibition against retaliation aimed at individuals who file charges of employment discrimination or who participate in the investigation of an EEO charge.

The Supreme Court addressed the issue of retaliation last year, in Robinson v. Shell Oil Company. The Court made it clear that employers are prohibited from retaliating against former employees as well as current employees for engaging in activity protected under the employment discrimination laws. The guidance explains that decision and also provides direction on what constitutes protected activity, what constitutes an adverse action that can be challenged as retaliatory, and what evidence is necessary to prove that an adverse action was caused by protected activity.

"It is important for the Commission to provide clear and comprehensive guidance on employers' obligations under the anti-retaliation provisions and on the legal standards that apply," said EEOC Chairman Paul M. Igasaki. "Few things are more fundamental to stopping discrimination than protecting a person's access to their rights without fear of retribution."

The number of charges alleging retaliation has more than doubled over the past several years. In fiscal year 1991, the Commission received over 7,900 charges by individuals claiming retaliation because they had filed charges or participated in the charge process. In fiscal year 1997, that number had risen to over 18,100 charges.

The policy guidance is set forth in a chapter that is the first installment of the Commission's new Compliance Manual. The new Manual eventually will replace Volume II of the Commission's existing Compliance Manual, and is more streamlined and functional.

The text of the guidance will be available on EEOC's web site at www.eeoc.gov shortly after the release of the document. You can also obtain a copy by writing to EEOC's Office of Communications and Legislative Affairs, 1801 L Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20507.

EEOC enforces Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which prohibits employment discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, and national origin; the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, which prohibits discrimination against individuals 40 years of age or older; sections of the Civil Rights Act of 1991; the Equal Pay Act; Title I of the Americans with Disabilities Act, which prohibits discrimination against people with disabilities in the private sector and state and local governments; and the Rehabilitation Act's prohibitions against disability discrimination in the federal government.

U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission

Prohibited Employment Policies/Practices

Under the laws enforced by EEOC, it is illegal to discriminate against someone (applicant or employee) because of that person's race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, age (40 or older), disability or genetic information. It is also illegal to retaliate against a person because he or she complained about discrimination, filed a charge of discrimination, or participated in an employment discrimination investigation or lawsuit.

The law forbids discrimination in every aspect of employment.

The laws enforced by EEOC prohibit an employer or other covered entity from using neutral employment policies and practices that have a disproportionately negative effect on applicants or employees of a particular race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), or national origin, or on an individual with a disability or class of individuals with disabilities, if the polices or practices at issue are not job-related and necessary to the operation of the business. The laws enforced by EEOC also prohibit an employer from using neutral employment policies and practices that have a disproportionately negative impact on applicants or employees age 40 or older, if the policies or practices at issue are not based on a reasonable factor other than age.

Job Advertisements

It is illegal for an employer to publish a job advertisement that shows a preference for or discourages someone from applying for a job because of his or her race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, age (40 or older), disability or genetic information.

For example, a help-wanted ad that seeks "females" or "recent college graduates" may discourage men and people over 40 from applying and may violate the law.

Recruitment

It is also illegal for an employer to recruit new employees in a way that discriminates against them because of their race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, age (40 or older), disability or genetic information.

For example, an employer's reliance on word-of-mouth recruitment by its mostly Hispanic work force may violate the law if the result is that almost all new hires are Hispanic.

Application & Hiring

It is illegal for an employer to discriminate against a job applicant because of his or her race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, age (40 or older), disability or genetic information. For example, an employer may not refuse to give employment applications to people of a certain race.

An employer may not base hiring decisions on stereotypes and assumptions about a person's race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, age (40 or older), disability or genetic information.

If an employer requires job applicants to take a test, the test must be necessary and related to the job and the employer may not exclude people of a particular race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, or individuals with disabilities. In addition, the employer may not use a test that excludes applicants age 40 or older if the test is not based on a reasonable factor other than age.

If a job applicant with a disability needs an accommodation (such as a sign language interpreter) to apply for a job, the employer is required to provide the accommodation, so long as the accommodation does not cause the employer significant difficulty or expense.

Job Referrals

It is illegal for an employer, employment agency or union to take into account a person's race, color, religion, sex

EXHIBIT 149

Reasonable Accommodation & Religion

The law requires an employer to reasonably accommodate an employee's religious beliefs or practices, unless doing so would cause difficulty or expense for the employer. This means an employer may have to make reasonable adjustments at work that will allow the employee to practice his or her religion, such as allowing an employee to voluntarily swap shifts with a co- worker so that he or she can attend religious services.

Training & Apprenticeship Programs

It is illegal for a training or apprenticeship program to discriminate on the bases of race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, age (40 or older), disability or genetic information. For example, an employer may not deny training opportunities to African-American employees because of their race.

In some situations, an employer may be allowed to set age limits for participation in an apprenticeship program.

Harassment

It is illegal to harass an employee because of race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, age (40 or older), disability or genetic information.

It is also illegal to harass someone because they have complained about discrimination, filed a charge of discrimination, or participated in an employment discrimination investigation or lawsuit.

Harassment can take the form of slurs, graffiti, offensive or derogatory comments, or other verbal or physical conduct. Sexual harassment (including unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other conduct of a sexual nature) is also unlawful. Although the law does not prohibit simple teasing, offhand comments, or isolated incidents that are not very serious, harassment is illegal if it is so frequent or severe that it creates a hostile or offensive work environment or if it results in an adverse employment decision (such as the victim being fired or demoted).

The harasser can be the victim's supervisor, a supervisor in another area, a co-worker, or someone who is not an employee of the employer, such as a client or customer.

Harassment outside of the workplace may also be illegal if there is a link with the workplace. For example, if a supervisor harasses an employee while driving the employee to a meeting.

Read more about harassment.

Terms & Conditions Of Employment

The law makes it illegal for an employer to make any employment decision because of a person's race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, age (40 or older), disability or genetic information. That means an employer may not discriminate when it comes to such things as hiring, firing, promotions, and pay. It also means an employer may not discriminate, for example, when granting breaks, approving leave, assigning work stations, or setting any other term or condition of employment - however small.

Pre-Employment Inquiries (General)

As a general rule, the information obtained and requested through the pre-employment process should be limited to those essential for determining if a person is qualified for the job; whereas, information regarding race, sex, national origin, age, and religion are irrelevant in such determinations.

Employers are explicitly prohibited from making pre-employment inquiries about disability.

Although state and federal equal opportunity laws do not clearly forbid employers from making pre-employment inquiries that relate to, or disproportionately screen out members based on race, color, sex, national origin, religion, or age, such inquiries may be used as evidence of an employer's intent to discriminate unless the questions asked can be justified by some business purpose.

Therefore, inquiries about organizations, clubs, societies, and lodges of which an applicant may be a member or any other questions, which may indicate the applicant's race, sex, national origin, disability status, age, religion, color or ancestry if answered, should generally be avoided.

Similarly, employers should not ask for a photograph of an applicant. If needed for identification purposes, a photograph may be obtained after an offer of employment is made and accepted.

Pre-Employment Inquiries and:

- Race
- Height & Weight
- Credit Rating Or Economic Status
- Religious Affiliation Or Beliefs
- Citizenship
- Marital Status, Number Of Children
- Gender
- Arrest & Conviction
- Security/Background Checks For Certain Religious Or Ethnic Groups
- Disability
- Medical Questions & Examinations

Dress Code

In general, an employer may establish a dress code which applies to all employees or employees within certain job categories. There are a few possible exceptions.

A dress code must not treat some employees less favorably because of their national origin. For example, a dress code that prohibits certain kinds of ethnic dress, such as traditional African or East Indian attire, but otherwise permits casual dress would treat some employees less favorably because of their national origin.

An employer may require all workers to follow a uniform dress code even if the dress code conflicts with some workers' ethnic beliefs or practices.

If the dress code conflicts with an employee's religious practices and the employee requests an accommodation, the employer must modify the dress code or permit an exception to the dress code unless doing so would result in undue hardship. Similarly, if an employee requests an accommodation to the dress code because of his disability, the employer must modify the dress code or permit an exception to the dress code, unless doing so would result in undue hardship.

If an employee needs to modify a dress requirement because of a disability, the employer may need to grant that employee a reasonable accommodation.

Constructive Discharge/Forced To Resign

Discriminatory practices under the laws EEOC enforces also include constructive discharge or forcing an employee to resign by making the work environment so intolerable a reasonable person would not be able to stay.

U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission

Retaliation

All of the laws we enforce make it illegal to fire, demote, harass, or otherwise "retaliate" against people (applicants or employees) because they filed a charge of discrimination, because they complained to their employer or other covered entity about discrimination on the job, or because they participated in an employment discrimination proceeding (such as an investigation or lawsuit).

For example, it is illegal for an employer to refuse to promote an employee because she filed a charge of discrimination with the EEOC, even if EEOC later determined no discrimination occurred.

Retaliation & Work Situations

The law forbids retaliation when it comes to any aspect of employment, including hiring, firing, pay, job assignments, promotions, layoff, training, fringe benefits, and any other term or condition of employment.

COMPLAINT

NATURE OF THE ACTION

This is an action under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq. ("Title VII"), and Title I of the Civil Rights Act of 1991, 42 U.S.C. § 1981a, to correct unlawful employment practices on the basis of retaliation and to provide appropriate relief to employees who were adversely affected by such practices. As alleged with greater particularity below, a class of employees, including Steven Whitlow ("Charging Party"), were subjected to retaliation, whereby those employees were required – as a condition of their continued employment – to waive their right to file charges with the EEOC and prospectively waive their right to pursue relief regarding future discrimination.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

1. This action is brought by the United States Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to enforce the provisions of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq.

2. This action is authorized and instituted pursuant to § 706(f)(1), § 706(f)(3), 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(f)(1), §2000e-5(f)(3).

3. This court has jurisdiction of this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 451, 1331, 1337,

1343, 1345, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e-5(f)(3), and § 102 of the Civil Rights Act of 1991, 42 U.S.C. § 1981a.

4. The unlawful acts alleged below were and are now being committed within the jurisdiction of the United States District Court for the Central District of Illinois, Urbana Division.

PARTIES AND OTHER PERSONS

5. Plaintiff, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (the "Commission"), is the agency of the United States of America charged with the administration, interpretation and enforcement of Title VII, and is expressly authorized to bring this action by § 706(f)(1), Title VII, 42 U.S.C. §2000e-5(f)(1).

6. At all relevant times, Defendant Cognis Corporation ("Cognis" or "Defendant") has been a corporation doing business continuously in Illinois.

7. At all relevant times, Defendant has continuously had at least fifteen employees.

8. At all relevant times, Defendant has continuously been an employer engaged in an industry affecting commerce within the meaning of Sections 701(b), (g) and (h) of Title VII, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e(b), (g) and (h).

STATEMENT OF CLAIMS

9. On or about December 19, 2007, more than thirty (30) days prior to the institution of this action, Charging Party filed a charge of discrimination with the Commission alleging violations of Title VII by Defendant.

10. On or about March 8, 2010, the Commission sent a Letter of Determination to Defendant, notifying Defendant of the determinations made by the Commission in connection with the EEOC charge filed by Charging Party, and inviting Defendant to participate in an effort to resolve this matter by conciliation.

12. All conditions precedent to the institution of this lawsuit have been fulfilled.

13. From at least 2005 to the present, Cognis has required a number of its employees – as a condition of employment – to enter into agreements that purport to waive the employees' right to file charges with the EEOC.

14. From at least 2005 to the present, Cognis has required a number of its employees – as a condition of employment – to enter into agreements that purport to waive the employees' right to recover for discrimination occurring in the future.

15. In or around May 2007, for example, Cognis conditioned Charging Party's continued employment on his agreeing to enter into a "Last Chance Agreement" ("LCA") that included an extensive series of releases and waivers that would have insulated Defendant from any effort by Charging Party to file charges with the EEOC or to seek recovery for future discrimination under Title VII. Charging Party asked Defendant to modify the agreement by removing the waivers, explaining that he did not wish to give up his civil rights, but Defendant told him the LCA could not be modified. Because Defendant refused to modify the LCA to remove the rights-waiving provisions, Charging Party revoked the agreement on or around May 21, 2007. Defendant then discharged Charging Party that same day.

16. The effect of the practices complained of above has been to deprive a class of employees, including the Charging Party, of equal employment opportunities and otherwise adversely affect their status as employees in retaliation for opposition to discrimination prohibited by Title VII and/or anticipated participation in activity protected under Title VII.

17. The unlawful employment practices complained of above were and are intentional.

18. The unlawful employment practices complained of above were and are done with malice or with reckless indifference to the federally protected rights of each member of the class of employees described above, including Charging Party.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

WHEREFORE, the Commission requests that this Court:

A. Grant a permanent injunction enjoining Defendant, its officers, agents, servants, employees, attorneys, successors, assigns, and all persons in active concert or participation with it, from engaging in any employment practice prohibited by Title VII;

B. Order Defendant to institute and carry out policies, practices, and programs which eradicate the effects of its past and present unlawful employment practices;

C. Order Defendant to make each member of the class of employees described above, including Charging Party, whole by providing appropriate backpay with prejudgment interest, in amounts to be determined at trial, and other affirmative relief, including but not limited to reinstatement, that is necessary to eradicate the effects of its unlawful employment practices;

D. Order Defendant to make each member of the class of employees described above, including Charging Party, whole by providing compensation for past and future pecuniary loss;

E. Order Defendant to make each member of the class of employees described above, including Charging Party, whole by providing compensation for past and future nonpecuniary losses, including emotional pain, suffering, loss of enjoyment of life, inconvenience, and humiliation;

F. Order Defendant to pay each member of the class of employees described above, including Charging Party, punitive damages for its intentional, malicious and reckless conduct, in an amount to be determined at trial;

G. Grant such further relief as this Court deems necessary and proper in the public interest; and

H. Award the Commission its costs in this action.

JURY TRIAL DEMAND

The Commission requests a jury trial on all questions of fact raised by the Complaint.

EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY COMMISSION,	Civil Action No. 07 CV 6434 CJS
Plaintiff,
-against-	COMPLAINT AND JURY TRIAL DEMAND
ELMER W. DAVIS INC.,
Defendant.

NATURE OF THE ACTION

This is an action under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and Title I of the Civil Rights Act of 1991 to correct unlawful employment practices on the basis of race by Elmer W. Davis Inc. ("Defendant"), and to provide appropriate relief to Samuel Crenshaw ("Charging Party") and a class of similarly situated Black employees affected by Defendant's discriminatory practices (collectively, "claimants"). As alleged in greater detail below, Defendant unlawfully discriminated against Charging Party and claimants by subjecting them to a hostile work environment on the basis of race (Black) and by subjecting Charging Party and claimants to disparate treatment in the terms, conditions and privileges of employment on the basis of race (Black) by giving them less favorable job assignments.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

1. Jurisdiction of this Court is invoked pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 451, 1331, 1337, 1343 and 1345. This action is authorized and instituted pursuant to Section 706(f)(1) and (3) of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended, 42 U.S.C. §2000e-5(f)(1) and (3) and Section 102 of the Civil Rights Act of 1991, 42 U.S.C. § 1981a.

2. The employment practices alleged to be unlawful were committed within the jurisdiction of the Western District Court of New York.

PARTIES

3. Plaintiff, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (the "Commission"), is the agency of the United States of America charged with administration, interpretation, and enforcement of Title VII, and is expressly authorized to bring this action by Section 706(f)(1) and (3) of Title VII, 42 U.S.C. §2000e-5(f)(1) and (3).

4. At all relevant times, Defendant has continuously been a New York corporation doing business in the State of New York and the City of Rochester, New York, and has continuously had at least fifteen employees.

5. At all relevant times, Defendant has continuously been an employer engaged in an industry affecting commerce within the meaning of Section 701(b), (g) and (h) of Title VII, 42 U.S.C §§2000e(b), (g) and (h).

STATEMENT OF CLAIMS

6. More than thirty days prior to the institution of this lawsuit, Samuel Crenshaw, on behalf of himself and of similarly situated African American employees, filed a charge with the Commission alleging violations of Title VII by Defendant. All conditions precedent to the institution of this lawsuit have been fulfilled.

7. Since at least 1993, Defendant engaged in unlawful employment practices in violation of Section 703(a) of Title VII, 42 U.S.C. § 2000(e)-(a) and (b). These practices included, but are not limited to, the following:

a. Employees and supervisors at Defendant's Rochester, New York location subjected Black employees, including Charging Party and claimants to a racially hostile work environment and harassment based on their race by: frequently making racially offensive comments including but not limited to referring to Black employees, including Charging Party and claimants, as "niggers," "lazy niggers" and "Sambo" and making racially offensive comments in the presence of Charging Party and claimants, including but not limited to comments such as "[a]ll niggers should get on a boat and go back to Africa" or "[a]ll coloreds need to go back to Africa," "[w]hat do you expect, you got a bunch of lazy niggers" and "[e]very White should have 5 Black slaves"; several of the company's portable restrooms contained offensive graffiti with offensive statements about Black people including racial epithets such as the word "nigger" and swastikas; and a noose was hung at a worksite;

b. Defendant had actual or constructive knowledge of the racial harassment and racially hostile work environment for Black employees, including Charging Party and claimants, inasmuch as the harassment described above was committed by and/or in the presence of Defendant's supervisors, and/or Charging Party and/or claimants complained to Defendant about the harassment;

c. Defendants failed to take any appropriate measures to prevent the racial harassment and racially hostile work environment, and failed to take any effective remedial action;

d. Defendant repeatedly subjected Black employees, including Charging Party and claimants, to disparate treatment in terms, conditions and privileges of employment in relation to job assignments by giving Black employees, including Charging Party and claimants, less favorable job assignments than White employees;

8. Defendant's practices complained of above deprived Charging Party and other claimants of equal employment opportunities and otherwise adversely affect their status as employees because of their race (Black).

9. Defendant's unlawful employment practices complained of above were intentional.

10. Defendant's unlawful employment practices complained of above were done with malice or with reckless indifference to the federally protected rights of the Charging Party and claimants.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

Therefore, the Commission respectfully requests that this Court:

A. Grant a permanent injunction enjoining Defendant, its officers, successors, assigns and all persons in active concert or participation with Defendant, from engaging in any employment practices which discriminate on the basis of race and enjoining Defendant, its officers, successors, assigns and all persons in active concert or participation with it, from retaliating against anyone who engaged in protected activity in connection with this matter;

B. Order Defendant to institute and carry out policies, practices and programs which eradicate the effects of its past and present unlawful employment practices;

C. Order Defendant to make whole those individuals affected by the unlawful employment practices described above, including Charging Parties and claimants, by providing appropriate backpay with prejudgment interest and frontpay, in amounts to be determined at trial, and other affirmative relief necessary to eradicate the effects of Defendant's unlawful employment practices;

D. CIVIL ACTION NO. 02-CV-984

NATURE OF THE ACTION

This is an action under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and Title I of the Civil Rights Act of 1991 to correct unlawful employment practices on the basis of sex, female, and to provide appropriate relief to the Charging Party, Marion Shaub, who was adversely affected by such practices. The Commission alleges that Ms. Shaub, who was employed as a tractor-trailer driver, was subjected to a hostile work environment and to different terms and conditions of employment due to her gender. The unlawful behavior took the form of anti-female remarks, threats and vehicle tampering by male co-workers, who also failed to assist her in loading her truck and threatened to take over her driving routes. Ms. Shaub notified management of the hostile behavior and working conditions and the vehicle tampering, but management failed to take prompt effective corrective action. The Commission also alleges that one of Ms. Shaub's driving routes was reclassified and awarded to one of the male harassers, who boasted openly about taking Ms. Shaub's route. Because she had become traumatized by the threats, sabotage to her vehicle, and hostile work environment, Ms. Shaub transferred to an office position. After the transfer, male co-workers disparaged Ms. Shaub and treated her in a condescending manner and she was not given the necessary equipment to perform her office duties. These factors, coupled with the cumulative effect of the hostile work environment and vehicle sabotage, caused Ms. Shaub to be constructively discharged.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

1. Jurisdiction of this Court is invoked pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 451, 1331, 1337, 1343 and 1345. This action is authorized and instituted pursuant to § 706(f) (1) and (3) of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended, 42 U.S.C. "§ 2000e-5(f)(1) and (3)" ("Title VII") and Section 102 of the Civil Rights Act of 1991, 42 U.S.C. § 1981A.

2. The employment practices alleged to be unlawful were and are now being committed within the jurisdiction of the United States District Court for the Middle District of Pennsylvania.

PARTIES

3. Plaintiff, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (the "Commission"), is the agency of the United States of America charged with the administration, interpretation and enforcement of Title VII, and is expressly authorized to bring this action by Section 706(f)(1) and (3) of Title VII, 42 U.S.C. § 2000(e)-5(f) (1) and (3).

4. At all relevant times, Defendant, FedEx Express Corporation ("Fed Ex") has continuously been and is now a Delaware corporation doing business in the State of Pennsylvania, and the City of Middletown, and has continuously had at least fifteen (15) employees.

5. At all relevant times, Defendant Employer has continuously been an employer engaged in an industry affecting commerce within the meaning of Sections 701(b), (g) and (h) of Title VII, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e(b), (g) and (h).

STATEMENT OF CLAIMS

6. More than thirty days prior to the institution of this lawsuit, Charging Party Marion Shaub filed a charge of discrimination with the Commission alleging violations of Title VII by Defendant Employer. All conditions precedent to the institution of this lawsuit have been fulfilled.

7. Since at least December, 1997, Defendant Employer has engaged unlawful employment practices at its Middletown, Pennsylvania facility in violation of Sections 703(a) (1) of Title VII, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2(a) (1) and 2000 (e)-3 (a) (1), by subjecting Ms. Shaub to a sexually hostile work environment and to discrimination in the terms and conditions of her employment, due to her gender. The unlawful employment practices included, but were not limited to, the following:

(A) As early as the winter of 1997, male co-worker Gordon Bowen complained about Ms. Shaub's hours, stating that she had better watch out or her "boat might sink." Ramp Agent Frank DeScehire told Ms. Shaub that women should be "barefoot and pregnant", and other male co-workers complained about Ms. Shaub's route and made anti-female remarks about Ms. Shaub as a tractor-trailer driver. The anti-female remarks continued throughout 1997 and 1998.

(B) Ms. Shaub complained to management about the co-workers' remarks in May, 1999.

(C) In the winter of 1999, male co-worker Steve Crumling made a series of sexually hostile remarks to Ms. Shaub. He told her that when she removed her glasses she "looked like a porn star", and, when she commented that the ground was slippery, he stated "that's what my wife said last night." He also told Ms. Shaub that if" [she] were his daughter he would abort her", and referred to her as a "damn broad" to other workers.

(D) Ms. Shaub informed management about Crumling's remarks in or about January, 2000.

(E) After Crumling learned that Ms. Shaub had complained about his conduct, he responded by thanking Ms. Shaub for "getting him in trouble" and proceeded to refuse to help Ms. Shaub load her trucks. Further, he instructed his subordinate employees to refuse to give her assistance, even though the loading was a duty of Crumling and his team to help the drivers load their trucks.

(F) In or about February 2000, Ms. Shaub reported to management that Crumling and his team were refusing to help her load her trucks.

(G) On January 25, 2000, the brake line in Ms. Shaub's truck failed, causing a safety hazard. One of her male co-workers then warned her to "be careful" and "watch out for sabotage."

(H) On February 3, 2000, Ms. Shaub became wedged between two one-ton cans that were being loaded on a truck. Her male co-workers stated that the can was pushed or "let go" in her direction, intending to harm her. Ms. Shaub reported the incident to management.

(I) On February 18, 2000, Ms. Shaub found dirt in her truck's brake line, and the line was cut. She filed a Vehicle Incident Report, a police report, and also reported the incident to management. Defendant's mechanic admitted that the type of damage to Ms. Shaub's vehicle "would not happen by coincidence", and that someone "could have introduced something" into the line.

(J) On March 24, 2000, Ms. Shaub experienced another brake failure and submitted a Vehicle Incident Report. Also, March, 2000, Ms. Shaub found the mail in her slot ripped up and had to ask management for another copy of a company vacation schedule.

(K) Ms. Shaub filed a formal written complaint on March 28, 2000, alleging that she had been threatened, her vehicle had been sabotaged, and she had been physically injured, and did not feel safe driving, despite the fact that she had already reported the hostile environment and work problems to management several times.

(I) Shaub's brakes failed again on April 27, 2000 and a Vehicle Incident Report was made.

(J) On April 13, 2000, the truck normally driven by Ms. Shaub was taken out by a co-worker who found that a brake part had been pulled away. A Vehicle Incident Report was made. The co-worker stated that management tried to blame the broken line on him, but he stated that "the line broke on me."

(K) Ms. Shaub's male co-worker, Mike Pankake, had threatened to take Ms. Shaub's driving route. In or about April, 2000, her part-time route was reclassified as full-time, and was awarded to Pankake. After Pankake was awarded the route, he boasted to co-workers that he was responsible for having the route re-classified and Ms. Shaub removed, and that since he had the route, the harassment of Ms. Shaub would stop.

(L) After making repeated complaints to Defendant about the sexist comments, sabotage to her truck, and threats made by male co-workers, Ms. Shaub transferred to an office position. Thereafter, the male drivers spoke to her in a condescending and disparaging manner. Moreover, she was not given the necessary equipment to do the job. As a result of the hostile work environment created by her male workers, and Defendant's failure to take any remedial action, Ms. Shaub became emotionally and psychologically devastated by FedEx's course of conduct. Accordingly, Ms. Shaub was constructively discharged from her employment in September, 2000.

8. The effect of the practices complained of in paragraph 7 (A-L) above, has been to deprive Ms. Shaub of equal employment opportunities and otherwise adversely affect her status as an employee because of her sex.

9. The unlawful employment practices complained of in paragraph 7 were intentional.

10. The unlawful employment practices complained of in paragraph 7 were done with malice or with reckless indifference to the federally protected rights of Marion Shaub.

PRAYER FOR RELIEF

Wherefore, the Commission respectfully requests that this Court:

A. Grant a permanent injunction enjoining Defendant Employer, its officers, successors, assigns, and all persons in active concert or participation with it, from engaging in sex discrimination, sexual harassment and any other employment practice which discriminates on the basis of sex.

B. Order Defendant Employer to institute and carry out policies, practices, and programs which provide equal employment opportunities for employees regardless of sex, which prohibit sexual harassment in the workplace, and which eradicate the effects of its past and present unlawful employment practices.

C. Order Defendant Employer to make whole Marion Shaub by providing appropriate backpay with prejudgment interest, in amounts to be determined at trial, and other affirmative relief necessary to eradicate the effects of its unlawful employment practices, including but not limited to rightful-place reinstatement or front pay.

D. Order Defendant Employer to make whole Marion Shaub by providing compensation for past and future pecuniary losses resulting from the unlawful employment practices described in paragraph 7, including but not limited to out-of-pocket losses in amounts to be determined at trial.

E. Order Defendant Employer to make whole Marion Shaub by providing compensation for past and future nonpecuniary losses resulting from the unlawful practices complained of in paragraph 7, including pain and suffering, humiliation, anxiety, depression, trauma, and loss of life's pleasures, in amounts to be determined at trial.

F. Order Defendant Employer to pay Marion Shaub punitive damages for its malicious and reckless conduct described in paragraph 7, in amounts to be determined at trial.

G. Grant such further relief as the Court deems necessary and proper in the public interest.

H. Award the Commission its costs of this action.

COMPLAINT OF INTERVENOR MARION SHAUB

I. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

1. In this action, Plaintiff, MARION SHAUB, hereinafter referred to as "Plaintiff" and/or "Ms. Shaub", seeks declaratory, injunctive, and equitable relief; liquidated compensatory, and punitive damages; and costs and attorney's fees for the sex discrimination, harassment, retaliation for complaining about sex discrimination, physical injury, and intentional infliction of emotional distress by Defendant, FEDERAL EXPRESS CORPORATION, hereinafter referred to as "Defendant" and/or "FedEx".

II. JURISDICTION

2. This action arises under Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991, 42 U.S.C., §2000e, et seq.; the; the Pennsylvania Human Relations Act (PHRA), 43 P.S.§951, et seq.; the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the common law of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

3. Jurisdiction over the federal claims is invoked pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1343 (4) and 29 U.S.C. §216 (b) and over the state law claims pursuant to the doctrine of pendent jurisdiction.

4. Jurisdiction over the additional claims of sex discrimination is appropriate because on or about November 1, 2000 Plaintiff's Complaint to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) was filed and time-stamped and was timely cross-filed with the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission (PHRC) regarding her treatment by FedEx. On or about February 28, 2002, the EEOC filed a complaint and demand for a jury trial in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. The plaintiff, Marion Shaub, seeks to intervene in that action to assert her state and common law claims.

5. Declaratory and injunctive relief is sought pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §2001 and 2002 and Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991 by the EEOC; and Marion Shaub seeks such relief under the Pennsylvania Human Relations Act (PHRA), 43 P.S. §962; and Article 1 section 28 of the Pennsylvania Constitution.

6. Compensatory and punitive damages are available under the Civil Rights Act of 1991; the Pennsylvania Human Relations Act (PHRA), 43 P.S. et seq.; and under the pendent state claims; and other damages are sought, including, but not limited to, back pay and front pay and other lost benefits under Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991, the Pennsylvania

Human Relations Act (PHRA), 43 P.S. §951, et seq, and the common law of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

7. Costs and attorney's fees may be awarded pursuant to Title VII, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991, 42 U.S.C.§ 2000e-5 (k); Rule 54 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure; and the Pennsylvania Human Relations Act (PHRA), 43 P.S. §962 (c.2).

III. VENUE

8. This action properly lies in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, pursuant to 28 U.S.C.§1391 (b) because the claim arose in Pennsylvania and was filed by the EEOC in this district.

IV. PARTIES

9. Plaintiff, MARION SHAUB, is a female adult individual who resides at 35 Amanda Lane, Wrightsville, PA 17368.

10. Defendant, FEDERAL EXPRESS CORPORATION, (Fed Ex) has continuously been and is now doing business in the State of Pennsylvania, engages in an industry affecting interstate commerce, and employs more than fifteen (15) regular employees.

V. FACTS

11. The plaintiff, MARION SHAUB, incorporates by reference all facts pled in the Complaint filed by the EEOC in this case.

12. Plaintiff, MARION SHAUB, was first employed by Defendant, FEDERAL EXPRESS CORPORATION, in October 1995 as a courier. In July 1997 she was promoted to a ramp transport driver. From 1997 to September 2000, Ms. Shaub worked out of the Middletown, Pennsylvania ramp. She was the only female tractor-trailer driver with FedEx who was assigned to Middletown.

13. Throughout Plaintiff's employment with FedEx in Middletown, PA, she was continuously subjected to poor work assignments because of her sex, subjected to constant pressure to quit her job because she was a woman, subjected to sexual innuendo and harassment, and subjected to physical damages and intimidation because the male drivers did not want to work with a female. Many internal complaints (both formal written and verbal) of sex discrimination were filed with FedEx throughout Ms. Shaub's employment.

14. Plaintiff initially was assigned to work on a route called the IPT route in November 1997. In what was to become a familiar discriminatory scenario, a male tractor-trailer driver, Brian Kaufman, wanted that route. He approached management who upgraded Ms. Shuab's route to full time and reassigned the route to Mr. Kaufman. There were four times during the next three years in which Ms. Shaub was removed from a favorable route so that the position could be given to a male truck driver, the last time occurring in August 2000.

15. By the summer of 1999, the plaintiff was suffering under a continuing level of hostility and anger towards her from the male employees because of her sex. She complained to senior management about the hostility and anger she was suffering from the other drivers.

16. Steve Crumbling, the deck captain in charge of loading freight into her truck, repeatedly referred to her as porn star, a damn broad and in January 2000 told her " if you were my daughter, I'd have had you aborted". This was immediately reported to management.

17. Other tractor-trailer drivers began acting distant from the plaintiff after this report. The male drivers were obviously upset when the plaintiff was assigned a newer tractor that they had. In January 2000, shortly after she complained about the sexual comments from Crumbling, she discovered a hole in the brake hose under the hood of her assigned tractor.

18. In February 2000, The deck captain purposefully ignored the need to load her truck. The plaintiff was severely physically injured while attempting to load freight without the help of the deck captain. The incident was immediately reported to Senior Manager Bob Flynn on February 3, 2000.

19. Ms. Shaub told Flynn that she was the focus of anger because of her sex and that Crumbling refused to load her truck causing her injury. She was told to make sure that she didn't work too many hours, so that the men would not resent her so much.

20. By January 2000, unknown male employees of Federal Express purposefully sabotaged the brake lines on Ms. Shaub's truck. The actual sabotage to her truck occurred over and over again. The sabotage happened on January 25, 2000, February 18, 2000, March 24, 2000 April 13, 2000, and April 27, 2000 She was so shaken that she telephoned to the Managing Director in Baltimore for the help that she could not get from Senior Manager Flynn at the airport. She received no answer. The male drivers met together and decided that Ms Shaub should not have a new tractor. Then Terry Igenfritz asked to switch tractors with her, but when she warned him that someone was tampering with the brakes, he decided not take that truck.

21. By the 19th of February, she was scared to be alone at the ramp, a driver turning a corridor filled her with fear. Ms. Shaub received anonymous note in her mail slot warning her about hiding the keys at other times her mail was purposefully destroyed. On several occasions, she went outside of Fed Ex to report the brake sabotage to the state police. The male drivers told plaintiff that they thought she was planning on taking their routes

22. Throughout her employment in Allentown, certain tractor-trailer drivers, employees of defendant, have made constant sexually offensive and threatening statements to Plaintiff. These employees referred to Plaintiff as a porn star.

23. Plaintiff complained to her supervisors at the Middletown ramp about the sexual language and abuse and the physically threatening behavior, which she was experiencing. Plaintiff's supervisors knew of her prior reports of discrimination and refused to help her although she was so fearful of her intimidators that she had asked the local police for help.

24. Defendant did nothing to stop the sexual harassment, which Plaintiff was experiencing, but instead, allowed the perpetrators to know of Plaintiff's complaints which increased the threats to her person.

25. Plaintiff was warned of potential sabotage her truck, which could cause her serious injury. In February 2000 and again in March 1, 2000 the plaintiff was threatened by her fellow workers pushing heavy freight in her direction in an attempt to physically harm her. Her supervisors refused to believe that the intimidation was intentional.

26. Although the threats and physical acts of intimidation were reported to Defendant, Defendant took no action and allowed retaliation against Plaintiff in the form of harassment and threats against Plaintiff by employees and supervisors of Defendant.

27. The working environment became one of such hostility that no reasonable woman would have been expected to continue to remain employed.

28. By August 2000, the plaintiff's last route had been deliberately taken away from her and assigned to a man (whom she was forced to train.) The plaintiff only wanted to be able to driver a tractor-trailer. In September 2000 she gave notice, unable to work under the severe stress she was experiencing on the job.

29. On four different occasions, the Plaintiff discovered that whether her brake lines had been deliberately cut or dirt had been inserted into them to cause brake failure. Each act of vandalism and intimidation was reported to management and on two occasions to the police.

30. Plaintiff knew that the damage was deliberate because it was exactly the sort of sabotage, which her fellow employees had warned her of and had been previously reported to management. In addition, male employees bragged about the harassment which they subjected her to.

31. Plaintiff's mental health suffered greatly because of the Defendant's actions. She was too terrified to continue her employment at Defendant's ramp. She then tried to work for a second trucking concern and found that she was too terrified to continue as a truck driver

32. The actions of FedEx and its employees by threatening Plaintiff's life and person were specifically and intentionally designed to cause Plaintiff intense emotional distress.

33. Fed Ex knew of the actions of its employees acting during the course of their employment, which were designed to cause Ms. Shaub extreme emotional distress and make her quit her job. FedEx refused to protect the plaintiff from the abuse of her co-employees.

34. On information and belief, Defendant practiced a continuing course of conduct of discrimination against Ms. Shaub as the only female employee at the Middletown ramp.

35. The plaintiff reluctantly was forced to resign from her position because Federal Express refused to afford her atmosphere free of degrading and insulting language and physical threats to her safety.

36. By the actions of its employees and supervisors, Defendant berated Plaintiff, treated her differently than the male employees, pressured her to quit her job, failed to protect her from physical danger and threats and otherwise carried out and condoned a systematic attack on her self-esteem, all of which caused Plaintiff extreme emotional distress, great disruption to her family life and monetary loss.

37. The defendant knew that the plaintiff's life was in danger from the sabotage to her truck and the incidents involving the loading of heavy freight. Management at Federal Express had had prior reports of this sort of sabotage to female truck drivers and maliciously, intentionally and purposefully refused to help Ms. Shaub.

U.S.: 1940s STD Experiments "Clearly Unethical"

Posted by David S Morgan

(Credit: CBS/AP)

The U.S. government has formally apologized for a secret study conducted in the 1940s in which Guatemalan prisoners, service members and mental hospital patients were secretly infected with gonorrhea and syphilis without their knowledge or consent, calling the program "clearly unethical."

In a joint statement issued Friday by Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius, released in English and Spanish, the government apologized to Guatemala and to those involved in the study, conducted by the U.S. Public Health Service (PHS) between 1946 and 1948.

The results of the Sexually Transmitted Disease Inoculation Study were uncovered by a Wellesley College researcher, Susan Reverby.

The story is uncomfortably similar to the "Tuskegee" Syphilis Study in the 1960s, in which the PHS monitored, but did not treat, hundreds of African American men suffering from syphilis.

EXHIBIT 152

Unlike that case, however, subjects in the Guatemala study were intentionally infected with sexually transmitted diseases, and then given penicillin, to help determine the efficacy of the drug to cure or even vaccinate against STDs.

Reverby wrote that the Guatemala syphilis inoculation project was run by a PHS physician, Dr. John C. Cutler (who would later oversee the Tuskegee, Ala., study two decades later).

The study's doctors chose as subjects men incarcerated at the Guatemala National Penitentiary, as well as army service members, and men and women confined in the National Mental Health Hospital. There was a total of 696 people in the study. Guatemalan authorities (and not the individuals themselves) granted permission, in exchange for supplies.

According to Reverby, who studied Cutler's records in the University of Pittsburgh archives, doctors used infected prostitutes to pass the disease on to prisoners (conjugal visits were allowed in Guatemalan jails). Direct inoculations of syphilis bacteria were made to other subjects. Treatment by penicillin was also administered, though not always successfully.

Cutler seemed to recognize the delicate ethical quandaries their experiments posed, particularly in the wake of the Nuremberg "Doctors' Trials," and was concerned about secrecy. "As you can imagine," Cutler reported to his PHS overseer, "we are holding our breaths, and we are explaining to the patients and others concerned with but a few key exceptions, that the treatment is a new one utilizing serum followed by penicillin. This double talk keeps me hopping at time."

Cutler also wrote that he feared "a few words to the wrong person here, or even at home, might wreck it or parts of it ... "

PHS physician R.C. Arnold, who supervised Cutler, was more troubled, confiding to Cutler, "I am a bit, in fact more than a bit, leery of the experiment with the insane people. They can not give consent, do not know what is going on, and if some goody organization got wind of the work, they would raise a lot of smoke. I think the soldiers would be best or the prisoners for they can give consent."

Apparently difficulties in transmission, as well as in replicating results, added to concerns over the study, and it was dropped after two years.

Cutler went on to participate in another Syphilis Study at Sing Sing Prison in Ossining, N.Y. (although in that case the subjects were informed about the nature of the inoculations administered to them).

"Although these events occurred more than 64 years ago, we are outraged that such reprehensible research could have occurred under the guise of public health," today's State Dept./DHS statement said. "We deeply regret that it happened, and we apologize to all the individuals who were affected by such abhorrent research practices.

"The conduct exhibited during the study does not represent the values of the United States, or our commitment to human dignity and great respect for the people of Guatemala. The study is a sad reminder that adequate human subject safeguards did not exist a half-century ago."

The officials also announced an investigation into the specifics of the case from 1946, and will also convene a meeting of international experts to devise methods that effectively ensure all human medical research meets rigorous ethical standards.

The AIDS Conspiracy Handbook

Jeremiah Wright's paranoia, in context.

By Juliet Lapidos

Posted Wednesday, March 19, 2008, at 5:51 PM ET

Barack Obama rebuked his former pastor the Rev. Jeremiah Wright on Tuesday for giving sermons in which he blamed the government for creating a racist state and "inventing the HIV virus as a means of genocide against people of color." Wright isn't the first to say that AIDS originated in the White House. Others have attributed the epidemic to a laboratory accident, malnutrition, or even God's divine will. Here's a field guide to the most prevalent conspiracy theories:

Government Involvement

The belief cited by Wright—that the government invented HIV—seems to have originated during the early years of the epidemic. In 1986, crackpot East German biologist Jakob Segal published "AIDS: USA Home-Made Evil." According to the pamphlet, scientists at a Fort Detrick, Md., military lab manufactured the disease by synthesizing HTLV-1 (a retrovirus that causes T-cell leukemia) with Visna (a sheep virus). The scientists administered their lethal concoction to prison inmates, who then introduced the disease into the general population. In case you're wondering, Segal has since been accused of being a Soviet disinformation agent.

Similarly, the aptly named Boyd E. Graves (who calls himself a doctor although he has only a law degree) has postulated that scientists in the employ of the U.S. Special Virus Program modified Visna to create HIV during the 1970s. The government, with help from pharmaceutical company Merck, added the virus to an experimental hepatitis B vaccine, which was given to gay men and blacks in New York and San Francisco.

And then there's Gary Glum, author of Full Disclosure, who fronts the theory that scientists at the Cold Spring Harbor lab in New York engineered HIV, and that the World Health Organization spread the virus under cover of the smallpox eradication program. Glum believes the virus was created to wipe out, or at least control, the black population. (According to a study released in 2005 by the Rand Corp., more than one-quarter of African-Americans believe the disease was engineered in a government lab, and 16 percent think it was created to control the black population.)

Laboratory Accident
Edward Hooper, a British journalist, argued in his 1999 book, The River, that Dr. Hilary Koprowski of the Wistar Research Institute unintentionally caused the AIDS epidemic by using chimp kidneys to produce an oral polio vaccine. The chimps, says Hooper, were infected with SIV (the simian precursor to AIDS). Then, via an experimental mass-vaccination program in the Belgian Congo, SIV made the jump from monkey to man.

Hooper's contaminated polio vaccine thesis sounds less wacky than most conspiracy theories and has attracted support from a few notable academics—including late Oxford professor W.D. Hamilton. But it's definitely wrong. Hooper says Koprowski got his kidney samples from chimps in the Congo. The problem is that the SIV strain endemic to chimps from that region is phylogenetically distinct from HIV. The offending chimps probably came from Cameroon.

It's Not a Virus
Among the most popular, and pernicious, conspiracy theories is that AIDS isn't c aused by a virus at all. Peter Duesberg, a biology professor at University of California-Berkeley, has argued that drugs and promiscuity are the principal causes of the disease in the United States. He attributes AIDS in Africa to malnutrition.

South African President Thabo Mbeki has voiced support for the so-called Duesberg hypothesis, and his health minister, Mantombazana Tshabalala-Msimang, has recommended treating AIDS with foodstuffs, like garlic, rather than pharmaceuticals.

God's Punishment
The Rev. Jerry Falwell famously argued that AIDS is a plague sent by God to punish homosexuals and American society for tolerating homosexuality.

Slate

The AIDS Conspiracy Handbook

Jerry Thacker, the publisher of Today's Christian Teen and other Christian magazines, has also called AIDS a "gay plague" and referred to homosexuality as "the death style." In 2003, the Bush administration nominated Thacker to serve on the Presidential Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS. He withdrew his name under pressure from gay rights groups and Democrats.

U.S. Soldiers Accused in Afghan Civilian Murders

Squad of 10 Soldiers Under Investigation in Deaths of 3 Villagers Who Angered Troops; Charges Could be Filed Next Week

By David Martin

The U.S. military has gone to extraordinary lengths to reduce the accidental killing of Afghan civilians. Now, 10 American soldiers are accused of intentionally murdering civilians. Dave Martin reports.

(CBS)

(CBS) Gen. Stanley McChrystal, the top commander in Afghanistan, has gone to extraordinary lengths to reduce the accidental killing of Afghan civilians, but now there is a case in which American soldiers are accused of murder.

The alleged killings happened near Kandahar in southern Afghanistan, where U.S. troops are gearing up for the most important operation of the war, CBS News national security correspondent David Martin reports.

Special Section: Afghanistan

Members of a squad of about 10 American soldiers are under investigation for murdering at least three local villagers who had angered them. According to the allegations, this is not a case of civilians being mistaken for Taliban fighters and not a one-time moment of rage.

Instead, it happened on different occasions over the past several months. The squad leader, a sergeant, is said to have done the shooting.

In addition, some members of the squad are accused of smoking hash.

Charges could be brought against the soldiers as early as next week.

U.S. Soldiers Charged in Afghan Civilian Murders

Five Soldiers Accused of Murdering Afghan Civilians Just Because They Could; Seven More Involved in Cover-Up

Five American soldiers are accused of murdering Afghan civilians. (CBS)

(CBS) Gen. David Petraeus has said the United States can't succeed in Afghanistan without winning the hearts and minds of Afghan civilians.

Now, CBS News national security correspondent David Martin reports, there's a disturbing development in a story first reported in May involving U.S. soldiers accused of killing civilians in cold blood.

Twelve soldiers have been charged in the case. If the charges are proven, this was the platoon from hell.

CBSNews.com Special Report: Afghanistan

Five American soldiers accused of murdering Afghan civilians just because they could, seven more involved in the cover-up; plus mutilating corpses, taking pot shots at Afghan civilians, smoking hashish, and beating up a private who blew the whistle.

They may have done more harm to the American cause in Afghanistan than any equivalent number of Taliban could hope to cause.

"This is the kind of thing that hurts us enormously," says Michael O'Hanlon, a senior fellow on foreign policy at the Brookings Institution. "It will have a disproportionate effect, just like Abu Ghraib did. Just like any such incident. Just like the Quran burning would in Florida."

The soldiers were operating in the Taliban heartland near Kandahar where they were supposed to be winning hearts and minds. According to court documents, it began when Sgt. Calvin Gibbs joked about how easy it would be "toss a grenade at someone and kill them."

It turned into a conspiracy when five soldiers allegedly formed a "kill team" and on separate occasions murdered three Afghan civilians, apparently chosen at random.

Defense attorneys intend to fight the charges -- but whatever the outcome of the court case the damage in Afghanistan has already been done.

Confession Video: US Soldier Describes Thrill Kill of Innocent Afghans

Corporal, 22, Tells How His 'Crazy' Sergeant Allegedly Murdered For Kicks, Collected Body Parts

By MATTHEW COLE and BRIAN ROSS

Sept. 27, 2010—

Dressed in a t-shirt and Army shorts, a 22-year-old corporal from Wasilla, Alaska casually describes on a video tape made by military investigators how his unit's "crazy" sergeant randomly chose three unarmed, innocent victims to be murdered in Afghanistan.

Corporal Jeremy N. Morlock is one of five GI's charged with pre-meditated murder in a case that includes allegations of widespread drug use, the collection of body parts and photos of the U.S. soldiers holding the Afghan bodies like hunter's trophies.

All five soldiers were part of the 5th Stryker Combat Brigade, of the 2nd Infantry Division, based at Ft. Lewis-McChord, Washington. In charging documents released by the Army, the military alleges that the five, Staff Sgt. Calvin R. Gibbs, Spec Adam C. Winfield, Spec. Michael S. Wagnon II, Pfc. Andrew H. Holmes and Morlock were involved in one or more of three murders that took place between January and May of this year.

Lawyers and family members of the soldiers say they all intend to fight the charges.

An Article 32 hearing for Morlock, the military equivalent of a grand jury, is scheduled later today at Fort Lewis-McChord, Washington.

On the tape, obtained by ABC News, Morlock admits his role in the deaths of three Afghans but claims the plan was organized by his unit's sergeant, Calvin Gibbs, who is also charged with pre-meditated murder.

"He just really doesn't have any problems with f---ing killing these people," Morlock said on tape as he laid out the scenario he said the sergeant used to make it seem the civilians were killed in action.

"And so we identify a guy. Gibbs makes a comment, like, you know, you guys wanna wax this guy or what?" Morlock told military investigators during an interview videotaped in May at Kandahar Airfield, Afghanistan.

The corporal said Gibbs gave orders to open fire on the civilian at the same time Gibbs threw a hand grenade at the victim.

"He pulled out one of his grenades, an American grenade, you know, popped it, throws it, tells me where to go to whack this guy, kill this guy, kill this guy," Morlock told the investigators.

Allegations that US Soldiers Killed Innocent Civilians in Afghanistan

Morlock said Sergeant Gibbs carried a Russian grenade to throw next to the body of the dead Afghan, to make it seem he was about to attack the American soldiers.

The corporal said he opened fire as directed, fearful of not following Gibbs' orders.

"It's definitely not the right thing to do," Morlock told the investigators. "But I mean, when you got a squad leader bringing you into that, that type of real, that mindset, and he believes that you're on board with that, there's definitely no way you wanted him to think otherwise."

The investigator asked Morlock, "Because you felt maybe the next shot might be coming your way?"

"You never know. Exactly," answered Morlock. "I mean Gibbs talked about how easy it is, people disappear on the battlefield all the time."

A lawyer for Gibbs declined to comment. All five charged are in military custody.

Morlock's lawyer, Michael Waddington, said his client made his confession at a time when he was taking heavy medication.

"My client did not kill anyone," said Waddington. "He did not use any bullets or any grenades to kill any of these individuals."

In addition to murder, the Army's charging documents allege rampant drug use in Morlock's unit, as well as the dismemberment of dead Afghan civilians.

Cpl. Morlock describes how Sergeant Gibbs allegedly collected the fingers of some of his Afghan victims.

"It's his thing now," said Morlock. "I don't know, his crazy stuff. War trophies, whatever."

Morlock said Gibbs boasted of carrying out similar murders in Iraq but was never caught and threatened the men in his unit with harm if they refused to participate or revealed what was happening.

"If Gibbs knew that I was sitting in front of this camera right now, there's no doubt in my mind that he'd f---ing take me out if he had to," Morlock told the Army investigators.

As I continued to read the Bible and grow in spiritual strength, I began to ask questions about the scriptures that I did not understand. Children and adults attended the same Bible class in which my papa was the teacher. As expected, I received no answers from my papa. He demanded that I just listen and ask no questions. My uncle, who was the pastor of the church, felt the same way. My mama let me know that only adult men discussed the Bible in church. I then knew that no help was forthcoming. Therefore, I got out of bed very early in the morning and borrowed my mama's Bible and then left the house. When I found a quiet place for study and meditation, the answers that I needed burst forth with clarity.

One very hot Wednesday in August my grandma let me know that I was mature enough to be given answers to many of my questions. She reminded me that I would be eleven years of age in December. She also let me know that she was counting on me to be successful with my life. She asked me to come to her house on Saturday and stay for a long discussion.

When I arrived at her house, she seemed very sad. She, my aunt, and I went into the front bedroom where we sat in front of her big fireplace. She and my aunt sat in rocking chairs; I sat in a comfortable but smaller chair with a firm backrest. I began to feel that something serious was about to take place. I quietly bowed my head and asked God to give me the heart to understand all that I heard.

My grandma began by stating that she had heard about all of the questions that I had been asking. She let me know that Mrs. Killingsworth had asked her to explain to me why I would have to stop talking about becoming a teacher. This was because Mrs. Killingsworth wanted to keep her job so that she could help me quietly. She let me know that our conversation that day would always be a secret between the three of us. She stressed that for the welfare of all, I must never talk about what was about to be said. At that moment the feeling of being a child vanished and I began to feel the weight of responsibility.

I learned that Rev. Milligan Newsome, her husband and my grandfather, was a special kind of person who took God's work very seriously. He was a preacher, educator, teacher, and one who felt that it was his duty to look out for all those who lived in Spindle Bottom. Everyone loved and depended on him. All of this land around our houses, church, and school once belonged to him. He, along with one deacon, built Clark Creek Church and school. He was supported by two very powerful men of God, Rev. Charles Harrison Mason and Rev. Charles Price Jones.

"When the white community saw the progress that your grandpa was making, they tried to force him to sell all of his land. He refused to even discuss it with them. He then began to advise others not to sell their land."

My grandmother stood and walked over to where I was sitting. She placed her arm around my shoulder and said, "Naomi, your grandfather was a wonderful, stubborn, black Indian, God fearing preacher who did not fear what man could do to him.

"Within a year the head of a prominent white family came to him and let him know that if he did not sell his land, he would be killed. Your grandfather looked him straight in the eye and said, 'If I don't sell, you're going to kill me. If I sell, you're still going to kill me. Therefore, I'm going to die standing like a giant for my God.'

"Shortly after this encounter, your grandfather went down by the covered bridge to cut firewood. Your papa, who was only seventeen years of age and very devoted, went with him. The man who had voiced the threat came by the house and asked me where had that nigger gone. He was carrying a rifle and a baseball bat. He stated that he only wanted to talk to that stubborn boy. I made the mistake of letting him know where they had gone.

"As the white man walked away from me, I knew within my heart that your grandfather would be killed. When he found your grandfather and shot him, your papa stood and watched. Your papa helped his dad to climb into the wagon. Your grandpa always carried the Holy Bible with him. He took the Bible from the wagon and stumbled into the house to let me know that he had been shot. Your papa and I put him in the bed. He asked me to place the Bible under his pillow, but he could hardly speak as he said, 'My love, teach our five children not to hate anyone.' He then gasped for breath and fell asleep."

My grandmother went on to say that there was a very strange look on my papa's face. She said that she had never heard anyone cry so loud and strange. "His screams seemed to shake his whole body. He was totally out of control. I did not know what to do. He said over and over that no one should have told the man where they were.

"To this day, I feel so guilty. I knew that your papa would never be the same. He seemed to be falling apart. He was truly a broken young man."

At this point my grandma became very emotional and as she was leaving the room, she demanded that my aunt finish the story. The following is the rest of the story.

"Within a year after this, the man who murdered your grandpa took all of the land. He went around bragging about how he had killed that nigger Indian and then took his land. There was no law in Mississippi that would help the family. They were left at the mercy of the murderer.

"About two years later, the murderer offered to give back part of the land. Your grandma refused to accept the offer. She said that she wanted all of her land or none. None is what she received. Within this same year, the murderer entered the hospital in Vicksburg, Mississippi. He was suffering and dying from cancer that had consumed his whole body, including his brain. The word got around that as he was dying, he continued to scream these words, 'I'm sorry that I killed that nigger Indian preacher for nothing.' Still the law did nothing about it."

After my aunt had finished talking, there was complete silence in the room. I asked for permission to go outside for a little while. She said, "Yes Naomi, take a few minutes away from all of this. You're still so very young and yet you wanted to know." As I left the room, I felt so very, very tired.

When I returned, I thanked my aunt and grandma for letting me know just what happened to my grandpa. My grandma then said that she was sorry that she did not take the part of the land that was offered to her. I answered her by saying that I understood. She then said, "I want you to let us know how you feel about what is taking place in your life and with your family."

This was the moment that I had been waiting for. I began by saying that my papa was not seventeen years of age anymore. "He is a grown man with a family. He needs to let us know that he loves us. Everyone in the house is afraid of him. I want to become educated so that I can help all of us. I would like to buy back some of the land that belonged to grandpa. I know that we're sharecroppers who grow a lot of corn, cotton, sugarcane, potatoes, peanuts and much more. I don't understand why my papa gives our share of the crop to other people. Most of the time we have nothing to eat. All of our neighbors have their own homes, wagons, mules, trucks, etc. We have nothing. My papa even sold the cows, horses and hogs that my mama's papa gave her. He even gets angry when we go by a friend's house and get a glass of milk. He even sells our food and uses the money to send the church's secretary away to high school. Why doesn't he want any of us to go to high school? He doesn't even want my two older brothers to finish eighth grade."

There was so very much more that I wanted to say. However, I was too exhausted.

At that moment everyone began to cry. My aunt and grandma said that they did not have the answers to all of my questions. They said that they believed that I had the kind of faith that my grandpa had. With this kind of headstart, I would someday be able to answer all of our questions. I promised them that I would not let them down.

Now that I understood, to some degree, why my papa was so full of hate and anger, I asked, "Why am I the only one in my family who is always in so much pain?"

My grandma asked my aunt to explain this to me.

My aunt began by saying that when my mama gave birth to each baby, my papa demanded that my mama herself cut the umbilical cord. "Even though we knew of a midwife who would have done the job, your papa would not listen to anyone. With

I (or the entity on whose behalf I am acting) will retain all defenses or objections to the lawsuit or to the jurisdiction or venue of the court except for objections based on a defect in the summons or in the service of the summons.

I understand that a judgment may be entered against me (or the party on whose behalf I am acting) if an answer or motion under Rule 12 is not served upon you within 60 days after 4/18/2010,

As agent/counsel of MCEA
(TITLE) (CORPORATE DEFENDANT)

Duty to Avoid Unnecessary Costs of Service of Summons

Rule 4 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure requires certain parties to cooperate in saving unnecessary costs of service of the summons and complaint. A defendant located in the United States who, after being notified of an action and asked by a plaintiff located in the United States to waive service of summons, fails to do so will be required to bear the cost of such service unless good cause be shown for its failure to sign and return the waiver.

It is not good cause for a failure to waive service that a party believes that the complaint is unfounded, or that the action has been brought in an improper place or in a court that lacks jurisdiction over the subject matter of the action or over its person or property. A party who waives service of the summons retains all defenses and objections (except any relating to the summons or to the service of the summons), and may later object to the jurisdiction of the court or to the place where the action has been brought.

A defendant who waives service must within the time specified on the waiver form serve on the plaintiff's attorney (or unrepresented plaintiff) a response to the complaint and must also file a signed copy of the response with the court. If the answer or motion is not served within this time, a default judgment may be taken against that defendant. By waiving service, a defendant is allowed more time to answer than if the summons had been actually served when the request for waiver of service was received.

Defendant.	:

I, Lori Whiteside, being first duly cautioned, state the following is true and accurate to the best of my personal knowledge:

1. I have been employed by Stor-All for the last 8 years as an administrative assistant. My primary job responsibilities are accounts payable, accounts receivable, payroll, scheduling, notice and advertisement of sales, as well as assistance with collections of past due tenants.

2. On July 27, 2007, Denise Newsome rented storage unit #173 with Crown Self Storage, 1109 Alfred Street, Cincinnati, Ohio 45214 location.

3. Prior to Stor-All Alfred's purchase of the property on January 18, 2008, I had never had any communication with Denise Newsome or knowledge concerning her.

EXHIBIT 156

4. To my knowledge, none of the employees at Stor-All had any prior communication with or knowledge of Denise Newsome prior to Stor All Alfred's purchase of the property on January 18, 2008.

5. Denise Newsome has not paid rent to Stor-All for the use of its property since April 1, 2008.

6. Between approximately December 8, 2008 and January 9, 2009, I personally communicated multiple times with Denise Newsome in an attempt to either have her vacate the premises and/or become current on her past-due payments.

7. On December 8, 2008 I had a telephone conversation with Newsome while I was working from my home, attempting to resolve this matter. At that time I told Ms. Newsome I would fax a letter confirming our conversation when I arrived at the office on December 9, 2008.

8. On December 9, 2008, after I had prepared the letter to fax to Newsome, I realized I did not have her fax number with me. I called Ms. Newsome's work number which was listed as a contact when we bought out Crown Self-Storage, and called that number. When the receptionist answered, I requested a fax number for Denise Newsome. The receptionist provided me with a fax number and I then faxed my correspondence to Ms. Newsome. My only intention in sending this fax was to follow through on my promise to Newsome by faxing a letter confirming our telephone conversation the previous evening.

9. On December 19, 2008, Stor-All offered to provide transportation to Denise Newsome so that she may remove her property from Stor-All's premises. Stor-All also offered to waive late fees and reduce the amount of past due rent. Newsome rejected these offers.

10. With Newsome refusing to negotiate her past-due rent and/or vacate the storage unit, Stor-All initiated a forcible entry and detainer action, pursuant to R.C. § 1923.

11. In order to comply with R.C. § 1923, I served Denise Newsome with written notice to leave the premises via first class mail, certified mail, and posting of the notice on Unit #173 at Stor All Alfred.

12. The only motivation for initiating the forcible entry and detainer action against Denise Newsome was so that Stor-All may re-acquire its property. After several attempts to negotiate with Ms. Newsome, including offering the free use of Stor All Afred's moving truck, driver, and gas, and reducing her balance due to $0.00, there was no other way for us to re-acquire Unit #173 from Ms. Newsome but court intervention. There was no ulterior motive or purpose for the forcible entry and detainer action.

FURTHER AFFIANT SAYETH NOT.

Dear Denise:

Thanks for your fax of December 19, 2008. I appreciate your providing the applicable Landlord Tenant portions of the law. I have actually contacted Dave Meranus in Cincinnati, Ohio and forwarded our file on your unit for his review and instruction to see if we would be better off to move forward with a Forcible Entry and Detainer action. Dave is to get back with me by next week.

However, in lieu of taking these steps and trying to bring this matter to a close, Stor All Alfred is in the process of scheduling an amnesty weekend for January 9, 10, and 11, 2009, at which time we are going to have a moving truck and driver available for any of the tenants that wish to vacate the premises at absolutely no cost to the tenant. Note that there is going to be a restriction in how many miles from our facility we will be able to deliver belongings, and as soon as I find that out, I will let you know right away.

While I await your response, if you can take a look at your schedule, maybe this whole matter can be resolved during our amnesty weekend – the only thing you would need to do is to load your unit (hopefully you'll have some help) and we will provide the vehicle and driver to deliver your belongings to another location as long, again taking into consideration that mileage restriction that is going to be set. This means you have to pay absolutely nothing, and you will be in control of your property, plus you have a free truck and driver to get it delivered.

If you are interested in looking at this approach, please let me know. I will be at Stor All Alfred January 9, 10, and 11th and I would be glad to get you scheduled to vacate. I am sure you would love to bring this matter to a conclusion as would I.

In any event, I certainly look forward to hearing from you by December 23, 2008. Have a great weekend.

Sincerely,

Lori

RULE 1.7: CONFLICT OF INTEREST: CURRENT CLIENTS

(a) A lawyer's acceptance or continuation of representation of a client creates a conflict of interest if either of the following applies:

(1) the representation of that client will be directly adverse to another current client;

(2) there is a substantial risk that the lawyer's ability to consider, recommend, or carry out an appropriate course of action for that client will be materially limited by the lawyer's responsibilities to another client, a former client, or a third person or by the lawyer's own personal interests.

(b) A lawyer shall not accept or continue the representation of a client if a conflict of interest would be created pursuant to division (a) of this rule, unless all of the following apply:

(1) the lawyer will be able to provide competent and diligent representation to each affected client;

(2) each affected client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing;

(3) the representation is not precluded by division (c) of this rule.

(c) Even if each affected client consents, the lawyer shall not accept or continue the representation if either of the following applies:

(1) the representation is prohibited by law;

(2) the representation would involve the assertion of a claim by one client against another client represented by the lawyer in the same proceeding.

Comment

General Principles

[1] The principles of loyalty and independent judgment are fundamental to the attorney-client relationship and underlie the conflict of interest provisions of these rules. Neither the lawyer's personal interest, the interests of other clients, nor the desires of third persons should be permitted to dilute the lawyer's loyalty to the client. All potential conflicts of interest involving a new or current client must be analyzed under this rule. In addition, a lawyer must consider whether any of the specific rules in Rule 1.8, regarding certain conflicts of interest involving current clients, applies. For former clients, see Rule 1.9; for conflicts involving those who have consulted a lawyer about representation but did not retain that lawyer, see Rule 1.18. [analogous to Model Rule Comment 1]

EXHIBIT 164

RULE 1.9: DUTIES TO FORMER CLIENTS

(a) Unless the former client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing, a lawyer who has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter represent another person in the same or a substantially related matter in which that person's interests are materially adverse to the interests of the former client.

(b) Unless the former client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing, a lawyer shall not knowingly represent a person in the same or a substantially related matter in which a firm with which the lawyer formerly was associated had previously represented a client where both of the following apply:

(1) the interests of the client are materially adverse to that person;

(2) the lawyer had acquired information about the client that is protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) and material to the matter.

(c) A lawyer who has formerly represented a client in a matter or whose present or former firm has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter do either of the following:

(1) use information relating to the representation to the disadvantage of the former client except as these rules would permit or require with respect to a client or when the information has become generally known;

(2) reveal information relating to the representation except as these rules would permit or require with respect to a client.

Comment

[1] After termination of a client-lawyer relationship, a lawyer has certain continuing duties with respect to confidentiality and conflicts of interest and thus may not represent another client except in conformity with this rule. Under this rule, for example, a lawyer could not properly seek to rescind on behalf of a new client a contract drafted on behalf of the former client. So also a lawyer who has prosecuted an accused person could not properly represent the accused in a subsequent civil action against the government concerning the same transaction. Nor could a lawyer who has represented multiple clients in a matter represent one of the clients against the others in the same or a substantially related matter after a dispute arose among the clients in that matter, unless all affected clients give informed consent, confirmed in writing. See Comment [9]. Current and former government lawyers must comply with this rule to the extent required by Rule 1.11.

[2] The scope of a "matter" for purposes of this rule depends on the facts of a particular situation or transaction. The lawyer's involvement in a matter can also be a question of degree. When a lawyer has been directly involved in a specific transaction, subsequent representation of other clients with materially adverse interests in that transaction clearly is

RULE 1.10: IMPUTATION OF CONFLICTS OF INTEREST: GENERAL RULE

(a) While lawyers are associated in a firm, none of them shall represent a client when the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that any one of them practicing alone would be prohibited from doing so by Rule 1.7 or 1.9, unless the prohibition is based on a personal interest of the prohibited lawyer and does not present a significant risk of materially limiting the representation of the client by the remaining lawyers in the firm.

(b) When a lawyer is no longer associated with a firm, no lawyer in that firm shall thereafter represent a person with interests materially adverse to those of a client represented by the formerly associated lawyer and not currently represented by the firm, if the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that either of the following applies:

(1) the formerly associated lawyer represented the client in the same or a substantially related matter;

(2) any lawyer remaining in the firm has information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) that is material to the matter.

(c) When a lawyer has had substantial responsibility in a matter for a former client and becomes associated with a new firm, no lawyer in the new firm shall knowingly represent, in the same matter, a person whose interests are materially adverse to the interests of the former client.

(d) In circumstances other than those covered by Rule 1.10(c), when a lawyer becomes associated with a new firm, no lawyer in the new firm shall knowingly represent a person in a matter in which the lawyer is personally disqualified under Rule 1.9 unless both of the following apply:

(1) the new firm timely screens the personally disqualified lawyer from any participation in the matter and that lawyer is apportioned no part of the fee from that matter;

(2) written notice is given as soon as practicable to any affected former client.

(e) A disqualification required by this rule may be waived by the affected client under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7.

(f) The disqualification of lawyers associated in a firm with former or current government lawyers is governed by Rule 1.11.

RULE 1.2: SCOPE OF REPRESENTATION AND ALLOCATION OF AUTHORITY BETWEEN CLIENT AND LAWYER

(a) Subject to divisions (c), (d), and (e) of this rule, a lawyer shall abide by a client's decisions concerning the objectives of representation and, as required by Rule 1.4, shall consult with the client as to the means by which they are to be pursued. A lawyer may take action on behalf of the client as is impliedly authorized to carry out the representation. A lawyer does not violate this rule by acceding to requests of opposing counsel that do not prejudice the rights of the client, being punctual in fulfilling all professional commitments, avoiding offensive tactics, and treating with courtesy and consideration all persons involved in the legal process. A lawyer shall abide by a client's decision whether to settle a matter. In a criminal case, the lawyer shall abide by the client's decision as to a plea to be entered, whether to waive a jury trial, and whether the client will testify.

(b) [RESERVED]

(c) A lawyer may limit the scope of a new or existing representation if the limitation is reasonable under the circumstances and communicated to the client, preferably in writing.

(d) A lawyer shall not counsel a client to engage, or assist a client, in conduct that the lawyer knows is illegal or fraudulent. A lawyer may discuss the legal consequences of any proposed course of conduct with a client and may counsel or assist a client in making a good faith effort to determine the validity, scope, meaning, or application of the law.

(e) Unless otherwise required by law, a lawyer shall not present, participate in presenting, or threaten to present criminal charges or professional misconduct allegations solely to obtain an advantage in a civil matter.

Comment

Allocation of Authority between Client and Lawyer

[1] Division (a) confers upon the client the ultimate authority to determine the purposes to be served by legal representation, within the limits imposed by law and the lawyer's professional obligations. The decisions specified in division (a), such as whether to settle a civil matter, must also be made by the client. See Rule 1.4(a)(1) for the lawyer's duty to communicate with the client about such decisions. With respect to the means by which the client's objectives are to be pursued, the lawyer shall consult with the client as required by Rule 1.4(a)(2) and may take such action as is impliedly authorized to carry out the representation.

[2] On occasion, however, a lawyer and a client may disagree about the means to be used to accomplish the client's objectives. Clients normally defer to the special knowledge and skill of their lawyer with respect to the means to be used to accomplish their objectives, particularly with respect to technical, legal, and tactical matters. Conversely, lawyers usually defer to the client regarding such questions as the expense to be incurred and concern for third persons who might be adversely affected. Because of the varied nature of the matters about which a lawyer and client might disagree and because the actions in question may implicate the interests of a tribunal or other persons, this rule does not prescribe how such disagreements are to be resolved. Other law, however, may be applicable and should be consulted by the lawyer. The lawyer should also consult with the client and seek a mutually acceptable resolution of the disagreement. If such efforts are unavailing and the lawyer has a fundamental disagreement with the client, the lawyer may withdraw from the representation. See Rule 1.16(b)(4). Conversely, the client may resolve the disagreement by discharging the lawyer. See Rule 1.16(a)(3).

[3] At the outset of a representation, the client may authorize the lawyer to take specific action on the client's behalf without further consultation. Absent a material change in circumstances and subject to Rule 1.4, a lawyer may rely on such an advance authorization. The client may, however, revoke such authority at any time.

[4] In a case in which the client appears to be suffering diminished capacity, the lawyer's duty to abide by the client's decisions is guided by reference to Rule 1.14.

[4A] Division (a) makes it clear that regardless of the nature of the representation the lawyer does not breach a duty owed to the client by maintaining a professional and civil attitude toward all persons involved in the legal process. Specifically, punctuality, the avoidance of offensive tactics, and the treating of all persons with courtesy are viewed as essential components of professionalism and civility, and their breach may not be required by the client as part of the representation.

Independence from Client's Views or Activities

[5] A lawyer's representation of a client, including representation by appointment, does not constitute an endorsement of the client's political, economic, social, or moral views or activities. Legal representation should not be denied to people who are unable to afford legal services or whose cause is controversial or the subject of popular disapproval. By the same token, representing a client does not constitute approval of the client's views or activities.

Agreements Limiting Scope of Representation

[6] [RESERVED]

[7] Although division (c) affords the lawyer and client substantial latitude in defining the scope of the representation, any limitation must be reasonable under the circumstances. If, for example, a client's objective is limited to securing general information about the law that the client needs in order to handle a common and typically uncomplicated legal problem, the lawyer and client may agree that the lawyer's services will be limited to a brief telephone consultation. Such a limitation would not be reasonable if the time allotted was not sufficient to yield advice upon which the client could rely. In addition, the terms upon which representation is undertaken may exclude specific means that might otherwise be used to accomplish the client's objectives.

Such limitations may exclude actions that the client thinks are too costly or that the lawyer regards as repugnant or imprudent. Although an agreement for a limited representation does not exempt a lawyer from the duty to provide competent representation, the limitation is a factor to be considered when determining the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness, and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation. See Rule 1.1.

[7A] Written confirmation of a limitation of a new or existing representation is preferred and may be any writing that is presented to the client that reflects the limitation, such as a letter or electronic transmission addressed to the client or a court order. A lawyer may create a form or checklist that specifies the scope of the client-lawyer relationship and the fees to be charged. An order of a court appointing a lawyer to represent a client is sufficient to confirm the scope of that representation.

[8] All agreements concerning a lawyer's representation of a client must accord with the Ohio Rules of Professional Conduct and other law. See, e.g., Rules 1.1, 1.8 and 5.6.

Illegal, Fraudulent and Prohibited Transactions

[9] Division (d) prohibits a lawyer from knowingly counseling or assisting a client to commit an illegal act or fraud. This prohibition, however, does not preclude the lawyer from giving an honest opinion about the actual consequences that appear likely to result from a client's conduct. Nor does the fact that a client uses advice in a course of action that is illegal or fraudulent of itself make a lawyer a party to the course of action. There is a critical distinction between presenting an analysis of legal aspects of questionable conduct and recommending the means by which an illegal act or fraud might be committed with impunity.

[10] When the client's course of action has already begun and is continuing, the lawyer's responsibility is especially delicate. The lawyer is required to avoid assisting the client, for example, by drafting or delivering documents that the lawyer knows are fraudulent or by suggesting how the wrongdoing might be concealed. A lawyer may not continue assisting a client in conduct that the lawyer originally supposed was legally permissible but then discovers is improper. See Rules 3.3(b) and 4.1(b).

[11] Where the client is a fiduciary, the lawyer may be charged with special obligations in dealings with a beneficiary.

[12] Division (d) applies whether or not the defrauded party is a party to the transaction. Hence, a lawyer must not participate in a transaction to effectuate illegal or fraudulent avoidance of tax liability. Division (d) does not preclude undertaking a criminal defense incident to a general retainer for legal services to a lawful enterprise. The last clause of division (d) recognizes that determining the validity or interpretation of a statute or regulation may require a course of action involving disobedience of the statute or regulation or of the interpretation placed upon it by governmental authorities.

[13] If a lawyer comes to know or reasonably should know that a client expects assistance not permitted by the Ohio Rules of Professional Conduct or other law or if the lawyer intends to act contrary to the client's instructions, the lawyer must consult with the client regarding the limitations on the lawyer's conduct. See Rule 1.4(a)(5).

Comparison to former Ohio Code of Professional Responsibility

Rule 1.2 replaces several provisions within Canon 7 of the Code of Professional Responsibility.

The first sentence of Rule 1.2(a) generally corresponds to EC 7-7 and makes what previously was advisory into a rule. The second sentence of Rule 1.2(a) states explicitly what is implied by EC 7-7. The third sentence of Rule 1.2(a) corresponds generally to DR 7-101(A)(1) and EC 7-10. Rule 1.2(a)(1) and (2) correspond to several sentences in EC 7-7.

Rule 1.2(c) does not correspond to any Disciplinary Rule or Ethical Consideration.

The first sentence of Rule 1.2(d) corresponds to DR 7-102(A)(7). The second sentence of Rule 1.2(d) is similar to EC 7-4.

Rule 1.2(e) is the same as DR 7-105 except for the addition of the prohibition against threatening "professional misconduct allegations."

Comparison to ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct

Rule 1.2(a) is modified slightly from the Model Rule 1.2(a) by the inclusion of the third sentence, which does not exist in the Model Rules.

Model Rule 1.2(b) has been moved to Comment [5] of Rule 1.2 because the provision is more appropriately addressed in a comment rather than a black-letter rule.

Rule 1.2(c) differs from Model Rule 1.2(c) in that it requires only that the limitation be communicated to the client, preferably in writing. The Model Rule requires that the client give informed consent to the limitation.

Rule 1.2(d) is similar to Model Rule 1.2(d) but differs in two aspects. The Model Rule language "criminal" was changed to "illegal" in Rule 1.2(d), and Model Rule 1.2(d) was split into two sentences in Rule 1.2(d).

Rule 1.2(e) does not exist in the Model Rules.

RULE 1.16: DECLINING OR TERMINATING REPRESENTATION

(a) Subject to divisions (c), (d), and (e) of this rule, a lawyer shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if any of the following applies:

(1) the representation will result in violation of the Ohio Rules of Professional Conduct or other law;

(2) the lawyer's physical or mental condition materially impairs the lawyer's ability to represent the client;

(3) the lawyer is discharged.

(b) Subject to divisions (c), (d), and (e) of this rule, a lawyer may withdraw from the representation of a client if any of the following applies:

(1) withdrawal can be accomplished without material adverse effect on the interests of the client;

(2) the client persists in a course of action involving the lawyer's services that the lawyer reasonably believes is illegal or fraudulent;

(3) the client has used the lawyer's services to perpetrate a crime or fraud;

(4) the client insists upon taking action that the lawyer considers repugnant or with which the lawyer has a fundamental disagreement;

(5) the client fails substantially to fulfill an obligation, financial or otherwise, to the lawyer regarding the lawyer's services and has been given reasonable warning that the lawyer will withdraw unless the obligation is fulfilled;

(6) the representation will result in an unreasonable financial burden on the lawyer or has been rendered unreasonably difficult by the client;

(7) the client gives informed consent to termination of the representation;

(8) the lawyer sells the law practice in accordance with Rule 1.17;

(9) other good cause for withdrawal exists.

(c) If permission for withdrawal from employment is required by the rules of a tribunal, a lawyer shall not withdraw from employment in a proceeding before that tribunal without its permission.

One of President Barack H. Obama's famous sayings during the Presidential Campaign was:

"You can put LIPSTICK on a Pig!
It is still a PIG!"

PSALM 2:2-3

[2]They speak vanity every one with his neighbour: with flattering lips and with a double heart do they speak.

[3]The LORD shall cut off all flattering lips, and the tongue that speaketh proud things

PSALM 5:9-10

[9]For there is no faithfulness in their mouth; their inward part is very wickedness; their throat is an open sepulchre; they flatter with their tongue.

[10]Destroy thou them, O God; let them fall by their own counsels; cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions; for they have rebelled against thee.

PROVERBS 6:16-17

[17]A proud look, a lying tongue,. . .

Did American citizens vote for a ROCKSTAR or for a United States President?

Is Barack Obama a President full of PRIDE, an INFLATED EGO, ARROGANGE. . . and upon obtaining "HIS" goal of becoming the President, ABANDONED promises because he feels he is INVINCIBLE?

What CHANGE (if any) did Americans see in 2009?

President Barack Obama is aware what VOTERS meant when they voted for CHANGE and the first alleged African-American President!

Now that Obama is President, he and his COUNSELORS/ADVISORS are steering clear and AVOIDING having to deal with the CHANGE that Americans voted for.

On November 4, 2008, did citizens vote for merely another "PUPPET-On-A-String?"

Did citizens know that in voting for Barack Obama they were voting for a President who would lack COURAGE, would be full of FEAR to do what is right, would be easily INTIMIDATED by those pulling his strings and not wanting the CHANGE citizens voted for?

Asian American Named Obama's Top Aide

Interim White House Chief of Staff Pete Rouse

By Bridget Hunter
Staff Writer

Washington — An Asian American is President Obama's choice to fill — at least temporarily — a post that has been described as the second most powerful job in U.S. government.

The president announced October 1 that longtime counselor Pete Rouse will serve as interim chief of staff following the departure of Rahm Emanuel, whom Obama laughingly described as "leaving his post today to explore other opportunities." Media outlets across the country have reported Emanuel will be a mayoral candidate in the city of Chicago in 2011.

"As difficult as it is to leave, I do so with the great comfort of knowing that Pete Rouse will be there to lead the operation forward," Emanuel said. "From the moment I arrived, and the moment he arrived, Pete has been a good friend with great judgment. He commands the respect of everyone in this building and brings decades of experience to this assignment.

The White House chief of staff, an office established in 1952, serves as the U.S. president's senior aide. The chief of staff typically is involved in the president's major decisions and frequently represents the president during negotiations with congressional leaders. Within the White House, the chief of staff manages the staff, sets the tone for the office operations and coordinates the work of the many offices within the Executive Office of the President.

The position, which is filled at the discretion of the president, was first established by President Dwight D. Eisenhower. Presidents John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson and, for a time, Jimmy Carter opted not to have a chief of staff, but every president since then has filled the post.

Rouse served as Obama's chief of staff in the U.S. Senate, an adviser on the Obama presidential campaign and a White House staff member throughout the Obama administration. He also had been chief of staff to South Dakota Senator Tom Daschle, who had been Senate majority leader until his defeat in the 2004 election. He is the grandson of Japanese immigrants.

Goro (George) and Mine Mikami came to the United States in 1911 and arrived in Seward, Alaska, in 1915, according to a September 30 article in the Anchorage Daily News. In 1918, they moved to Anchorage, where their daughter, Mary, entered school speaking only Japanese. She went on to become valedictorian at Anchorage High School and then to graduate in 1934 with honors from the Alaska Agricultural College and School of Mines in Fairbanks (later the University of Alaska). She earned a doctorate at Yale University, and while there met Irving Rouse, her future husband. They became parents of two sons, Peter and David.

The boys' maternal grandparents, who had retired and moved to Los Angeles just before World War II, were sent to a Japanese internment camp in Arizona during the war, two among nearly 120,000 Japanese Americans removed from their homes and held in internment camps in the aftermath of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. In 1983, the U.S. government acknowledged the injustice of internment with limited payments to Japanese Americans of that era who were still living.

Although Rouse will be the first Asian-American chief of staff, his predecessors include members of other minorities. John Sununu, chief of staff to President George H.W. Bush, was of Lebanese descent on his father's side, making him the first Arab American in the post. Kenneth Duberstein, who served as chief for President Ronald Reagan, was the first Jewish chief of staff. Joshua Bolten, who served under President George W. Bush, was the second and departing Obama chief Rahm Emanuel was the third.

Obama's remarks at the press conference announcing Emanuel's departure and Rouse's appointment are available on the White House website.

Obama selects Daschle to lead revamp of health care system

No formal offer yet for Hillary Clinton

THE WASHINGTON POST

November 20, 2008

WASHINGTON – Former Sen. Tom Daschle is in line to become President-elect Barack Obama's health and human services secretary while Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton appears to be a step closer to becoming his secretary of state.

Daschle, a former Senate majority leader from South Dakota and a confidant of Obama's, will be nominated for the Cabinet post and take on a broader role as the administration's health policy chief, according to several sources close to the transition process.

Meanwhile, former President Clinton has agreed to a series of concessions requested by officials representing the transition team to eliminate potential conflicts of interest if his wife is offered the top foreign policy spot, said people close to the Clintons.

Aides to Obama and Hillary Clinton said that a formal job offer had not been made, but the former president's decision to disclose the identities of donors to his charitable foundation and to vet speeches and overseas activities with members of the Obama administration appears to have removed some of the biggest hurdles to her nomination.

“I'll do whatever they want,” Bill Clinton said yesterday at a public appearance.

Obama's staff has thoroughly vetted both Clintons with the understanding that, if he should make an official job offer, she would accept.

As uncertainty continued to surround that Cabinet post, Daschle's selection to head the Department of Health and Human Services was confirmed yesterday by people close to the transition team.

The selection is a recognition of the central role Daschle played in Obama's political ascendancy and a signal that the new president wants a Washington insider to shepherd comprehensive health legislation.

“Having Senator Daschle at HHS and as the point person for the Obama administration on health care would only improve the chances of” enacting an overhaul of the system, said Senate Finance Committee Chairman Max Baucus, D-Mont., who is already pushing for a bill.

If confirmed by the Senate, Daschle would take over a $707.7 billion department with nearly 65,000 employees spread across 11 operating divisions. As secretary, he will be under pressure to revitalize the Food and Drug Administration, bring financial stability to the Medicare and Medicaid programs, and move away from what many researchers have complained is the ideologically driven scientific agenda of the Bush administration.

CHRIS MADDALONI / New York Times News Service
Tom Daschle, a former senator from South Dakota, has worked at a Washington, D.C., law firm since losing his re-election bid four years ago.

Daschle, 60, recently wrote a book on his proposals to improve health care and has been working with former Senate leaders on recommendations to expand coverage.

In his book, "Critical: What We Can Do About The Health-Care Crisis," Daschle advocates creating an independent body, modeled after the Federal Reserve Board, to oversee health policy.

That idea received a hearty endorsement from Obama.

"The American health-care system is in crisis, and workable solutions have been blocked for years by deeply entrenched ideological divisions," Obama wrote. "Sen. Daschle brings fresh thinking to this problem, and his Federal Reserve for Health concept holds great promise for bridging this intellectual chasm and, at long last, giving this nation the health care it deserves."

An array of consumer groups quickly lined up in support of Daschle as secretary of a department that oversees nearly a quarter of federal spending.

"Someone with his stature and clout, combined with his passion and expertise in health care, is an exciting choice," said DeAnn Friedholm, Consumers Union's campaign director for health care reform.

Daschle, a native of South Dakota who served as an Air Force intelligence officer, spent four terms in the House and three in the Senate. A soft-spoken conciliator, he is nevertheless a fierce competitor who surprised many when he defeated Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., in the 1994 race for Senate Democratic leader, a job he held for a decade. From a policy perspective, he was best known for his work on veterans' affairs, ethanol subsidies and rural issues.

The nomination represents a political rebirth for Daschle, who four years ago was reeling from a bitter re-election defeat.

While he weighed his own future, Daschle handed over to Obama dozens of his most trusted aides and political supporters, a gift that continues to pay dividends. Obama already has placed Daschle allies Pete Rouse and Phil Schiliro in top White House positions, and named former Daschle adviser John Podesta as co-chairman of the transition team.

Daschle serves as a distinguished senior fellow at the Center for American Progress, the liberal research group formed by Podesta.

Republicans made clear yesterday that Daschle can expect questions at his confirmation hearing about lobbying by his law firm, as well as his wife's work as a Washington lobbyist.

"Barack Obama is filling his administration with longtime Washington insiders," said Alex Conant, spokesman for the Republican National Committee. "For voters hoping to see new faces and fewer lobbyist connections in government, Daschle's nomination will be another disappointment."

Daschle is not a lobbyist, although his firm – Alston & Bird – does have a lobbying arm. He serves on the advisory boards of Intermedia Partners and the BP America External Advisory Council.

Linda Hall Daschle is a registered federal lobbyist with Baker, Donelson, Bearman, Caldwell & Berkowitz, which has numerous health care clients. To avoid a potential conflict, Linda Hall Daschle announced yesterday she will resign and set up her own lobbying shop focused narrowly on transportation issues. She served as acting administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration in the Clinton administration.

Meanwhile, CNN is reporting that Democratic sources say Obama is close to making two more Cabinet nominations: Arizona Gov. Janet Napolitano for homeland security secretary and Chicago businesswoman Penny Pritzker for commerce secretary. Pritzker ran Obama's record-breaking fundraising effort, serving as the campaign's finance chair.

Yesterday, the transition team also formalized several hires, including David Axelrod, the chief strategist of Obama's presidential campaign, as a senior adviser, and Washington lawyer Greg Craig as White House counsel. Lisa Brown, a former counsel to Vice President Al Gore, was named staff secretary, and Obama's Senate legislative director, Christopher Lu, was tapped to be Cabinet secretary.

Why He Matters

A veteran aide to former Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle (D-S.D.), Rouse joined the Senate office of Barack Obama in 2004, shortly after Daschle lost his reelection bid. Rouse continued advising Obama through the first two years of his presidency, and in 2010, he was named temporary White House chief of staff as Rahm Emanuel departed to run for Chicago mayor.

Occasionally called the 101st senator during his time on Capitol Hill, Rouse began working in the House in 1973, and has a large network of friends in high places, including Daschle and Senate Majority Whip Dick Durbin (D-Ill.), for whom Rouse worked as chief of staff.

But most of Rouse's career was spent working for Daschle, who was leader of Senate Democrats for 10 of his 18 years in the Senate — all 18 of which he spent with Rouse at his side. When Daschle lost his seat in 2004, Rouse moved into the office of Obama, who had just been elected senator.

Rouse was Obama's Senate chief of staff throughout the 2008 presidential campaign, but he spent an increasing amount of time on the trail and in Chicago campaign headquarters.(1) After Obama was elected president, Rouse was named as one of three members of Obama's

"Everybody smiles when you talk about Pete, because he is tough on the outside and soft on the inside and everybody knows that," Daschle said. "I think his secret of success, his magic, is that he has an amazing capacity to bring disparate people together and create a unity in a level of cooperation and chemistry that is remarkable."(2)

Unlike his forceful predecessor Emanuel, Rouse is described as a compromiser who is "completely ego-free" in the words of President Obama.(3)

In His Own Words

“I was well aware that we could use an injection of fresh blood and talent in the Senate,” Rouse said of Obama in 2008. “So my view was, since he's not running for president in 2008, to get him started: to set up his operation; get a good team in place; get a good strategic plan in place; get a good structure. ... I'll lay that foundation, and we'll see what happens. I'll be in my rocking chair when he runs in 2016 or whatever.”(4)

Path to Power

Rouse was born in New Haven, Conn., and went to Colby College. He earned masters' degrees from Harvard University and the London Schools of Economics and arrived in Washington to work in the Senate mailroom. Rouse met Daschle in 1973, when they sat next to each other as aides to then-Sen. James Abourezk (D-S.D.). When Abourezk retired, Daschle went back to South Dakota to campaign for an open House seat, and Rouse stayed in Washington and worked in a variety of Hill Democratic offices.(2)

Rouse's mother grew up in Alaska, and he moved to Anchorage in 1979 to work as the chief of staff for Republican Lt. Gov. Terry Miller for three years.(5) That was the only time Rouse worked for a Republican, saying: "I am more interested in what people stand for and what my philosophical compatibility is. I have found only one Republican. All the rest of them have been Democrats."(2)

The stint with Miller was also the only time Rouse worked outside of Washington. He returned after just a few years to work in then-Rep. Dick Durbin's (D-Ill.) office. After coming to the House in the early 1980s, Durbin hired Rouse to be his chief of staff.

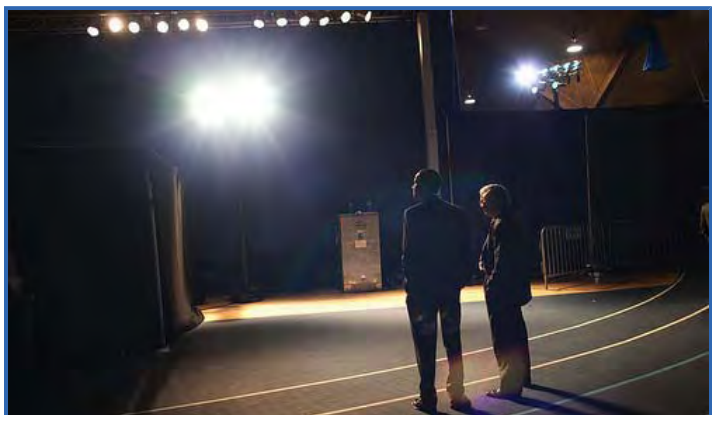
Rouse worked there until Daschle called him in 1986. Daschle said he was planning on a Senate run and wanted Rouse to run his House office during the campaign. After the victory, Rouse moved into Daschle's Senate office as his chief of staff.(2)

Longtime Daschle Aide

Rouse served as Daschle's top staffer for nearly 20 years, building an impressive Rolodex along the way.

As Daschle's chief of staff, Rouse described his job as "to make sure everything stays on track and every once in a while help out with a little perspective here and there and on the controversial issues that are not just political in South Dakota but matters of principle."(2)

He was considered one of the most important people on the Hill, earning him the moniker the "101st senator."(6) He helped get Daschle elected Senate minority leader in 1994 by one vote in an election against Sen. Christopher J. Dodd (D-Conn.). After Daschle was upset by Sen. John Thune (R-S.D.) in the 2004 election, Rouse contemplated getting out of government.



But then Obama asked him to be his chief of staff. Rouse didn't expect Obama to be running for president two years later — and he says he hadn't even seen the senator's electrifying 2004 Democratic National Convention speech — but after a little prodding from Obama and adviser Cassandra Butts, he agreed.(4)

"I was well aware that we could use an injection of fresh blood and talent in the Senate," Rouse said. "So my view was, since he's not running for president in 2008, to get him started: to set up his operation; get a good team in place; get a good strategic plan in place; get a good structure. ... I'll lay that foundation, and we'll see what happens. I'll be in my rocking chair when he runs in 2016 or whatever."(4)

Nonetheless, Rouse methodically prepared for a possible Obama presidential bid - which he said was more of a "vision for the future" - in case Obama chose to run from the time the freshman senator came to Washington in 2005. But he said there were no serious meetings about such a bid until after the 2006 midterm elections.(4)

The Issues

Rouse mastered a low-profile advisory role in his first two years at the Obama White House. Obama's faith in him won him the role of temporary replacement for Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel when Emanuel departed in fall 2010 to mount a campaign for Chicago mayor. He is known among White House aides as simply "the fixer." (3)

One of Rouse's first pieces of advice to Obama was to warn him that a rule barring future lobbying for potential White House staffers might deter good candidates from applying.

And when plans, spearheaded by then-White House Counsel Gregory Craig, to close controversial terrorist detention camp Guantanamo Bay went awry, Rouse was called in to fix the problem.(7)

During the dustup over how to establish a new consumer watchdog required by the July 2010 regulatory reform bill, it was Rouse who crafted the compromise allowing liberal favorite Elizabeth Warren to emerge as a presidential adviser, avoiding Senate confirmation but influencing the formation of the body. (3)

Obama in the Senate

As soon as Obama was elected senator, Rouse went to work building the newcomer's "street cred." He and Obama decided to focus on Illinois issues that first year and show that he could be a team player in the Senate, while continuing to lay the groundwork for the future.

Defining and honing Obama's place in the Senate fell largely to Rouse.(4) "There was a reason why he was Tom Daschle's former chief of staff. He's one of the best staffers on the Hill, tremendously respected by all," Obama said.(8)

Rouse also helped Obama build bridges with conservative members of Congress, like Sens. Tom Coburn (R-Okla.) and Richard Lugar (R-Ind.). The Washington Post called him “a fixer steeped in the ways of a Washington that Obama has been both eager to learn and quick to publicly condemn,” and Obama said, “Pete’s very good at looking around the corners of decisions.”(9)

Rouse understands the Senate, and he understands the implications of each vote. When Obama thought about voting to confirm now-U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice John Roberts because he respected him, despite disagreeing with him on the issues, Rouse explained that the vote would haunt him in the future.

The Network

After three decades on the Hill, the list of Rouse’s friends in Washington is long and distinguished. But many of his top connections come from his 18 years in Sen. Tom Daschle’s office, ten of which were as Senate Democratic leader.

Obama communications director Dan Pfeiffer, a former communications director for Sen. Evan Bayh (D-Ind.), and Obama Deputy Campaign Manager Steve Hildebrand, a strategist who worked with Vice President Al Gore in 2000, both were friends from Rouse’s days with Daschle.

Rouse also worked as the chief of staff for Senate Majority Whip Durbin when he was in the House.

RE: ARB Case No. 04-082
Newsome v. Mitchell, McNutt & Sams, P.A.

Request for Review of March 19, 2004, Decision Rendered by the United States Department of Labor – Wage and Hour Division, Jackson, Mississippi Office

Request for Department of Justice's Intervention/Participation in this Case

Dear Mr. Clement:

I am in receipt of The Administrative Review Board's ("ARB") Final Decision and Order entered on or about September 14, 2004, in this case. Enclosed, for your review, is a copy of same.

I am requesting your Agency's intervention/participation in this matter, in that I find that based upon the evidence in the record, federal officials' with the Wage and Hour Division ("WHD") and ARB actions may be unlawful. Moreover, done to obstruct justice, hinder the proceeding before it and deprive me rights secured under the United States Constitution and other laws governing said matters. Therefore, your agency's intervention/participation in this case is needed to insure that the proper laws are enforced and justice rendered to correct the wrongs and injustice complained of on this Appeal.

It is important to note that the ARB, first, attempted to assert that it did not have jurisdiction over matters requesting review of the United States Department of Labor – Wage and Hour Division, Jackson, Mississippi Office's decision entered on or about March 19, 2004. The ARB requested that I provide a response to its Order to Show Cause dated June 22, 2004, by July 6, 2004. I complied with said demands by the ARB and provided documentation to support the ARB's jurisdiction over this matter – in that the ARB attempted to mislead me and assert that under no circumstances did it have jurisdiction over this matter.

However, when such a frivolous argument by the ARB failed, on or about September 14, 2004, the ARB entered a Final Decision and Order advising the following:

> "In this case, Newsome appeals a decision issued by the Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division. The Secretary of Labor has delegated authority to the ARB to review final decisions of the Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division or an approved agent of the Administrator[2]"

fn. 2 states:

> The Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division did not sign the letter of which Newsome seeks review, nor does the letter purport to be a final decision of the Administrator. Given our conclusion that the ARB does not have jurisdiction of this case in any event, it is not necessary for us to determine whether the letter was a final decision by an authorized agent of the Administrator.

Copy attached hereto at p. 2.

The conclusion of the ARB is vague and appears to lack substance to support it. So, I conclude, that the ARB is not exercising jurisdiction over this matter – based on a mere technicality (Administrator did not sign March 19, 2004, letter containing the WHD's decision). Neither does the ARB make it clear whether or not the District Director – Billy R. Jones of the WHD, Jackson Mississippi Office – is an approved agent of the Administrator. Even if such technicality had merits, the record evidence will support that the Administrator for the WHD – Tammy D. McCuthen ("McCuthen) – was timely, properly and adequately placed on notice and/or informed of the WHD's handling of this matter. A courtesy copy of the Request for Review dated April 15, 2004, was submitted to McCuthen. Therefore, giving the Administrator/Acting Administrator of the WHD plenty of time to intervene and/or respond to this Appeal because no final decision has been entered. Thus, it is safe to conclude the March 19, 2004, decision by the WHD is amendable. Rather than create a trail of bread crumbs leading to this conclusion, all the ARB had to do was advise Newsome that the WHD has failed to comply with the laws governing said matters – when the WHD failed to enter a Final Decision in compliance with the laws. Moreover, as requested by Newsome, all the ARB had to do was forward information onto the Administrator/Acting Administrator for the WHD as requested by Newsome in her April 15, 2004, letter submitting Request for Review.

It is important to note that I submitted my Request for Review of March 19, 2004, Decision Rendered by the United States Department of Labor – Wage and Hour Division, Jackson, Mississippi Office ("Request for Review"), on or about April 15, 2004.

This matter has been before the United States Department of Labor since about February 11, 2004. It is now September, approximately seven months later, and neither the ARB or Wage and Hour Division's Administrator, Tammy D. McCuthen, have addressed the issues raised in my Request for Review dated April 15, 2004. It has almost been a year that my employer, Mitchell, McNutt & Sams, P.A. has not paid me in compliance with the FLSA.

You will see from the record evidence in the ARB's handling of this matter, that the following persons have been notified and/or are aware of this matter brought before the ARB by myself:

Associate Solicitor
Division of Fair Labor Standards
U.S. Department of Labor

yet, to date, neither have come forth on its own to correct the wrongs and unlawful practices of Mitchell, McNutt & Sams, P.A.

Therefore, I am requesting that your Agency/Department get involved in this matter, and am requesting that your Agency/Department require the Administrator – Tammy D. McCuthen or Acting Administrator, Alfred Robinson –provide written responses to the Request for Review, and the 26 Issues raised therein, submitted to their Agency's attention via copy in April, 2004.

Mr. Clement, because of the procrastination and needless delay by the WHD and ARB, I hope you will agree that requesting that the Administrator and/or Acting Administrator for the WHD produce written responses to the Issues raised in Request for Review and the Request for Review itself by October 12, 2004*, is reasonable*.

There are approximately 26 numbered Issues raised in the Request for Review. Therefore, as a matter of law, I am requesting the Administrator/Acting Administrator for the Wage and Hour Division provide me with written responses to the Issues raised in my Request for Review and all supporting evidence the Administrator/Acting Administrator relied upon to derive their decision(s)/conclusion(s) on each. A COPY OF THE REQUEST FOR REVIEW (Brief Only)[1] is attached hereto for your reference.

I hope and believe that you will find that based upon the evidence in the record of the WHD, said agency has failed to follow its own procedures governing said matters. Therefore, said failure may be challenged under the Administrative Procedure Act. – See pp. 39 thru 42 of the Request for Review attached hereto.

Should you have further questions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,

Vogel Newsome
